Still More Hauptmann
Watch the Diesel
Happy, and Don't Know It
Indifferent to Death

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1935, by King Features Syndicate Inc., International Copyright and all other rights reserved.)

YOUNG GENTLEMEN reporters, old gentlemen editors, are inventing new Hauptmann theories, including the theory that he had an accomplice, but no, not to save his life; not to win heaven itself, would he reveal the name of that accomplice.

AN IMAGINATIVE Hauptmann lawyer thinks 1,000,000 Americans will contribute to a fund to fight for Hauptmann's release. Some think the number would be fewer than 1,000,000. Hauptmann is moved to a death cell in Trenton state prison. No secrecy was necessary, for as Al Capone said, "the man who committed that kidnaping belongs to no regular mob." With no regular mob, there is nobody to interfere with your death cell trip.

PENNSYLVANIA would make "death mandatory" for kidnaping, with extortion. If they don't "seek to extort money or other valuables, it isn't death" which seems to attach excessive importance to "money or other valuables."

WATCH DIESEL ENGINES, on the ground, in the air.

Dave Evans, racing driver, drove a Diesel automobile faster than one hundred and twenty-five miles an hour, at Daytona, Fla., Friday. Airplanes with Diesel engines will take passengers from the Atlantic to the Pacific between breakfast and supper for less than ten dollars apiece soon. Write that down.

JAMES A MOFFETT, federal housing administrator, says the country is out of the depression but does not know it. In the west he "found business conditions definitely improved. Los Angeles alone has pledged one hundred million dollars in new construction and modernization, involving all types of buildings." San Francisco likewise has embarked on an ambitious building program.

Now if ten or twelve million idle Americans can get back to jobs, even though they may "not know it" all will be well.

AN UNUSUAL MAN is Vincent Deleo, 30 years old, sitting in the death house of Sing Sing prison, soon to die, telling jailers, "I want no reprieve." He refuses to take the half hour exercise allowed to death house prisoners, say "I do not want any visitors, I do not want to write anything to anybody. I want no effort to keep me from the electric chair."

Deleo, who killed one of the keepers in Clinton prison, recalls grotesquely an old song: "Here's to the man who's content with his lot, who never goes sighing for what he has not."

This would be a dangerous world if more men were as indifferent to death as this man seems to be. The safety of the many is in the instinct of self preservation in the individual. Remove fear of death, and who would be safe?

STRIKES ARE STILL important in the news. Organized labor believes that the government is back of it, and considers the "employer always wrong, and the employe always right." It was once thought that employers provide jobs. That is archaic theory, now.

WILKES-BARRE, PA., reports two dynamitings, two men shot dead, two more seriously wounded. The dynamite blasts were not aimed at mine owners or mines but at the families of members of the union mine workers of America, a rival union, competing with the United Anthracite Miners of Pennsylvania.

The dynamite tore away porches and front doors of homes, killed no one. The dead were shot.

CORPSE OF MISSING CHILD DISCOVERED

JEFFERSON, Ohio, Feb. 16—(AP)—A widespread search for three-year-old Rita Margaret Lent ended today with the finding of her body in a muddy country lane a mile and a half from her home

A boy, Everett Gosnell, 16, came upon the decomposed body as he was making his way to a wood-cutting camp.

Last November Rita wandered away from the farm home of her mother, Mrs. Oliva Lent, 34, accompanied by a police dog.

Deputy Sheriff Roy Ritter said the child appeared to have been dead about six weeks.

The body was removed to Jefferson for an autopsy.

Those who viewed the body said they could not discover traces of violence.

The mother was brought to Jefferson for questioning. She opened up and discussed the case in an analytical manner.

"The child was kidnaped," Mrs. Lent said. "There is no doubt that Rita was kidnapped and placed there."

EXPERT WITNESS' IDEAS BANNED AT KENNAMER TRIAL

EX-JUDGE ON STAND

Testifies To Three Acts Of Irrationality On Boy's Part

PAWNEE, Okla., Feb. 16—(AP)—State's attorneys succeeded today in blocking expert testimony that 19-year-old Phil Kennamer was insane when he killed John F. Gorrell, Jr., 23, at Tulsa on the stormy night of last Thanksgiving.

Dr. Karl A. Menninger, Topeka, Kan, psychiatrist, qualified as an expert on mental ills. Then he listened for 40 minutes to a summary of the strange life, words and deeds of the federal judge's son, ending with the question:

"Now, doctor, taking these facts into consideration in addition to your own information, would you say the defendant was rational or irrational?"

Before the alienist could say "yes" or "no," J. Berry King, former state's attorney general, objected. He argued there was much in the involved hypothetical question, propounded by Defense Attorney A. Flint Moss, which should be stricken. Other matters, such as Kennamer's drinking, should be included, he added.

For three hours opposing counsel dissected and revised the question. Judge Thurman Hurst reserved decision over the week-end.

Upon reopening of court, Charles W. Mason, who was chief justice of the Oklahoma supreme court when the defendant's father, Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer of Tulsa, was a member, testified briefly he believed Phil was irrational. He embarrassedly admitted on cross-examination that "probably" he would not have appeared to testify if young Kennamer "hadn't killed this boy."

Kennamer, admitting the slaying, claims he shot Gorrell in self-defense after frustrating an extortion plot he claims Gorrell had aimed at 19-year-old Virginia Wilcox, heiress to an Oklahoma oil fortune. His at-

CHANGE IS MADE AT WORK OFFICE

C. B. Love Is Transferred Here To Replace Julius Kahn

Another change in the personnel of the district office here of the Louisiana state employment service was announced Saturday, following the announcement Friday that R. E. Young of Bastrop had replaced J. W. Worthington as district manager. The other change was that in which C. B. Love was transferred here from the local office at Columbia to replace Julius Kahn, who is no longer connected with the office. He will fill the position of interviewer.

H. R. Bishop, state supervisor, was in Monroe Saturday and is expected to be here several days in connection with changes that have been made in the office.

Mr. Young, who will make Monroe his home, moved his family here from Bastrop Saturday. He is by no means a stranger in Monroe, as his father, R. L. Young, paving contractor, formerly lived here. For three years Mr. Young was a teacher in the high school at Calhoun, leaving that position in 1928. Later he became associated with his father in his work as paving contractor. For the last 15 months he had been connected with the Louisiana state employment service office at Bastrop.

Mr. Worthington has taken Mr. Young's place as manager of the office at Bastrop. The changes which brought Mr. Young and Mr. Love

Supreme Court Is Expected To Report On Gold Decision Monday; Capital City Tense

High Judges Make No Announcement Saturday Concerning Plans

STOCK MARTS READY

Attorney General Cancels Rail Reservations For Florida

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—(AP)—The national capitol tonight keyed itself up to a suspense-filled weekend firmly convinced that the long-awaited supreme court gold decision will be handed down on Monday.

The last two Saturdays had brought announcement that the verdict would not come on the following Monday opinion days. Today, the court departed from that newly established precedent. It met, consulted, and left the capitol without authorizing a statement of any kind.

The absence of what had thus become a customary announcement was quickly interpreted as meaning the decision would surely come on Monday.

This belief had root in official quarters also. Attorney General Cummings cancelled railroad reservations for Florida late today. He had planned to leave tomorrow for Palm Beach for a brief vacation but upon learning that no announcement on the cases had been made he quickly changed his plans.

In the business world, too, preparations were based upon the expectation of a Monday opinion. The governors of the New York stock exchange were advised to hold themselves in readiness for a hurry-call meeting before the market opens.

There has been much talk of closing the exchange when the verdict is announced so that traders may analyze the opinion and avoid hysterical deal-

Two Men Sentenced To Death In India's 'Germ Murder' Case

ALIPORE, India, Feb. 16—(AP)—India's "germ murder" case—the strangest in the country's legal history—ended today as two of the four defendants were sentenced to death.

The two convicted included the step-brother of the dead man and one of three doctors charged with conspiring to murder him through the injection of plague germs. The other two doctors were acquitted.

The murder, termed by the presiding judge "one of the most cold-blooded he had ever come across, occurred last year. Amarendra Nath Pandey, wealthy landowner, was walking along a street on his way home. Suddenly he felt the sharp stab of the injection. He cried out that he had been poisoned. His assailant fled.

The man's step-brother, Benoyendra Nath Pandey, took him under his care. Septic pneumonia developed, and he died.

Dr. Taranath Bhattachrya, who was accused of securing the plague bacilli from a hospital in Bombay was the other man sentenced to death.

OFFICER THINKS FAILURE OF FIN CAUSED TRAGEDY

Another Witness Says Macon 'Exploded Like A Paper Sack'

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16—(AP)—Lieut. Calvin M. Bolster, repairs officer of the Macon, told a naval court of inquiry today he believed failure of the upper fin caused the giant dirigible to plunge into the Pacific Tuesday with a loss of two lives.

"My opinion," he said, "is that failure of the fin involves failure of the fin structure and the structure of the ship where the fin was supported."

The Macon "exploded like a paper sack," another witness said, and the rudderman and elevator man aboard declared the wheels were twisted from their control when the dirigible rolled.

Bolster testified yesterday the Macon narrowly escaped disaster while flying over Texas last year, and added that repairs to sheared off girders had not been fully completed when it began its fatal trip. He explained the bureau of aeronautics had ordered they should not interfere with flight schedules.

Rear Admiral Orin G. Murfin, a member of the inquiry board, asked: "Do you consider the ship was structurally safer on her last flight than at the time of her delivery to the government?"

"The reinforcements had added strength," Bolster said, "and it was perfectly possible for the fin structure to fail and leave the hull intact."

The dirigible's skipper, Lieut. Commander H. V. Wiley, asked many questions.

"If a sizeable piece of fabric was torn from the side of the upper fin, would it not probably lead to part of the fabric wrapping in the girder work and tear it out while the ship was making 63 knots?" Wiley asked.

"If a large piece of the fabric left the fin it probably would take part of the fin with it," Bolster answered. "However, I do not believe such a casualty would have resulted in the larger casualty."

Wiley asked whether, if once a hole started in the fin fabric, it was not liable to progress rapidly.

"A fin is secured," said Bolster "and the unsupported part is rather small. I would expect the fabric to take part of the structure with it."

Bolster said a fin had been carried

SICARD OVERPASS WORK WILL START

Construction May Begin This Week; Equipment Is On Hand

Several carloads of equipment to be used in constructing the overpass over the Missouri Pacific railroad at Sicard have been placed on the ground by representatives of Robinson and Young of Baton Rouge, contractors, and it is expected that work on this project will get under way this week. A representative of the concern said the firm would be ready to start work as soon as a work order is received.

This job calls for 10 reinforced concrete deck girder spans, each 38 feet nine inches long; two reinforced deck girder spans, each 38 feet five inches long, all supported on reinforced concrete bents. The overpass will be 645 feet long and 24 feet wide and there will be 2,963.94 feet of roadway embankment approaches, with concrete pavement and a 2,700-foot section of roadway with washed gravel and local binder surfacing.

Under the contract for this job, skilled laborers must not be paid less than 75 cents an hour, intermediate laborers not less than 45 cents an hour and unskilled laborers not less than 45 cents an hour.

The same requirement as to the wage scale to be paid to workmen applies on the contract for widening and extending Louisville avenue and the contract for constructing 1 78 miles of paved road leading to Brown Paper mill.

Contract for the Louisville avenue job was let some time ago to Long, Sullivan and Haggerty of Bessemer, Ala. This firm has not yet begun moving in its machinery. The section of road to be constructed as an approach to the bridge will begin at the east end of the bridge and will extend eastward 2,835 miles, connecting with the Dixie-Overland highway near Northeast Center of Louisiana State university. It will be concrete paving and 41 feet wide.

Contract for paving Brown Paper mill road was let Thursday to Central Construction company of Monroe, which is already engaged in completing concrete work on the bridge. Good progress is being made on this job.

Judge Rules Boys Entitled To Buried Gold They Found

BALTIMORE, Feb. 16—(AP)—Two members of poor families, were awarded a $28,000 gold hoard today but with all their wealth they could use none of it to buy even the trimmings for tomorrow's dinner.

Judge Eugene O'Dunne decreed that "finders are keepers" in ruling the treasure—3,558 gold coins—belonged to Henry Grob and Theodore Jones, who unearthed it in the cellar of the Jones home.

Actual possession of the gold must await a formal order, "subject to appeal." If some of several disappointed claimants to the rich find should appeal—as two have indicated they will—the small fortune may remain in escrow for some time.

The boys, 16-year-old sons of families on relief rolls, discovered an old copper pot full of gold last August while digging in the cellar for a place to hide dues from members of their club.

The coins, dated from 1834 to 1858, have a face value of $11,427.50, but the federal government calculated their potential numismatic value at $28,672.

Henry said he was going to "get my mother a home of her own," and Theodore chimed in, "that's the right idea. I'm going to follow Henry." First, though, said Theodore, he was going to notify the relief workers to stop calling.

Henry's mother, Mrs. Ruth Grob, said she was "sick lying on the couch" when she heard about the judge's decision—"but I got well pretty quick. I feel like I could bust out crying."

She said she hoped to buy a little home, carefully invest the rest of her son's share of the gold and see that he got a college education. Similar plans were outlined by Theodore's mother, Mrs. Bessie Jones.

Judge O'Dunne turned down the claims of several groups who contended their ancestors buried the treasure and finally that of the owners of the property on which it was found—Mrs. Elizabeth H. French and Miss Mary P. B. Findlay.

ICKES ACTS QUICKLY TO GET FARLEY DATA

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Prompt response to the senate's request for any available information on Postmaster General Farley's business activities was promised today by Secretary Ickes.

"We are combing the files," he said, adding he would send the data "as soon as I get the papers assembled." He acknowledged receipt of the senate request late in the day.

After a morning conference with President Roosevelt he said the subject had not been discussed at the White House.

The senate asked for the information after Senator Long had conducted a four-day campaign to have Farley's affairs examined.

Ickes and Louis R. Glavis, his detective chief, worked late to gather material.

Noted Aviators Hope To Reach Goal Within Sixty-Five Hours

PORT ETIENNE, RIO DE ORO, West Africa, Feb. 17—(Sunday)—(AP)—The airplane "Joseph Lebrix," which two Frenchmen are flying to South America for a distance record, passed over Port Etienne at 12:13 a. m. today (7:13 p. m. Saturday Eastern Standard time) and headed out over the open Atlantic.

ISTRES, France, Feb. 16—(AP)—Two French veterans of long distance flight, Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi, roared out over the south Atlantic today in quest of another non-stop record to better the one they already hold.

Taking off at 6:36 a.m. (1:36 a.m. E.S.T.) today in their famed plane, the "Joseph LeBrix" in which they flew from New York to Syria in 1933, Codos and Rossi, on the basis of their hourly radio bulletins, appeared to be averaging about 105 miles an hour

Their goal was Buenos Aires, 6,875

HAMILTON MAKES RAID ON ARMORY AT TEXAS TOWN

New Forays Feared After Bandit Gets Ammunition Supply

BEAUMONT, Texas, Feb. 16—(AP)—New gunning forays on small-town banks were feared through the southwest tonight as a result of an ammunition robbery at a national guard armory here today by the range country's new No. 1 bad man—22-year-old Raymond Hamilton.

The one-time associate of Clyde Barrow—since slain with his cigar-smoking girl friend, Bonnie Parker—seized eight sub-machine guns and 3,600 rounds of ammunition, aided by a confederate.

Fingerprints positively identified Hamilton.

Under sentence to die for killing a prison guard, the fugitive was believed to have found his ammunition running low as a result of a police trap which resulted in capture of his brother, Floyd.

G. T. Owens, elderly armory caretaker, said two men, who "threatened to kill me if I cried out," blindfolded him when he discovered them "in the ammunition pile." Shown a picture of Hamilton, the caretaker said one of the pair was the outlaw.

Hamilton has been regarded as a growing menace in the southwest since police guns put an end to such predecessors in the No. 1 bad man role as Barrow, Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd and Wilbur Underhill. Descriptions of the raiders convinced officers that Hamilton has dyed his hair and made other attempts to change his appearance.

He is wanted for slaying Major Crowson, a guard, in a bloody break from Eastham state prison farm.

RAYVILLE MAN TRIES TO TAKE OWN LIFE

SHREVEPORT, La., Feb. 16—(AP)—James C. Jacobus, 28, Rayville newlywed, is near death in Charity hospital here today as an anti-climax to a month which saw him married to Jane Starling, 28, unsuccessful in job hunting, thrown into jail on a bad check charge by his father-in-law, and finally an attempted suicide today.

Tearing a blanket to shreds Jacobus made a "rope" which he lengthened with a 30-inch piece of rope. With this tied securely about his neck he climbed to the top of his cell window in the Franklin parish jail and jumped.

The rope injured his spinal cord before it broke. The fall cut the man's forehead and may have fractured his skull.

3 NATIONS JOIN TO KEEP PEACE

LONDON, Feb. 16—(AP)—Britain, France and Italy have joined forces to keep Europe's peace until the return of confidence makes their policing unnecessary, authoritative circles disclosed today.

That, it was revealed, was the sole purpose in the Anglo-French accords drafted at London two weeks ago, to which Hitler was invited to adhere.

As the government studied Hitler's noncommittal reply to the proposals for an inclusive security pact to solve all Europe's trouble-fraught questions simultaneously, these sources figured Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald as the man who conceived the scheme, and to Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, as the man who executed it.

Convicts Boo Hauptmann As He Enters Prison; Governor Of Jersey Gets Threat Note

600 Prisoners Join In Hubbub Started By Three Inmates

ORDER IS RESTORED

State's Chief Executive Warned To Commute Death Sentence

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 16—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was booed by inmates of the New Jersey state prison today as he entered the death house to await the outcome of efforts by his attorneys to save him from the electric chair.

The German carpenter, who entered the prison still protesting he was innocent of any part in the kidnaping and murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., and who heard some one in the crowd answer, "We know you're innocent, Bruno," found the prison atmosphere tense.

Three prisoners saw him as he was being examined in a small room off the center corridor and started to boo. Immediately 600 in the mess hall joined in. It was several minutes before guards restored order. The three were taken to their cells and will be disciplined, Colonel George L. Selby, acting principal keeper, said.

After being led to the death house, Hauptmann, who has said he would go to the chair "like a man," made three requests. He asked for a Bible, and a new one was given him. He asked for a picture of his wife and baby, and was informed he could have it. He asked for a box of cigars given him by Sheriff John H. Curtiss of Hunterdon county, but was promised another box instead.

Several hours after the prison doors closed behind Hauptmann at 10:33 a.m., Governor Harold G. Hoffman made public a letter threatening death to himself, Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, and the jurors who found Hauptmann guilty of murder in the first degree. The letter, post-

L. E. THOMAS DIES AT NEW ORLEANS

Former Shreveport Mayor Succumbs After Extended Illness

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 16—(AP)—Lee Emmett Thomas, 68-year-old former mayor of Shreveport, grand secretary of the Grand lodge of Louisiana Masons and for years a leading state politician, died at his residence here early today after several months of illness. His body was taken to his former home in Shreveport for funeral services.

Mr. Thomas was a former state legislator, representing Caddo parish in the house of representatives from 1908 to 1916, four years of which he served as speaker of the house.

In 1903 he was appointed bank examiner by Governor Heard and served four years. He organized the Continental Bank and Trust company of Shreveport and was its president until 1917 when he received another appointment, chairman of the state tax commission. In 1919 he became state bank commissioner and served in that capacity for several years.

Mr. Thomas was elected mayor of Shreveport in 1922. He served a four-year term and was re-elected in 1926, serving until 1930 when he retured from office.

Mr. Thomas served in many high offices of the Masons in Louisiana. His first election in the order was to the office of senior warden in 1905. He was promoted to grand master in 1907 and was re-elected for another term in 1909.

His official capacity through the Masonic ranks was widespread. In 113 he was invested as knight commander of the court of honor and was cor-

Townsend Plan Is Ridiculed By Senators And Spectators

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—(AP)—Grim and unsmiling, the author of the Townsend $200 a month pension plan sought for two hours today to convince the senate finance committee that his idea was the cure for the economic ills of the country.

Townsend faced a semi-circle of hostile senators and tried to answer their questions, some serious and others obviously designed to ridicule his plan. Senators and spectators showed by frequent laughter they enjoyed the proceedings, but Townsend never smiled.

At the conclusion, Chairman Harrison announced the committee would conclude its hearings on the administration's social security program next Wednesday and would try to frame a bill fair to all, but he warned the Californian it would not include old age pensions of $200 a month.

For a time the hearing was turned away from the merits of the plan and converted into an investigation of the organization built up to support it.

Townsend testified the organization has collected about $30,000 and spent around $45,000 and that he received $50 a week.

Senators argued that the plan would cost $24,000,000,000 a year and that the proposed two per cent "transactions tax" probably would leave a deficit of $19,000,000,000 a year.

A little impatiently, Townsend argued that 4,500,000 of the 10,000,000 people over 60 would have to give up jobs which would be available for the unemployed, that spending of the pensions would bring a wave of prosperity, and that this would give the theory of mass production a chance to operate, thus keeping down prices.

When the unfriendly senators became a little too persistent about the money, Townsend explained that the cost could be nothing like $24,000,000,000 at first, because it would take years to get all the aged on the pension rolls. He pointed out it that

ROGERS HAS HIS SAY

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 16—(Special.)—Wiley Post is leaving here any morning now on the most hazardous hop, yet the most beneficial to aviation, of any since Lindbergh. He is pioneering a new world, flying a long course at 35,000 feet was never attempted. Eight hours on oxygen is new. He drops his landing gear on leaving. He has to come in on (pardon the expression but it's all he has to land on) his "belly." His propeller spins lower down than the bottom of his plane; he has to stop it and get it exactly crossways before landing, or it will hit first and turn him a somersault. It's a real scientific flight; if it works everybody will fly up there. It's an old ship, five years old; he has flown it around the world twice, so a prayer, or at least a good wish, for Wiley.

Yours,

Will Rogers

SPY PLOT SHOCKS GERMAN CAPITAL; WOMEN INVOLVED

Hitler May Decide Whether Three Persons Will Be Executed

BERLIN, Feb. 16—(AP)—A spy plot of sensational ramifications, said to involve two women, one of them of titled social prominence, and a Polish baron, all of them on trial for their lives, burst upon Berlin today and reverberated in the headquarters of the German army.

Although it was emphasized that no sentences have been passed, it was hinted from one source that Reichsfuehrer Hitler himself would decide whether the trio must face a firing squad.

The man being tried was officially described as Baron George Sosnowsky, accused of ferreting out secrets in high Berlin society where he moved freely before his arrest about a year ago.

There were unconfirmed reports that Germany had offered to return him to Poland in exchange for some German spy there, but that the accused man had declined. He was reported to be accused of furnishing military secrets to Poland, and one reliable quarter expressed the opinion that government authorities had refused to announce the progress of the trial because of fear of upsetting German-Polish relations.

One of the women who appeared before the high people's court in Berlin was said to be a Berlin baroness of great social prominence and personal beauty.

Asked about published reports that she was identified as the Baroness Benita von Berg, a spokesman for the propaganda ministry replied that "the name von Berg has often been heard in this ministry, but I can't say whether she is involved."

TROUBLE IN VIENNA

VIENNA, Feb. 16—(AP)—Shots rang out in the capital tonight in the Floridsdorf district where the government dropped artillery bombardments a year ago in the Socialist civil war.

A group of Socialist youths demonstrating in defiance of government orders opened fire when they were attacked by police. The law forces immediately returned the fire and arrested eight persons.

IL DUCE BREAKS HIS SILENCE ON ETHIOPIAN MOVE

Urges All Mobilized Troops To Be Ready For Any Eventuality

FIRST SOLDIERS SAIL

Mussolini's Council Approves Measure For 'Peace Security'

ROME, Feb. 16—(AP)—Premier Mussolini broke his silence on the Ethiopian controversy tonight by urging all mobilized Italians to "be ready for any eventuality."

In an address to the Fascist grand council Il Duce for the first time made a definite reference to a "front." He congratulated the "virility of the men leaving for the African front."

His statement, to which deep significance was attached, was made several hours after the first detachments of Italian troops sailed for Africa.

Mussolini's council in a four-hour session approved his measure "for the security of peace" in east African possessions and those considered necessary "for control over Italian interests."

Thunderous cheers greeted the dictator's statement that 70,000 blackshirts have volunteered for service in east Africa since February 1 and also thousands of other citizens and war veterans.

The grand council's communique said certain types of workers must hold themselves in readiness for military discipline and for organization at a moment's notice.

Rome was excited and buzzed with talk of Mussolini's characteristically militant speech. A statement from him had been eagerly awaited for days.

A battalion of blackshirts embarked at Naples this afternoon, it was officially revealed, after being reviewed by Crown Prince Umberto. Il Duce reviewed two other battalions preparatory to their departure for Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

In the face of the embarkation of the Italian troops, Negradas Yesus, Ethiopian charge de'affairs, through whom Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has stoutly disclaimed responsibility for Italio-Ethiopian hostilities along the border, declared.

"We will defend our homes with our lives. If Italy comes against us, her blood will be on her own head."

While hundreds of troops moved into Rome from northern points, wearing new uniforms and ordinary trench caps but dangling pith helmets for tropical wear at their backs, Mussolini, in company with Fiscist and army officials, gave his several thousand militiamen an inspection before their departure.

Newspapermen and photographers were barred from the review, which took place in the grenadiers' barracks here, but the official statement said Il Duce addressed the troops briefly. He was cheered as he departed, it said.

The militiamen, who volunteered for service in Eritrea and Somaliland, leave this evening for Sicily whence they will sail for Africa.

Hundreds of reservists, meanwhile, were receiving mobilization cards instructing them to hold themselves in readiness for mobilization orders, but an official explained that this is an automatic procedure following the first mobilization.

Reports said Emperor Haile Selassie had sent Mussolini still another memorandum denying Italy's charges that Ethiopians were the aggressors along the African border, but this was not confirmed.

SNOW IS REPORTED AT ARKANSAS TOWN

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 16—(AP)—The south took a look at the weather charts and figured spring had practically arrived today although snow flurries in Arkansas belied the conclusion.

Most of the south Atlantic states, however, experienced balmy weather with partly cloudy skies and the general forecast was for a little drop in temperature over the weekend with fair and warmer weather beginning Monday or Tuesday.

New Orleans had a temperature range of 60 to 78 degrees and Memphis from 42 to 58. Atlanta's mercury rose to 66 degrees and Birmingham's to 68. Asheville, N. C., had a range of 36 to 64.

Little Rock, Ark., noted a minimum of 44 and maximum of 56 but situation was different in Fayetteville, Ark., where the mercury dropped to 32 and snow flurries were experienced.

WORK BILL FACES WAGE SCALE FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—(AP)—A plea to the senate today by William Green for the adoption of the McCarran prevailing wage amendment convinced some administration leaders that the wage proposal would give the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill its severest test on the senate floor.

Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, wrote each senator, pleading for the defeat of the administration's compromise plan which would give the president authority to fix relief wages.

The McCarran amendment would direct that the wages prevailing in localities be paid on all work relief projects.

Hauptmann is moved to a death cell in Trenton state prison. No secrecy was necessary, for as Al Capone said, "the man who committed that kidnaping belongs to no regular mob." With no regular mob, there is nobody to interfere with your death cell trip.

PENNSYLVANIA would make "death mandatory" for kidnaping, with extortion. If they don't "seek to extort money or other valuables, it isn't death" which seems to attach excessive importance to "money or other valuables."

WATCH DIESEL ENGINES, on the round, in the air.

Dave Evans, racing driver, drove a Diesel automobile faster than one hundred and twenty-five miles an hour, at Daytona, Fla., Friday. Airplanes with Diesel engines will take passengers from the Atlantic to the Pacific between breakfast and supper for less than ten dollars apiece soon. Write that down.

JAMES A. MOFFETT, federal housing administrator, says the country is out of the depression but does not know it. In the west it "found business conditions definitely improved. Los Angeles alone has pledged one hundred million dollars in new construction and modernization, involving all types of buildings." San Francisco likewise has embarked on an ambitious building program.

Now if ten or twelve million idle Americans can get back to jobs, even though they may "not know it" all will be well.

AN UNUSUAL MAN is Vincent Deleo, 30 years old, sitting in the death house of Sing Sing prison, soon to die, telling jailers, "I want no reprieve." He refuses to take the half hour exercise allowed to death house prisoners, say "I do not want any visitors, I do not want to write anything to anybody. I want no effort to keep me from the electric chair."

Deleo, who killed one of the keepers in Clinton prison, recalls grotesquely an old song: "Here's to the man who's content with his lot, who never goes sighing for what he has not."

This would be a dangerous world if more men were an indifferent to death as this man seems to be. The safety of the many is in the instinct of self preservation in the individual. Remove fear of death, and who would be safe?

STRIKES ARE STILL important in the news. Organized labor believes that the government is back of it, and considers the "employer always wrong, and the employe always right." It was once thought that employers provide jobs. That is archaic theory, now.

WILKES-BARRE, PA., reports two dynamitings, two men shot dead, two more seriously wounded. The dynamite blasts were not aimed at mine owners or mines but at the families of members of the union mine workers of America, a rival union, competing with the United Anthracite Miners of Pennsylvania.

The dynamite tore away porches and front doors of homes, killed no one. The dead were shot.

CORPSE OF MISSING CHILD DISCOVERED

JEFFERSON, Ohio, Feb. 16.—(AP)—A widespread search for three-year-old Rita Margaret Lent ended today with the finding of her body in a muddy country lane a mile and a half from her home.

A boy, Everett Gosnell, 16, came upon the decomposed body as he was making his way to a wood-cutting camp.

Last November Rita wandered away from the farm home of her mother, Mrs. Oliva Lent, 34, accompanied by her police dog.

Deputy Sheriff Roy Ritter said the child apparently had been dead about six weeks.

The body was removed to Jefferson for an autopsy.

Those who viewed the body said they discovered no evidence of violence.

The mother was brought to Jefferson for questioning. She wept and discussed the case in an analytical manner.

"The child was kidnaped," Mrs. Lent said. "There is no doubt that Rita was kidnaped and placed there."

EXPERT WITNESS' IDEAS BANNED AT KENNAMER TRIAL

EX-JUDGE ON STAND

Testifies To Three Acts Of Irrationality On Boy's Part

PAWNEE, Okla., Feb. 16.—(AP)—State's attorneys succeeded today in blocking expert testimony that 19-year-old Phil Kennamer was insane when he killed John F. Gorrell, Jr., 23, at Tulsa on the stormy night of last Thanksgiving.

Dr. Karl A. Menninger, Topeka, Kan, psychiatrist, qualified as an expert on mental ills. Then he listened for 40 minutes to a summary of the strange life, words and deeds of the federal judge's son, ending with the question:

"Now, doctor, taking these facts into consideration in addition to your own information, would you say the defendant was rational or irrational?"

Before the alienist could say "yes" or "no," J. Berry King, former state's attorney general, objected. He argued there was much in the involved hypothetical question, propounded by Defense Attorney A. Flint Moss, which should be stricken. Other matters, such as Kennamer's drinking, should be included, he added.

For three hours opposing counsel dissected and revised the question. Judge Thurman Hurst reserved decision over the week-end.

Upon reopening of court, Charles W. Mason, who was chief justice of the Oklahoma supreme court when the defendant's father, Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer of Tulsa, was a member, testified briefly he believed Phil was irrational. He embarrassedly admitted on cross-examination that "probably" he would not have appeared to testify if young Kennamer "hadn't killed this boy."

Kennamer, admitting the slaying, claims he shot Gorrell in self-defense after frustrating an extortion plot he claims Gorrell had aimed at 19-year-old Virginia Wilcox, heiress to an Oklahoma oil fortune. His at-

CHANGE IS MADE AT WORK OFFICE

C. B. Love Is Transferred Here To Replace Julius Kahn

Another change in the personnel of the district office here of the Louisiana state employment service was announced Saturday, following the announcement Friday that R. E. Young of Bastrop had replaced J. W. Worthington as district manager. The other change was that in which C. B. Love was transferred here from the local office at Columbia to replace Julius Kahn, who is no longer connected with the office. He will fill the position of interviewer.

H. R. Bishop, state supervisor, was in Monroe Saturday and is expected to be here several days in connection with changes that have been made in the office.

Mr. Young, who will make Monroe his home, moved his family here from Bastrop Saturday. He is by no means a stranger in Monroe, as his father, R. L. Young, paving contractor, formerly lived here. For three years Mr. Young was a teacher in the high school at Calhoun, leaving that position in 1928. Later he became associated with his father in his work as paving contractor. For the last 15 months he had been connected with the Louisiana state employment service office at Bastrop.

Mr. Worthington has taken Mr. Young's place as manager of the office at Bastrop. The changes which brought Mr. Young and Mr. Love

Supreme Court Is Expected To Report On Gold Decision Monday; Capital City Tense

STOCK MARTS READY

Attorney General Cancels Rail Reservations For Florida

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The national capitol tonight keyed itself up to a suspense-filled weekend firmly convinced that the long-awaited supreme court gold decision will be handed down on Monday.

The last two Saturdays had brought announcement that the verdict would not come on the following Monday opinion days. Today, the court departed from that newly established precedent. It met, consulted, and left the capitol without authorizing a statement of any kind.

The absence of what had thus become a customary announcement was quickly interpreted as meaning the decision would surely come on Monday.

This belief had root in official quarters also. Attorney General Cummings cancelled railroad reservations for Florida late today. He had planned to leave tomorrow for Palm Beach for a brief vacation but upon learning that no announcement on the cases had been made he quickly changed his plans.

In the business world, too, preparations were based upon the expectation of a Monday opinion. The governors of the New York stock exchange were advised to hold themselves in readiness for a hurry-call meeting before the market opens.

There has been much talk of closing the exchange when the verdict is announced so that traders may analyze the opinion and avoid hysterical deal-

Two Men Sentenced To Death In India's 'Germ Murder' Case

ALIPORE, India, Feb. 16.—(AP)—India's "germ murder" case—the strangest in the country's legal history—ended today as two of the four defendants were sentenced to death.

The two convicted included the step-brother of the dead man and one of three doctors charged with conspiring to murder him through the injection of plague germs. The other two doctors were acquitted.

The murder, termed by the presiding judge "one of the most cold-blooded he had ever come across, occurred last year. Amarendra Nath Pandey, wealthy landowner, was walking along a street on his way home. Suddenly he felt the sharp stab of the injection. He cried out that he had been poisoned. His assailant fled.

The man's step-brother, Benoyendra Nath Pandey, took him under his care. Septic pneumonia developed, and he died.

Dr. Taranath Bhattachra, who was accused of securing the plague bacilli from a hospital in Bombay, was the other man sentenced to death.

OFFICER THINKS FAILURE OF FIN CAUSED TRAGEDY

Another Witness Says Macon 'Exploded Like A Paper Sack'

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Lieut. Calvin M. Bolster, repairs officer of the Macon, told a naval court of inquiry today he believed failure of the upper fin caused the giant dirigible to plunge into the Pacific Tuesday with a loss of two lives.

"My opinion," he said, "is that failure of the fin involves failure of the fin structure and the structure of the ship where the fin was supported."

The Macon "exploded like a paper sack," another witness said, and the rudderman and elevator man aboard declared for wheels were twisted from their control when the dirigible rolled.

Bolster testified yesterday the Macon narrowly escaped disaster while flying over Texas last year, and added that repairs to sheared off girders had not been fully completed when it began its fatal trip. He explained the bureau of aeronautics had ordered they should not interfere with flight schedules.

Rear Admiral Orin G. Murfin, a member of the inquiry board, asked: "Do you consider the ship was structurally safer on her last flight than at the time of her delivery to the government?"

"The reinforcements had added strength," Bolster said, "and it was perfectly possible for the structure to fail and leave the hull intact."

The dirigible's skipper, Lieut. Commander H. V. Wiley, asked many questions.

"If a sizeable piece of fabric was torn from the side of the upper fin, would it not probably lead to part of the fabric wrapping in the girder work and tear it out while the ship was making 63 knots?" Wiley asked.

"If a large piece of the fabric left the fin it might conceivably take part of the fin with it," Bolster answered. "However, I do not believe such a casualty would have resulted in the larger casualty."

Wiley asked whether, if once a hole started in the fin fabric, it was not liable to progress rapidly.

"A fin is secured," said Bolster, "and the unsupported part is rather small. I would expect the fabric to take part of the structure with it."

Bolster said a fin had been carried

SICARD OVERPASS WORK WILL START

Construction May Begin This Week; Equipment Is On Hand

Several carloads of equipment to be used in constructing the overpass over the Missouri Pacific railroad at Sicard have been placed on the ground by representatives of Robinson and Young of Baton Rouge, contractors, and it is expected that work on this project will get under way this week. A representative of the concern said the firm would be ready to start work as soon as a work order is received.

This job calls for 10 reinforced concrete deck girder spans, each 38 feet nine inches long, two reinforced deck girder spans, each 38 feet five inches long, all supported on reinforced concrete bents. The overpass will be 645 feet long and 24 feet wide and will provide for 2,963.94 feet of roadway embankment approaches, with concrete pavement and a 2,700-foot section of roadway with washed gravel and local binder surfacing.

Under the contract for this job, skilled laborers must not be paid less than 75 cents an hour, intermediate laborers not less than 45 cents an hour and unskilled laborers not less than 45 cents an hour.

The same requirement as to the wage scale to be paid to workmen applies on the contract for widening and extending Louisville avenue and on the contract for building 1.78 miles of paved road leading to Brown Paper mill.

Contract for the Louisville avenue job was let some time ago to Long, Sullivan and Haggerty of Bessemer, Ala. This firm has not yet begun moving in its machinery. The section of road to be constructed is an approach to the bridge will begin at the east end of the bridge and will extend eastward 2.835 miles, connecting with the Dixie-Overland highway near Northeast Center of Louisiana State university. It will be concrete paving and 41 feet wide.

Contract for paving Brown Paper mill road was let Thursday to Central Construction company of Monroe, which is already engaged in completing concrete work on the bridge. Good progress is being made on this job.

Codos And Rossi Seek Non-Stop Record On Buenos Aires Hop

IS 6,875-MILE TRIP

Noted Aviators Hope To Reach Goal Within Sixty-Five Hours

PORT ETIENNE, RIO DE ORO, West Africa, Feb. 17—(Sunday)—(AP)—The airplane "Joseph Lebrix," in which two Frenchmen are flying to South America for a distance record, passed over Port Etienne at 12:13 a. m. today (7:13 p. m. Saturday Eastern Standard time) and headed out over the open Atlantic.

ISTRES, France, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Two French veterans of long distance flight, Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi, roared out over the south Atlantic today in quest of another non-stop record to better the one they already hold.

Taking off at 6:36 a.m. (1:36 a.m. E.S.T.) today in their famed plane, the "Joseph LeBrix" in which they flew from New York to Syria in 1933, Codos and Rossi, on the basis of their hourly radio bulletins, appeared to be averaging about 165 miles an hour. Their goal was Buenos Aires, 6,875

New Forays Feared After Bandit Gets Ammunition Supply

BEAUMONT, Texas, Feb. 16.—(AP)—New gunning forays on small-town banks were feared through the southwest tonight as a result of an ammunition robbery at a national guard armory here today by the range country's new No. 1 bad man—22-year-old Raymond Hamilton.

The one-time associate of Clyde Barrow—since slain with his cigar-smoking girl friend, Bonnie Parker—seized eight sub-machine guns and 3,600 rounds of ammunition, aided by a confederate.

Fingerprints positively identified Hamilton.

Under sentence to die for killing a prison guard, the fugitive was believed to have found his ammunition running low as a result of a police trap which resulted in capture of his brother, Floyd.

G. T. Owens, elderly armory caretaker, said two men, who "threatened to kill me if I cried out," blindfolded him when he discovered them "in the ammunition pile." Shown a picture of Hamilton, the caretaker said one of the pair was the outlaw.

Hamilton has been regarded as a growing menace in the southwest since police guns put an end to such predecessors in the No. 1 bad man role as Barrow, Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd and Wilbur Underhill. Descriptions of the raiders convinced officers that Hamilton has dyed his hair and made other attempts to change his appearance.

He is wanted for slaying Major Crowson, a guard, in a bloody break from Eastham state prison farm.

RAYVILLE MAN TRIES TO TAKE OWN LIFE

SHREVEPORT, La., Feb. 16.—(AP)—James C. Jacobus, 28, Rayville newlywed, is near death in Charity hospital here today as an anti-climax to a month which saw him married to Jane Starling, 28, unsuccessful in job hunting, thrown into jail on a bad check complaint by his father-in-law, and finally an attempted suicide today.

Tearing a blanket to shreds Jacobus made a "rope" which he lengthened with a 30-inch piece of rope. With this tied securely about his neck he climbed to the top of his cell window in the Franklin parish jail and jumped.

The rope injured his spinal cord before it broke. The fall cut the man's forehead and may have fractured his skull.

Convicts Boo Hauptmann As He Enters Prison; Governor Of Jersey Gets Threat Note

600 Prisoners Join In Hubbub Started By Three Inmates

ORDER IS RESTORED

State's Chief Executive Warned To Commute Death Sentence

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was booed by inmates of the New Jersey state prison today as he entered the death house to await the outcome of efforts by his lawyers to save him from the electric chair.

The German carpenter, who entered the prison still protesting he was innocent of any part in the kidnaping and murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., and who heard some one in the crowd answer, "We know you're innocent, Bruno," found the prison atmosphere tense.

Three prisoners saw him as he was being examined in a small room off the center corridor and started to boo. Immediately 600 in the mess hall joined in. It was several minutes before guards restored order. The three were taken to their cells and will be disciplined, Colonel George L. Selby, acting principal keeper, said.

After being led to the death house, Hauptmann, who has said he would go to the chair "like a man," made three requests. He asked for a Bible, and a new one was given him. He asked for a picture of his wife and baby, and was informed he could have it. He asked for a box of cigars given him by Sheriff John H. Curtiss, of Hunterdon county, but was proffered another box instead.

Several hours after the prison doors closed behind Hauptmann at 10:33 a.m., Governor Harold G. Hoffman made public a letter threatening death to himself, Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, and the jurors who found Hauptmann guilty of murder in the first degree. The letter, post-

ROGERS HAS HIS SAY

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 16.—(Special.)—Wiley Post is leaving here any morning now on the most hazardous hop, yet the most beneficial to aviation, of any since Lindbergh. He is pioneering a new world, flying a long course at 35,000 feet was never attempted. Eight hours on oxygen is new. He drops his landing gear on leaving. He has to come in on (pardon the expression but it's all he has to land on) his "belly." His propeller spins lower down than the bottom of his plane; he has to stop it and get it exactly crossways before landing, or it will hit first and turn him a somersault. It's a real scientific flight; if it works everybody will fly up there. It's an old ship, five years old; he has flown it around the world twice, so a prayer, or at least a good wish, for Wiley.

Yours,

Will Rogers

L. E. THOMAS DIES AT NEW ORLEANS

Former Shreveport Mayor Succumbs After Extended Illness

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Lee Emmett Thomas, 68-year-old former mayor of Shreveport, grand secretary of the Grand lodge of Louisiana Masons and for years a leading state politician, died at his residence here early today after several months of illness. His body was taken to his former home in Shreveport for funeral services.

Mr. Thomas was a former state legislator, representing Caddo parish in the house of representatives from 1908 to 1916, four years of which he served as speaker of the house.

In 1903 he was appointed bank examiner by Governor Heard and served for four years. He organized the Continental Bank and Trust company of Shreveport and was its president until 1917 when he received another appointment, chairman of the state tax commission. In 1919 he became state bank commissioner and served in that capacity for several years.

Mr. Thomas was elected mayor of Shreveport in 1922. He served a four-year term and was re-elected in 1926, serving until 1930 when he retired from office.

Mr. Thomas served in many high offices of the Masons in Louisiana. His first election in the order was to the office of senior warden in 1905. He was promoted to grand master in 1907 and was re-elected for another term in 1909.

His official capacity through the Masonry was widespread. In 113 he was invested as knight commander of the court of honor and was cor-

SPY PLOT SHOCKS GERMAN CAPITAL; WOMEN INVOLVED

Hitler May Decide Whether Three Persons Will Be Executed

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—(AP)—A spy plot of sensational ramifications, said to involve two women, one of them of titled social prominence, and a Polish baron, all of them on trial for their lives, burst upon Berlin today and reverberated in the headquarters of the German army.

Although it was emphasized that no sentences have been passed, it was hinted from one source that Reichsfuehrer Hitler himself would decide whether the trio must face a firing squad.

The man being tried was officially described as Baron George Sosnowsky, a Pole, who is alleged to have conducted ferreting out secrets in high Berlin society where he moved freely before his arrest about a year ago.

There were unconfirmed reports that Germany had offered to return him to Poland in exchange for some German spy there, but that the accused man had declined. He was reported to be accused of furnishing military secrets to Poland, and one reliable quarter expressed the opinion that government authorities had refused to announce the progress of the trial because of fear of upsetting German-Polish relations.

One of the women who appeared before the high people's court in Berlin was said to be a Berlin baroness of great social prominence and personal beauty.

Asked about published reports that she was identified as the Baroness Benita von Berg, a spokesman for the propaganda ministry replied that "the name von Berg has often been heard in this connection, but I cannot say whether she is involved."

TROUBLE IN VIENNA

VIENNA, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Shots rang out in the capital tonight in the Floridsdorf district where the government dropped artillery bombardments a year ago in the Socialist civil war.

A group of Socialist youths demonstrating in celebration of the anniversary opened fire when they were attacked by police. The law forces immediately returned the fire and arrested eight persons.

IL DUCE BREAKS HIS SILENCE ON ETHIOPIAN MOVE

Urges All Mobilized Troops To Be Ready For Any Eventuality

Mussolini's Council Approves Measure For 'Peace Security'

ROME, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini broke his silence on the Ethiopian controversy tonight by urging all mobilized Italians to "be ready for any eventuality."

In an address to the Fascist grand council Il Duce for the first time made a definite reference to a "front." He congratulated the "virility of the men leaving for the African front."

His statement, to which deep significance was attached, was made several hours after the first detachments of Italian troops sailed for Africa.

Mussolini's council in a four-hour session approved his measure "for the security of peace" in east African possessions and those considered necessary "for control over Italian interests."

Thunderous cheers greeted the dictator's statement that 70,000 blackshirts have volunteered for service in east Africa since February 1 and also thousands of other citizens and war veterans.

The grand council's communique said certain types of workers must hold themselves in readiness for military discipline and for organization at a moment's notice.

Rome was excited and buzzed with talk of Mussolini's characteristically militant speech. A statement from him had been eagerly awaited for days.

A battalion of blackshirts embarked at Naples this afternoon, it was officially revealed, after being reviewed by Crown Prince Umberto. Il Duce reviewed two other battalions preparatory to their departure for Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

In the face of the embarkation of the Italian troops, Negradas Yesus, Ethiopian charge de'affairs, through whom Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has stoutly disclaimed responsibility for Italio-Ethiopian hostilities along the border, declared, "We will defend our homes with our lives. If Italy comes against us, her blood will be on her own head."

While hundreds of troops moved into Rome from northern points, wearing new uniforms and ordinary trench caps and carrying pith helmets for tropical wear at their backs, Mussolini, in company with Fiscist and army officials, gave his several thousand militiamen an inspection before their departure.

Newspapermen and photographers were barred from the review, which took place in the grenadiers' barracks here, but the official statement said Il Duce addressed the troops briefly. He was cheered as he departed, it said.

The militiamen, who volunteered for service in Eritrea and Somaliland, leave this evening for Sicily whence they will sail for Africa.

Hundreds of reservists, meanwhile, were receiving mobilization orders instructing them to keep themselves in readiness for mobilization orders, but an official explained that this was an automatic procedure following the first mobilization.

Reports that Emperor Haile Selassie had sent Mussolini still another memorandum denying Italy's charges that Ethiopians are the aggressors along the African border, but this was not confirmed.

SNOW IS REPORTED AT ARKANSAS TOWN

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The south took a look at the weather charts and figured spring had practically shoved winter aside but snow flurries in Arkansas belied the conclusion.

Most of the south Atlantic states, however, experienced balmy weather with partly cloudy skies and the general forecast was for a little drop in temperature over the weekend with fair and warmer weather beginning Monday or Tuesday.

New Orleans had a temperature range of 60 to 73 degrees and Memphis from 47 to 58. Atlanta's mercury rose to 66 degrees and Birmingham's to 68. Asheville, N. C., had a range of 36 to 64.

Little Rock, Ark., noted a minimum of 44 and maximum of 58 but situation was different in Fayetteville, Ark., where the mercury dropped to 32 and snow flurries were experienced.

WORK BILL FACES WAGE SCALE FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—A plea to the senate today by William Green for the adoption of the McCarran prevailing wage amendment convinced some administration leaders that the wage proposal would give the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill its severest test on the senate floor.

Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, wrote each senator, pleading for the defeat of the administration's proposal and the adoption of the McCarran amendment or a similar provision to fix relief wages.

The McCarran amendment would direct that the wages prevailing in localities be paid on all federal projects.

Judge Rules Boys Entitled To Buried Gold They Found

BALTIMORE, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Two members of poor families, were awarded a $28,000 gold hoard today but with all their wealth they could use none of it to buy even the trimmings for tomorrow's dinner.

Judge Eugene O'Dunne decreed that "finders are keepers" in ruling the treasure—3,558 gold coins—belonged to Henry Grob and Theodore Jones, who unearthed it in the cellar of the Jones home.

Actual possession of the gold must await a formal order, "subject to appeal." If some of several disappointed claimants to the rich find should appeal—as two have indicated they will—the small fortune may remain in escrow for some time.

The boys, 16-year-old sons of families on relief rolls, discovered an old copper pot full of gold last August while digging in the cellar for a place to hide dues from their club.

The coins, dated from 1834 to 1858, have a face value of $11,427.50, but the federal government calculated their potential numismatic value at $28,872.

Henry said he was going to "get my mother a home of her own," and Theodore chimed in, "That's what I'm going to do, follow Henry." First, though, said Theodore, he and Henry will ask the relief workers to stop calling.

Henry's mother, Mrs. Ruth Grob, who said she was "sick lying on the couch" when she heard about the judge's decision—"but I got well pretty quick. I feel like I could burst out crying."

She said she hoped to buy a little home, carefully invest the rest of her son's share of the gold and see that he got a college education. Similar plans were voiced by Theodore's mother, Mrs. Bessie Jones.

Judge O'Dunne turned down the claims of several groups who insisted that their ancestors buried the treasure and finally that of the owners of the property on which it was found—Mrs. Elizabeth H. French and Miss Mary P. B. Findlay.

ICKES ACTS QUICKLY TO GET FARLEY DATA

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16. — (AP) — Prompt response to the senate's request for any available information on Postmaster General Farley's business activities was promised today by Secretary Ickes.

"We are combing the files," he said, adding he would send the data "as soon as I get the papers assembled." He acknowledged receipt of the senate request late in the day.

After a morning conference with President Roosevelt he said the subject had not been discussed.

The senate asked for the information after Senator Long had conducted a four-day campaign to have Farley's affairs examined.

Ickes and Louis R. Glavis, his detective chief, worked late to gather material.

3 NATIONS JOIN TO KEEP PEACE

LONDON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Britain, France and Italy have joined forces to keep Europe's peace until the return of confidence makes their policing unnecessary, authoritative circles disclosed today.

That, it was revealed, was the sole purpose in the Anglo-French accords drafted at London two weeks ago, to which Hitler was invited to adhere.

As the government studied Hitler's reply inviting it to the proposals for an inclusive security pact to settle all Europe's trouble-fraught questions simultaneously, these spokesmen referred to Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald as the man who conceived the scheme, and to Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, as the man who carried it out.

Townsend Plan Is Ridiculed By Senators And Spectators

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Grim and unsmiling, the author of the Townsend $200 a month pension plan sought today to convince members of the senate finance committee that his idea was the cure for the economic ills of the country.

Townsend faced a semi-circle of hostile senators and tried to answer their questions, some serious and others obviously designed to ridicule his plan. Senators and spectators showed by frequent laughter they enjoyed the proceedings, but Townsend never smiled.

At the conclusion, Chairman Harrison announced the committee would conclude its hearings on the administration's social security program next Wednesday and would try to frame a bill by that night. But he warned the Californian it would not include any old age pensions of $200 a month.

The first hearing was turned away from the merits of the plan and converted into an investigation of the organization built up to support it. Townsend testified the organization has collected about $50,000 and spent $45,000 and that he received $50 a week.

Senators argued that the plan would cost $24,000,000,000 a year and that the proposed two per cent "transactions tax" probably would leave a deficit of $19,000,000,000 a year.

A little impatiently, Townsend argued that 4,000,000 of the 10,000,000 persons over 60 would have to give up jobs which would then be available to the unemployed, that spending of the pensions would bring a wave of prosperity, and that the taxes would be passed on to the consumer and continue to operate, thus keeping down prices.

When the unfriendly senators became a little too persistent about the money, Townsend explained that the cost would be nothing like $24,000,000,000 a year, because it would take years to get all on the pension rolls. He pointed out it had

OFFICERS CHOSEN BY TEN-YEAR CLUB

Mrs. J. B. Filhiol Of Logtown Is Elected As President

Annual election of officers of the Ten Year club, an organization of women who have been members of home demonstration clubs for 10 years or more, was held Saturday noon at the West Monroe First Baptist church. Mrs. J. B. Filhiol, of Logtown, was elected president and Mrs. Ida Williams, of Logtown, the retiring president, automatically became vice president. Mrs. Alva Sims, of the Liberty community, was elected secretary-treasurer.

The club decided to sponsor a flower and vegetable show, to be held early in June. A committee was appointed to have charge of arrangements for the show. Members of the committee are Mrs. Clara Alexander, of Sterlington; Mrs. Pearl Bowers of the Colony community; Mrs. Ellen Collie, of the Liberty community; Mrs. H. D. Hale, of Calhoun; Mrs. Filhiol.

The show will be the first of its kind ever held in the parish, it was reported.

Lunch was served at the meeting by the Liberty club. The entertainment program including group singing.

'Oliva Dionne--5 F' Was Only Notation In Dafoe Diary When Quints Were Born

Just One Name And Symbol Used To Record Amazing Case

By Ernest Lynn
(NEA Staff Correspondent)

CALLANDER, Ont., Feb. 16.—In view of all that has been written about the Dionne quintuplets, your correspondent thought it would be an excellent idea, while mushing about the Lake Nipissing district in 30 below zero weather, to find out if he could what were the first words to be set down on paper concerning the miracle of last May.

Those words can now, as the saying goes, be told. Their author was Allan Roy Dafoe, the wise, kindly little country doctor who left his house on a hurry call at 4 in the morning one day last spring and returned a couple of hours later to make the following entry in his day book under date of May 28:

Oliva Dionne—5 F

Thus, in the stark brevity of a physician's modest diary entry, was written down the fact of the most amazing maternity case of medical record.

The wife of Oliva Dionne had borne five female children, and this the doctor, all unconscious that the world was soon to start making the proverbial path to his door, dutifully recorded.

That's All He Wrote

Dr. Dafoe told me this story while we were sitting in the little hospital where the famed quintuplets now thrive. He had just come in a few minutes before, with a hearty, "Well, how's my gang this morning?" to Nurse Louise de Kiriline.

"And that's all you wrote?" I asked him.

"That's all. You're the first to ask me if I wrote anything."

Well, the world had lost no time in taking up where the doctor left off.

Dr. Dafoe chuckled and puffed at his pipe. Shucks, he hadn't had time to speculate on the appalling wonder of living quintuplets. The mother was in a very bad way; she might die. That was his chief worry.

Had To Save Mother

Had to keep that mother alive; she had five other children, you know. Had to hustle around and get help. Had to try to keep those quintuplets living, too, but he hadn't the faintest notion that they would survive. Quintuplets never did.

And who would have had any such notion? Not you or I certainly—not if we had seen those scrawny, pitifully tiny mahogany-colored bodies, born two months too soon, heard them whimper instead of cry, seen them wrapped up in absorbent cotton, seen them fed a few drops of warm, sterile water from a medicine dropper.

Rum Revived Them

Some times during those feverish days and nights that followed, days and nights when Nurse Yvonne Leroux held the fort for a week without sleep and fell into bed with a fervent "Thank God!" when relief finally came—sometimes one or more of those babies would turn blue, and stiffen, and seem about to die.

Then a bit of rum would be administered—maybe half a drop, maybe a drop—and the poor little body would relax and change color, and nurse and doctor would breathe once more.

Why rum? Well, rum happened to be the only alcoholic stimulant the doctor had at hand. It might have been brandy, you know, or whisky. But a stimulant was needed.

OLIVA DIONNE—5F

DR. ALLAN R. DAFOE

I asked Dr. Dafoe if he could remember just when it was that he began to think in terms of the probability of the quintuplets' survival.

Feared To Hope

Not for a long time, he said. Each day that passed and left them alive was regarded as that much gain, of course.

"But I didn't give them much of a chance until we moved them into the new hospital.

The quintuplets were four months old then. Now another four months have passed, and the miracle of their having lived is succeeded by the miracle of their beauty.

Beholding them today as they kick and wiggle, or as they lie quietly in innocent sleep—five normal, healthy baby girls of almost incredible sweetness—you find it unbelievable that at one time their combined weight was slightly less than 10 pounds.

Their doctor says, "We can't believe it ourselves."

This Dr. Dafoe, you know—or you should if you don't—is really a remarkable character. I was talking to Ken Morrison about him. Ken Morrison is one of the guardians appointed by the provincial government for the quintuplets and he runs the general store in Callander.

"Good As They Come"

Ken said, "Sure, he's a country doctor. But don't get the idea that he's an ordinary country doctor. This fellow's as good as they come anywhere."

Then and there Ken Morrison, who is a rough-hewn Scotsman and not the sort of man to go gushy on you, began to get fairly rhapsodic about the good gray medico of Callander. He thrust out an angular jaw and his steel-blue eyes gleamed as he warmed to his subject.

There was the time, for instance, when Ken himself was sick, and he wasn't getting better, and Dr. Dafoe agreed that something had to be done about his teeth.

Canadian Doctor Had Faint Hope Of Victory For 4 Months

So he had to go into North Bay and have them out. And the doctor took him in his own car; took him in and waited for him and then brought him back.

How many doctors, Ken wanted to know, would have done that? How many doctors, country or otherwise?

Saved From Suicide

And there was the time that Dr. Dafoe got a call from far out in the bush one night. A man and his wife had had trouble, and the woman had shot herself. She had stuck the gun under her chin and the bullet had come out of the top of her head.

When Dr. Dafoe got there she couldn't even breathe except by putting her hand over the hole in her throat. She was spitting blood and bits of bone.

Bad. . . . Well, the doctor pulled her through all right. She's walking around today, just as good as ever.

That afternoon I went over to the doctor's house. Fred Davis, the photographer who has made all those great pictures of the quintuplets, and I sat in the comfortable book-stacked Dafoe living room; watched the doctor putter around his fireplace, putting on gloves to replenish the grate with cannel coal; smoked with him, chatted with him, laughed with him.

Honored By Academy

The sunshine streamed in the broad window, but outside it was 20 below. On Dr. Dafoe's porch it registered 10 below, but Fred Davis insisted that the doctor's thermometer was a liar. The doctor beamed. "Doesn't agree with another one in town, does it?"

And then he went into the dining room and took something from the table. This he showed to me. It was a framed document, reading:

"Academy of Medicine, Toronto, in recognition of the high scientific attainments of Allan Roy Dafoe, M. B., has elected him an honorary fellow of the Academy. In witness whereof the seal of the Academy and the signature of the proper officers are affixed as by resolution of the Academy.

"Given in the City of Toronto this 8th day of January in the year 1935. . . . Malcolm H. V. Cameron, president; Gilbert Parker, honorary secretary."

Proud Of Document

"I'm proud of that," Dr. Dafoe said simply. "That's why I framed it. I didn't want anything to happen to it."

And he is proud. He's proud of what he has done up there in the north country, proud of the honors that have been showered upon him—and plainly tickled at all the fuss that is being made over him.

He's no stuffed shirt, trying to pretend that he doesn't like it. He's a regular guy, this fellow, and—a lesson to newspaper men—he wrote the story of the greatest multiple birth in history in something like four words.

St. Joseph

The River Road Inn was once more the scene of a most delightful gathering when the board of directors of the Bank of St. Joseph entertained at a banquet at which Mr. Curry MacPherson was the guest of honor. The occasion was the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mr. MacPherson's connection with the bank. The banquet table was very pretty and spring-like with rich settings, and a center piece of jonquils, carrying out the color scheme of yellow and green. Covers were laid for twenty-eight. Mr. Benjamin F. Young, president of the Bank of St. Joseph, was toast-master. As soon as the guests were seated Mr. Young proposed a toast to the guest of honor, Mr. MacPherson, who spoke next and in a gracious speech thanked all those present and proposed the second toast. Mr. Young then called on others, who rose at being addressed and made appropriate remarks. Mr. Wade Walker Burnside, president, and Mr. Tate T. Hargrove, of the Tensas State bank, of Newellton, La., Mr. Joseph T. Curry, Mr. German Baker, Mayor Philip Watson and others all made interesting speeches. Among the ladies who were invited to speak were Mrs. Joseph Curry, Mrs. Curry MacPherson, Mrs. Ida Jones and Mrs. Wade Walker Burnside, Mrs. Tate T. Hargrove and Mrs. Henry Wimberly of Newellton. Miss Bessie Lord of the Bank of St. Joseph, Miss Susan Howard and Miss Marian Post also contributed remarks and in a few words expressed their pleasure in the occasion. Later on in the evening, after the banquet, an informal dance took place, which was very much enjoyed. Additional guests were invited for the dance and lunch was served all during the evening. The guests at the banquet were the honoree, Mr. Curry MacPherson and Mrs. Curry MacPerson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Curry, Mrs. Joseph Curry, Mr. and Mrs Richard Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Levy, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Watson, Mrs. Ida Jones, Mr. and Mrs. German Baker, Miss Marian Curry, Miss Ethel Reiber, Miss Bessie Lord, Miss Marian Post, Miss Susan Howard, Mr. Benjamin F. Young, Mr. Spencer Jones, Mr. Clarence Reiber, and Mr. and Mrs. Wade Walker Burnside, Mr. and Mrs. Tate T. Hargrove and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wimberly of Newellton, La.

Mr. and Mrs. Marable Beiler Harper were hosts on Tuesday afternoon, entertaining informally, but very delightfully, at a reception in honor of Mr. Harper's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miles Harper, of China Grove plantation. The occasion was unusually interesting, being the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Harper, the guests of honor. The attractive rooms of Mr. and Mrs. Harper's pretty home were bright with lovely cut flowers, artistically arranged. In the hall, into which the guests were ushered on entering, were red carnations and in the living room were the white carnations. Mrs. Blanton Evans presided at the punch bowl. Mrs. Evans was assisted in serving the punch and cake by Mrs. Harrison Miller, a sister of Mrs. Harper's. The honorees, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miles Harper, were the recipients of a number of pretty and appropriate gifts besides offerings of flowers and messages of congratulations from their many friends. There were a great many calling during the afternoon.

Mrs. William Watson, Mr. and Mrs Blanton Evans and Mr. Pollard Coleman were guests of Mr. Hobbs Freeman in Fayette, Miss., on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week for a bird hunt. Others joining the party for the hunt were Mr. Duncan McArn and Mr. Sedric Fauntleroy.

"Good As They Come"

Ken said, "Sure, he's a country doctor. But don't get the idea that he's an ordinary country doctor. This fellow's as good as they come anywhere."

Then and there Ken Morrison, who is a rough-hewn Scotsman and not the sort of man to go gushy on you, began to get fairly rhapsodic about the good gray medico of Callander. He thrust out an angular jaw and his steel-blue eyes gleamed as he warmed to his subject.

There was the time, for instance, when Ken himself was sick, and he wasn't getting better, and Dr. Dafoe agreed that something had to be done about his teeth.

So he had to go into North Bay and have them out. And the doctor took him in his own car; took him in and waited for him and then brought him back.

How many doctors, Ken wanted to know, would have done that? How many doctors, country or otherwise?

Saved From Suicide

And there was the time that Dr. Dafoe got a call from far out in the bush one night. A man and his wife had had trouble, and the woman had shot herself. She had stuck the gun under her chin and the bullet had come out of the top of her head.

When Dr. Dafoe got there she couldn't even breathe except by putting her hand over the hole in her throat. She was spitting blood and bits of bone.

Bad. . . . Well, the doctor pulled her through all right. She's walking around today, just as good as ever.

That afternoon I went over to the doctor's house. Fred Davis, the photographer who has made all those great pictures of the quintuplets, and I sat in the comfortable book-stacked Dafoe living room; watched the doctor putter around his fireplace, putting on gloves to replenish the grate with cannel coal; smoked with him, chatted with him, laughed with him.

Honored By Academy

The sunshine streamed in the broad window, but outside it was 20 below. On Dr. Dafoe's porch it registered 10 below, but Fred Davis insisted that the doctor's thermometer was a liar. The doctor beamed. "Doesn't agree with another one in town, does it?"

And then he went into the dining room and took something from the table. This he showed to me. It was a framed document, reading:

"Academy of Medicine, Toronto, in recognition of the high scientific attainments of Allan Roy Dafoe, M. B., has elected him an honorary fellow of the Academy. In witness whereof the seal of the Academy and the signature of the proper officers are affixed as by resolution of the Academy.

"Given in the City of Toronto this 8th day of January in the year 1935. . . . Malcolm H. V. Cameron, president; Gilbert Parker, honorary secretary."

Proud Of Document

"I'm proud of that," Dr. Dafoe said simply. "That's why I framed it. I didn't want anything to happen to it."

And he is proud. He's proud of what he has done up there in the north country, proud of the honors that have been showered upon him—and plainly tickled at all the fuss that is being made over him.

He's no stuffed shirt, trying to pretend that he doesn't like it. He's a regular guy, this fellow, and—a lesson to newspaper men—he wrote the story of the greatest multiple birth in history in something like four words.

Maccabees Lay Plans For Thursday Meeting

Preparations are being made by officers and members of Fidelity Hive No. 221, Maccabees, for a visit of Mrs. Frances Burns, assistant supreme commander, who will arrive Thursday from Detroit and will remain here for two days.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock a meeting will be held at the United Spanish War Veterans' hall on South Grand street. All members are expected to attend, rehearse their parts and put on drill team work. Past Commander Louise Harberson is captain of the guard team.

Thursday night a review will be held, beginning at 7:30 o'clock and a class of new members, to be called the Frances Burns class, will be admitted.

Friday morning and afternoon a school of instruction will be held and Friday night a George Washington reception will be held by the Sir Knights and Ladies.

Record Keeper Cora Logan and Commander O. Thorboson are making every effort to prepare a suitable reception for the visitor.

A delegation from Queen Bee Hive No. 217, located at Clarks, will also attend.

St. Joseph

The River Road Inn was once more the scene of a most delightful gathering when the board of directors of the Bank of St. Joseph entertained at a banquet at which Mr. Curry MacPherson was the guest of honor. The occasion was the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mr. MacPherson's connection with the bank. The banquet table was very pretty and spring-like with rich settings, and a center piece of jonquils, carrying out the color scheme of yellow and green. Covers were laid for twenty-eight. Mr. Benjamin F. Young, president of the Bank of St. Joseph, was toast-master. As soon as the guests were seated Mr. Young proposed a toast to the guest of honor, Mr. MacPherson, who spoke next and in a gracious speech thanked all those present and proposed the second toast. Mr. Young then called on others, who rose at being addressed and made appropriate remarks. Mr. Wade Walker Burnside, president, and Mr. Tate T. Hargrove, of the Tensas State bank, of Newellton, La., Mr. Joseph T. Curry, Mr. German Baker, Mayor Philip Watson and others all made interesting speeches. Among the ladies who were invited to speak were Mrs. Joseph Curry, Mrs. Curry MacPherson, Mrs. Ida Jones and Mrs. Wade Walker Burnside, Mrs. Tate T. Hargrove and Mrs. Henry Wimberly of Newellton. Miss Bessie Lord of the Bank of St. Joseph, Miss Susan Howard and Miss Marian Post also contributed remarks and in a few words expressed their pleasure in the occasion. Later on in the evening, after the banquet, an informal dance took place, which was very much enjoyed. Additional guests were invited for the dance and lunch was served all during the evening. The guests at the banquet were the honoree, Mr. Curry MacPherson and Mrs. Curry MacPerson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Curry, Mrs. Joseph Curry, Mr. and Mrs Richard Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Levy, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Watson, Mrs. Ida Jones, Mr. and Mrs. German Baker, Miss Marian Curry, Miss Ethel Reiber, Miss Bessie Lord, Miss Marian Post, Miss Susan Howard, Mr. Benjamin F. Young, Mr. Spencer Jones, Mr. Clarence Reiber, and Mr. and Mrs. Wade Walker Burnside, Mr. and Mrs. Tate T. Hargrove and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wimberly of Newellton, La.

Mr. and Mrs. Marable Beiler Harper were hosts on Tuesday afternoon, entertaining informally, but very delightfully, at a reception in honor of Mr. Harper's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miles Harper, of China Grove plantation. The occasion was unusually interesting, being the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Harper, the guests of honor. The attractive rooms of Mr. and Mrs. Harper's pretty home were bright with lovely cut flowers, artistically arranged. In the hall, into which the guests were ushered on entering, were red carnations and in the living room were the white carnations. Mrs. Blanton Evans presided at the punch bowl. Mrs. Evans was assisted in serving the punch and cake by Mrs. Harrison Miller, a sister of Mrs. Harper's. The honorees, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miles Harper, were the recipients of a number of pretty and appropriate gifts besides offerings of flowers and messages of congratulations from their many friends. There were a great many calling during the afternoon.

Mrs. William Watson, Mr. and Mrs Blanton Evans and Mr. Pollard Coleman were guests of Mr. Hobbs Freeman in Fayette, Miss., on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week for a bird hunt. Others joining the party for the hunt were Mr. Duncan McArn and Mr. Sedric Fauntleroy.

Owing to the illness of a number of the members, the Cosmo[illegible] club has postponed the Va[illegible] party, which was to have take[illegible] on Wednesday night at the [illegible] Town House.

Reverend S. E. McFadden, D[illegible] Ruston, and Reverend Robert M[illegible] Gehee, director of religious educ[illegible] of the Synod of Louisiana, of A[illegible]andria, La., who are representing [illegible] Home Mission committee of the R[illegible] River Presbytery, were visitors he[illegible] on Tuesday. They met with the offi[illegible]cers of the Presbyterian church i[illegible] St. Joseph and Waterproof, La. They were guests of Reverend Ralph Mc[illegible]Kaney in St. Joseph for their visit.

East Carroll Moves To Enforce Sanitary Code

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Due to the tense situation in East Carroll parish over the number of rabies victims, the town and parish board of health in a joint meeting adopted resolutions requesting the town council and police jury to enforce the sanitary code of Louisiana, particularly that part dealing with the disposition of dogs in East Carroll parish.

In a regular meeting the police jury named Dr. C. J. Ballowe parish vaccinator and made mandatory the ordinance that all dogs must be vaccinated or killed, and compulsory vaccination is to become effective immediately.

A. W. Warlick, parish superintendent of education, was asked to plan for a schedule of meetings in the various school buildings of the parish, where Dr. G. D. Williams of the parish health unit will speak for the enlightenment of the citizenry regarding the rabies situation in the parish and the necessity of immediate immunization against the disease.

One dog, in the neighborhood of the Lake Providence high school, bit five different people and a report from the Monticello neighborhood reported a mad dog at large on the school campus.

Hodge

The Hodge circulating library opened last Friday with more than one hundred and twenty-five books, many of them being the best sellers of the last few years. The librarian, Miss Fay Peevy, stated that new books would be added to the shelves as the business warrants, and preference in the additional selections will be given to request publications.

In honor of Mrs. John E. Kelley, a winter visitor in Hodge, Mrs. John C. Michaud entertained at bridge on Friday afternoon. Bouquets of fragrant blooms were profusely used in adorning the living room and library of the Michaud home. Valentine tallies and score pads added a note of gaiety, and at bridge Mrs. Douglass McLean was awarded a handsome pottery vase for high score; Mrs. Michael Mooney was given a jar of dusting talc as second prize and a heart shaped valentine of chocolates was given to Mrs. R. A. Polhemus as ace of hearts prize.

To Mrs. Kelley the hostess gave a chest of sachet compacts as a gift memento. A delicious refreshment course was served to the guests, Mrs. M. L. Dickerson, Mrs. Charles Moore Mrs. Ralph Largay, Mrs. Norman Dickerson, Mrs. M. F. Mooney, Mrs. A. G. McKenzie, Mrs. W. M. McBride, Mrs. Clark Rankin, Mrs. John E. Kelley, Mrs. Charles Kelley, Mrs. Douglass McLean, Mrs. Nelson Michaud, Mrs. Steve E. Michaud, Mrs. Jerome Frazier, Mrs. Vinal Stewart, Mrs. Wes Suttle, Mrs. Jane Gagnon, Mrs. David Bell, Mrs. George Littlefield, Mrs. Tom Carlin, Mrs. Henry Michaud, Mrs. Charles Libbey, Mrs. R. A. Polhemus, Mrs. Benton Kelley and Mrs. Tom Dennis.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Michaud entertained at a lovely Valentine bridge party in honor of Mrs. Kelley. Within the party rooms, the mellow glow of lamp light and floral decorations of vivid red carnations and bright yellow jonquils created a cheerful and cozy atmosphere that dispelled the leaden wintry gloom of the day. Valentine tallies score pads complemented the party colors of red and white.

The Ladies Altar society of St. Henry's church held their February meeting at the home of Mrs. Tom Carlin last Thursday afternoon, with a record attendance present.

Mrs. Shelby Talbot read an interesting paper on "Prayer and Worship."

At the conclusion of the meeting the hostess served delicious refreshments.

EPPS CLUB MEETS

EPPS, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—The Epps home demonstration club met last week at the home of Mrs. W. O Cantwell with their leader, Miss Eunice Howard of Lake Providence. Those attending were Mrs. L. N. Cannedy, Mrs. A. F. Gelmoon, Mrs. Sam King, Mrs. Jessie King Anna Belle Sells, Norma Lee Cantwell, Julia Johnston, Octavie Cantwell, Katheryne Kennedy and Miss Howard.

There are 5,000 clubs and organizations registered in Berlin.

Lake Providence

Mrs. D. B. Boddie and Mrs. J. T. Shanks were officers in charge of the Methodist missionary meeting during which Mrs. A. S. Hill was the speaker, obtaining her source of information from "St. Mark's Life of Jesus," by Andrew Sledd. Mrs. W. F. Bonner was named superintendent of baby specials and Mrs. F. Fife, secretary of children's work. The next meeting will be a social and will be held at the home of Mrs. F. A. Babb on Olivedell.

The American Legion auxiliary entertained at the municipal auditorium at a benefit bridge for the child welfare department. The 44 guests included members of the various local bridge clubs and a Valentine motif was effectively carried out in the menu which consisted of hot tea and sandwiches. The first prize was won by Mrs. Frank G. Meek, second prize by Mrs. Leon Harbin, Mrs. R. A. Rentz cut consolation and the booby went to Mrs. W. H. Maben.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Knapp, parents of Mrs. Asley W. Warlick, have arrived from Los Angeles to make their home in Lake Providence. Having visited her on several occasions Mr. and Mrs. Knapp are well known to a wide circle of friends.

Mrs. J. H. Guenard was a gracious bridge club hostess of Wednesday afternoon and in entertaining at the family home in First street had as guests these members and substitutes: Mesdames E. D. Schneider, W. Y. Bell, R. S. Guenard, G. D. Williams, H. L. Harkey, C. A. Rose, J. S. Pittman, Roland Smith, J. N. Hill, Jr., Frank Brown, Frank Voelker, and Mrs. John Lathram of Tallulah. Mrs. C. R. Evans a club member was a tea guest and the prizes were won by Mrs. R. S. Guenard for highest score and Mrs. Bell for second high.

The women's organization of Grace Episcopal church entertained at a most delicious dinner in the basement of the church on Thursday evening. The dinner was well attended and the proceeds were remunerative.

The outstanding feature of interest in educational circles during the week was Mrs. Clarence E. Holly's speech art recital on Thursday evening in the school auditorium. Contributing to the delightful program were numbers by Patricia Pollard, Jenny Wren Rosenzweig, Stuart Pittman, Mary Janet Aly, Edgar Donovan, Mary Evelyn Williams, Snowdie Howard, Lois Lois Kaufman, Joyce Swink and Drusilla Phillips, and a piano solo by Edwina Warlick.

Friends here have learned of the marriage of Mr. Jack Hammit De Wees, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. De Wees, to Miss Mary D. Rathbun, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Rathbun of Minden, which was solemnized by Rev. W. L. Doss, at the home of the uncle and aunt of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brown of Homer on Sunday morning, February 10, at 9 o'clock. Mr. De Wees is sanitary engineer for East Carroll parish and Mr. and Mrs. De Wees reached Lake Providence from their honeymoon on Wednesday and for the present are at home to their friends at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. K. Evans in Brown street.

Mrs. N. C. Williamson is at home again after a Carribean cruise, taking in Havana, the Panama canal and other interesting points.

Freshmen: Hazel McCarty, Shreveport; Florine Kendrick, Homer; Mary Lou Porter, Gilbert, and Marjorie Frazier, Minden.

East Carroll Moves To Enforce Sanitary Code

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Due to the tense situation in East Carroll parish over the number of rabies victims, the town and parish board of health in a joint meeting adopted resolutions requesting the town council and police jury to enforce the sanitary code of Louisiana, particularly that part dealing with the disposition of dogs in East Carroll parish.

In a regular meeting the police jury named Dr. C. J. Ballowe parish vaccinator and made mandatory the ordinance that all dogs must be vaccinated or killed, and compulsory vaccination is to become effective immediately.

A. W. Warlick, parish superintendent of education, was asked to plan for a schedule of meetings in the various school buildings of the parish, where Dr. G. D. Williams of the parish health unit will speak for the enlightenment of the citizenry regarding the rabies situation in the parish and the necessity of immediate immunization against the disease.

One dog, in the neighborhood of the Lake Providence high school, bit five different people and a report from the Monticello neighborhood reported a mad dog at large on the school campus.

Hodge

The Hodge circulating library opened last Friday with more than one hundred and twenty-five books, many of them being the best sellers of the last few years. The librarian, Miss Fay Peevy, stated that new books would be added to the shelves as the business warrants, and preference in the additional selections will be given to request publications.

In honor of Mrs. John E. Kelley, a winter visitor in Hodge, Mrs. John C. Michaud entertained at bridge on Friday afternoon. Bouquets of fragrant blooms were profusely used in adorning the living room and library of the Michaud home. Valentine tallies and score pads added a note of gaiety, and at bridge Mrs. Douglass McLean was awarded a handsome pottery vase for high score; Mrs. Michael Mooney was given a jar of dusting talc as second prize and a heart shaped valentine of chocolates was given to Mrs. R. A. Polhemus as ace of hearts prize.

To Mrs. Kelley the hostess gave a chest of sachet compacts as a gift memento. A delicious refreshment course was served to the guests, Mrs. M. L. Dickerson, Mrs. Charles Moore Mrs. Ralph Largay, Mrs. Norman Dickerson, Mrs. M. F. Mooney, Mrs. A. G. McKenzie, Mrs. W. M. McBride, Mrs. Clark Rankin, Mrs. John E. Kelley, Mrs. Charles Kelley, Mrs. Douglass McLean, Mrs. Nelson Michaud, Mrs. Steve E. Michaud, Mrs. Jerome Frazier, Mrs. Vinal Stewart, Mrs. Wes Suttle, Mrs. Jane Gagnon, Mrs. David Bell, Mrs. George Littlefield, Mrs. Tom Carlin, Mrs. Henry Michaud, Mrs. Charles Libbey, Mrs. R. A. Polhemus, Mrs. Benton Kelley and Mrs. Tom Dennis.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Michaud entertained at a lovely Valentine bridge party in honor of Mrs. Kelley. Within the party rooms, the mellow glow of lame light and floral decorations of vivid red carnations and bright yellow jonquils created a cheerful and cozy atmosphere that dispelled the leaden wintry gloom of the day. Valentine tallies score pads complemented the party colors of red and white.

The Ladies Altar society of St. Henry's church held their February meeting at the home of Mrs. Tom Carlin last Thursday afternoon, with a record attendance present.

Mrs. Shelby Talbot read an interesting paper on "Prayer and Worship."

EPPS CLUB MEETS

EPPS, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—The Epps home demonstration club met last week at the home of Mrs. W. O. Cantwell with their leader, Miss Eunice Howard of Lake Providence. Those attending were Mrs. L. N. Cannedy, Mrs. A. F. Gelmoor, Mrs. Sam King, Mrs. Jessie King, Anna Belle Sells, Norma Lee Cantwell, Julia Johnston, Octavie Cantwell, Katheryne Kennedy and Miss Howard.

There are 5,000 clubs and organizations registered in Berlin.

Lake Providence

Mrs. D. B. Boddie and Mrs. J. T. Shanks were officers in charge of the Methodist missionary meeting during which Mrs. A. S. Hill was the speaker, obtaining her source of information from "St. Mark's Life of Jesus," by Andrew Sledd. Mrs. W. F. Bonner was named superintendent of baby specials and Mrs. F. Fife, secretary of children's work. The next meeting will be a social and will be held at the home of Mrs. F. A. Babb on Olivedell.

The American Legion auxiliary entertained at the municipal auditorium at a benefit bridge for the child welfare department. The 44 guests included members of the various local bridge clubs and a Valentine motif was effectively carried out in the menu which consisted of hot tea and sandwiches. The first prize was won by Mrs. Frank G. Meek, second prize by Mrs. Leon Harbin, Mrs. R. A. Rentz cut consolation and the booby went to Mrs. W. H. Maben.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Knapp, parents of Mrs. Asley W. Warlick, have arrived from Los Angeles to make their home in Lake Providence. Having visited her on several occasions Mr. and Mrs. Knapp are well known to a wide circle of friends.

Mrs. J. H. Guenard was a gracious bridge club hostess of Wednesday afternoon and in entertaining at the family home in First street had as guests these members and substitutes: Mesdames E. D. Schneider, W. Y. Bell, R. S. Guenard, G. D. Williams, H. L. Harkey, C. A. Rose, J. S. Pittman, Roland Smith, J. N. Hill, Jr., Frank Brown, Frank Voelker, and Mrs. John Lathram of Tallulah. Mrs. C. R. Evans a club member was a tea guest and the prizes were won by Mrs. R. S. Guenard for highest score and Mrs. Bell for second high.

The women's organization of Grace Episcopal church entertained at a most delicious dinner in the basement of the church on Thursday evening. The dinner was well attended and the proceeds were remunerative.

The outstanding feature of interest in educational circles during the week was Mrs. Clarence E. Holly's speech art recital on Thursday evening in the school auditorium. Contributing to the delightful program were numbers by Patricia Pollard, Jenny Wren Rosenzweig, Stuart Pittman, Mary Janet Aly, Edgar Donovan, Mary Evelyn Williams, Snowdie Howard, Lois Lois Kaufman, Joyce Swink and Drusilla Phillips, and a piano solo by Edwina Warlick.

Friends here have learned of the marriage of Mr. Jack Hammit De Wees, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. De Wees, to Miss Mary D. Rathbun, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Rathbun of Minden, which was solemnized by Rev. W. L. Doss, at the home of the uncle and aunt of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brown of Homer on Sunday morning, February 10, at 9 o'clock. Mr. De Wees is sanitary engineer for East Carroll parish and Mr. and Mrs. De Wees reached Lake Providence from their honeymoon on Wednesday and for the present are at home to their friends at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. K. Evans in Brown street.

Mrs. N. C. Williamson is at home again after a Carribean cruise, taking in Havana, the Panama canal and other interesting points.

Suits
Pay Back Interest
$18.85

Others $12.95 to $65

There's as much interest in the back of these suits as there is in the front . . . that goes for the hip length jacket styles with their byswing backs, the trotteur, two-thirds and even three-quarter length suits with either fitted back or swagger types. But that isn't all, you'll be thrilled with the fine fabrics of basket weaves in solid colors or tweeds in bold patterns . . . the fine workmanship which gives perfect fit is another source of interest and of course, such quality at such low prices is to say the least appealing.

Bubbling Springs

Someone the other day said of a man: "He is like a bubbling spring bubbling up through the quicksands. Plug him up at one place, and he invariably comes up at another."

What are you going to do with a spring that simply will not be stopped up or broken off? It is something to reckon with. When such a spring is in the right place, it is fine. It serves mankind. But when it is in the wrong place, it is bad.

Once we observed a group of builders, engaged in the construction of a business block, wrestling with a spring that had been uncovered in excavating for the foundation. That spring simply would not be stopped. So the contractors with all their force and ingenuity wrestled for weeks with that solitary little spring before they could devise a way to make it go some other way.

The person who is a bubbling spring of endless perseverance and push is hard to beat. He does not need much brains. No matter how mediocre his ability, he will, if he keeps up the pressure, get somewhere; he will tire out and discourage persons a hundred times more capable than he, but having less persistency, less bubble.

But the bubbling spring person, if he happens to be going wrong, can be as bad in the wrong way as he could be good in the right way. Take, for instance, that bubbling-spring fellow, Dillinger, who was shot down like a dog after having made himself the most notorious criminal of his particular day; he was a vivid example of a bubbling spring gone wrong. If Dillinger's persistent courage and determination had been directed constructively, what a fine help he might have been to the welfare of humanity!

Suppose anybody who is not getting along very well, or who is getting along very well, should make up his mind that he is going to be a Dillinger gone right instead of wrong. Suppose that you, if you feel like a dried up spring, should make up your mind that you are going to bubble, and bubble hard and high, and keep on bubbling until you die. Suppose that you, if conditions aren't so rosy with you now, should say to yourself, "I'm going out to do something, and I'm going to be eternally brave and persistent about it. I'm not going to be brave about shooting up banks and killing officers and defying the entire United States until they get me. But I'm going to be brave and persistent about going after something I should have and going some places I should go; and I'm going to keep that up, defying all forces of discouragement and opposition until I get some place and accomplish something."

Should you adopt such an attitude and make it chronic, it would be as easy to push down a spring bubbling up through the quicksands as to hold you down.

CRUSADE FOR QUIET

Everyone who has had his eardrums rattled by the tooting of automobile horns—long since a major part of the noise of every city—will read with wonderment and perhaps with hope of the remarkable adventures in the realm of quiet in London, Berlin and especially in Rome.

Last fall the British minister of transportation instituted regulations barring the use of automobile horns between the hours of 11:30 p. m. and 7 a. m. in London and all other British cities and towns with lampposts less than 200 years apart. They met with notable success. Then the authorities of Berlin put similar regulations in effect with equally satisfactory results. Now comes Premier Mussolini with a like attack on the noise nuisance in Rome except that his ban on the motorcar horns is in effect all 24 hours. He imposed this rigid rule after successfully experimenting with a night-time ban.

The results reported from Rome are phenomenal. Traffic moves in silence. No whistles of traffic policemen are heard. The first day there were only 36 violators who were fined $5 each and compelled to pay on the spot. Only nine minor accidents were registered, all caused by skidding, as compared to 18 accidents and two deaths on the same day in the previous year when horns were in full blast. When it is considered that three-quarters of the streets in the center of the city are very narrow and have no sidewalks and that Rome has been reputedly one of the noisiest cities in the world, the results are all the more remarkable.

We do not suffer, of course, as much as they do in the larger cities and particularly in New York. But we suffer enough, and it is an especially painful sort of suffering in that most of it is unnecessary. If the crusade for quiet is actually so successful on foreign shores, we hope it won't take long to cross to these.

A lifebelt from the U. S. lightship Rose was found on the beach at Victoria, B. C., 300 miles from where it was lost at Tillamook, Ore., five days earlier.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

ALL ABOUT WHALES

After reading a scientific article concerning them.

The baby whale may flap his tail
And spout the spray in air;
His life will be
Extremely free
From one grave form of care.
He may have many bitter foes
And but a few true friends
But anyway, he always knows
He hasn't got the bends.

The pressure of the briny deep,
Although it may be high,
Will not affect
His intellect
Nor dim his gaping eye.
The depths of oceans he may sound—
He sounds a lot in fact—
But, while he darts and swims around
No bends does he contract.

No man, no ordinary fish,
Can dive a tenth so deep;
But he dives miles
And merely smiles,
And takes a nice long sleep.
And here my knowledge of the whale
And his upbringing ends;
He's lithe and husky, strong and hale,
And never gets the bends.

An Orphan's Need

By BRUCE CATTON

The orphaned child, like the poor, is always with us; and in these times when demands on the public purse are almost innumerable, we do fairly well when we provide such children with board and lodging.

But to go that far is only to scratch the surface of the problem. The orphan eventually will become an adult and take his place in the complex human society that has supported him; and if he is to be as useful a social unit as we want him to be, we must give him a great deal more than food and shelter while he is in our care.

All this was brought out not long ago, when members of the Welfare Council of New York City gathered for a conference on the care of dependent children. And these people agreed that society is only doing part of its job when it removes the orphan from the fear of hunger and cold.

Now this is an important thing to remember, because we tend to get a warped idea of the kind of training a child should receive in the institution which is caring for him.

The natural tendency is to establish a routine which will train him to get along in the institution; to give him such discipline and teaching, in other words, as will lead him to abide by the rules, to get along with the other children, and to refrain from those pranks and misdemeanors which put gray hairs on the heads of orphanage staffs.

Yet we can do all this and still fail in our main job—which is to prepare the youngster for adult life.

The child may learn how to adjust itself to life in the institution, as speakers at the New York conference pointed out, and still be unable to adjust himself to the life he will enter when he grows ups.

And this, in turn, means that the intangibles are of paramount importance in this situation. We owe the child not merely a place to eat and sleep, but the best possible substitute we can devise for the kind of social training which luckier children get in their own homes.

The present moment is a good one for considering that point. It is harder than ever before to find money for these institutions; the simplest way is to eliminate the "frills" and concentrate on food, clothing, and buildings. But to do that is to defeat our own purpose.

These children in orphanages are going to be grown men and women in a few years. The kind of men and women they will be will depend in large part on the wisdom and generosity with which we approach the matter of their training now.

New Deal In Washington

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—It made hardly the slightest difference whether or not this nation entered the world court.

Except for a few rabid isolationists, nearly everyone in Washington agreed on that. The sound and fury in the senate over the issue was a sort of town joke—even on Capitol Hill.

But the court's defeat is a matter of grave concern to the New Dealers because of certain menacing shadows it casts before. Mr. Roosevelt, the great popular leader, is confronted by other rabble-rousers with large popular followings of their own.

For the first time, the administration has been licked through efforts of a combination of leaders whom its members call "demagogs," "crackpots," "blatherskites" and similarly uncomplimentary names. It may not be the last time.

Blame Trio for Defeat

There's no question, of course, that Father Coughlin, William Randolph Hearst, and Huey Long defeated the world court. They aroused masses of voters to fever heat and stirred up the pressure, the tens of thousands of telegrams which pushed Democratic senators out of the administration ranks.

Liberal New Dealers who fear Fascist tendencies in America, although conceding that entry or non-entry into the world court was utterly unimportant, are whispering that here was drummed up the same type of nationalistic fervor which Hitler and Mussolini used so effectively in attaining power.

People generally hadn't been excited about the court. But a straw man was set up and they were whipped to a fury against it. And some New Dealers insist it gives them the creeps.

Officials figure that "demagogs" such as Coughlin, Long, and Dr. Townsend will be encouraged to new efforts.

Townsend, the old age pension man, had nothing to do with the court fight. But thousands of telegrams against the court contained grim threats similar to those with which his followers assure congressmen they'll be "cleaned out" in 1936 unless they espouse his plan.

Strategy Was Wrong

If the vote had been forced by Friday or Saturday instead of being allowed to go over to Tuesday, giving Coughlin a chance to take the air, the court protocols would have been ratified.

Administration leaders were overconfident and felt it would be a smart thing not to let the senate get a too early start on the administration's unpopular five-billion dollar relief bill. Now hardly anybody thinks the idea was so smart.

The state department crowd is discouraged—and its feeling is shared at the White House—because of the unquestionable hampering effect the defeat will have on Roosevelt's efforts for international cooperation and world peace.

Almost any bid Roosevelt makes in that direction now will be met by cynical European suggestions that it doesn't mean anything, because the senate wouldn't support him.

Bad Effect Overseas

The munitions control treaty proposed by Secretary Hull, the assertion of Norman Davis at Geneva that America would "consult" with other nations in efforts to stave off war, and current moves toward a new neutrality policy designed to keep us out of war are all now squirming under a wet blanket.

It all piles up into considerable irony because it's so commonly admitted by detached observers that we had nothing to lose and little to gain by entering the court.

Belief that entry would be little more than a gesture of good will was responsible for the lukewarmth of the fight for ratification.

The plain fact is that the administration had no idea how badly it was going to feel on the morning after.

Your Income Tax

This is one of a series of articles on the subject of the federal income tax, prepared by the Internal Revenue Department. The last day for filing federal income tax returns for the year 1934 is March 15, 1935.

NO. 4
Personal Exemptions

In addition to the personal exemption of $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together and for heads of families, a taxpayer is entitled to a credit of $400 for each dependent, defined by income tax law and regulations as a person under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective. The term "mentally or physically defective" means not only cripples and those mentally defective but persons in ill health and the aged.

In order to be entitled to the $400 credit, the taxpayer must furnish the dependent his or her chief support. The credit is based upon actual financial dependency and not mere legal dependency. For example, a father whose children receive half or more of their support from a trust fund or other separate source is not entitled to the credit.

Neither relationship nor residence is a factor in the allowance of the $400 credit for a dependent. The taxpayer and the dependent may be residents of different cities. If husband and wife both contribute to the support of a dependent, the $400 credit may be taken by the one contributing the chief support, and may not be divided between them.

A single person who supports in his home an aged mother is entitled not only to the $400 credit for a dependant, but also to the personal exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family. A widower supporting under similar circumstances a dependent child under 18 years of age also is entitled to the personal exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family, plus the $400 credit for a dependent.

Under the Revenue Act of 1934 both the personal exemption and the credit for dependents are required to be pro-rated where the status of the taxpayer changed during the year.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

WHERE TIME STANDS STILL.—Our system of measuring time is based upon the motion of the earth upon its own axis. The inhabitants of the earth do not realize this motion, it appearing instead that the sun moves around the earth. When the sun crosses the meridian we call it noon and begin the day 12 hours afterwards. Noon continually travels around the earth at the rate of one hour for every 15 degrees of longitude. Each hour's difference constitutes a different time zone. At the South Pole where all meridians merge into one, all the various systems of measuring time become one. As a result all clocks, whether slow or fast, or even when they stand still, show the correct time at the South Pole. But the passage of time remains unaffected. The earth still requires 24 hours to revolve on its axis, and 365 times 24 hours are required before the earth will accomplish its annual evolution around the sun. Admiral Byrd when exactly at the South Pole can hear any program that is on the air at the same time, regardless of time zones, but he cannot anticipate the future or any program that lies even a minute ahead.

Lights Of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—Meanderings backstage: Pity Melville Cooper. Mr. Cooper is a comedian in the cast of "Laburnum Grove," and during every performance he has to eat four bananas. On matinee days he has to eat eight bananas. The play ran 436 performances in London before it, together with Mr. Cooper and his appetite, was brought to Broadway. And so Mr. Cooper will soon devour his two-thousandth banana. He still looks surprisingly well.

The Shubert boys, of whom little has been heard of late, will have a new Ziegfeld Follies ready for the spring . . . Charles B. Cochran, London's greatest showman, and the man who brought Elizabeth Bergner to these shores, has managed in his day a circus, several prize-fights, tennis matches, a rodeo, a hotel, a cabaret, Houdini, Will Rogers and Sarah Bernhardt . . . The Theater Guild cabled Bernard Shaw for permission to abbreviate the title of his "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles." Mr. Shaw said "no" in 20 words.

Realism

Notes on realism: The revival of "Rain," in which Tallulah Bankhead is about to reign, will be the wettest "Rain" ever staged. Showers here and there; stage-hands in slickers and boots; a man to drench Miss Bankhead as she goes on stage. Even the sound effects will be produced by falling water instead of buckshot being swished around in a dishpan.

Six of the thirteen "Sailors of Cattaro," who must chip rust, polish brass and swab decks in stage, actually have been sailors . . . Then there is the matter of Alfred Lunt playing the accordion in Noel Coward's "Point Valaine." Accustomed to the half-hearted pretenses of most stage musicians, who bring forth lovely music without even pressing down the keys of a piano, I was skeptical about Mr. Lunt and his accordian. He really plays it, though. Says he learned up at Gennessee Depot, Wis., last summer while Lynn Fontanne, his wife, was hoeing the potatoes.

Fear "Pastures" Ban

Three new European plays are being imported . . . "The Green Pastures," returning to Manhattan for a fifth-birthday festival, has toured practically all of the United States. Yet no company has bought the movie rights for fear it might be banned in some parts of the country . . . Helen Broderick's friends say she has quit the stage for good and all . . . Florence Robinson's first stage job was testing the flying apparatus by which Eva Le Gallienne flitted about in "Peter Pan."

The great Bergner, who's being compared to Duse and Bernhardt, isn't in the least imposing in stature. About five feet tall, and sort of elfin. Shy, too. As a kid she was even afraid to get up in school and recite . . . Roland Young has returned from Hollywood. And is welcome. His principal enthusiasm just now concerns a new bronze penguin. He collects them.

Flush Stages Comeback

A great many people will be glad to know that Flush, Katharine Cornell's cocker spaniel, is about to resume his stage career. He'll resume it where he left off, in "The Barrets of Wimpole Street," a Broadway revival Miss Cornell will be in it too.

Recently there have been some malicious rumors about Flush—that he had gone blind, that he had the gout, that he had bitten Guthrie McClintic, Miss Cornell's husband, that he had run away to Hollywood, that he had given up acting and was going to write a play. No truth in any of those. Flush is still a fine figure of a dog, only five years old and practically a juvenile.

It is true that he has been moping in his mistress' dressing room while she has appeared in "Romeo and Juliet." But that is because Flush doesn't like Shakespeare. No dog parts.

Profitable Art

Let no one tell you that the theater these days is a profitless art. There's "Tobacco Road," well past its 500th performance by now, and rolling up a net gain ten times its cost . . . "The Drunkard," a tear-jerker rudely exhumed from the 1850s has grossed $140,000 in Manhattan.

Neither of these plays has been sold to the movies, but consider a few that have. "Merrily We Roll Along" brought a cool $75,000. "Anything Goes," to top musical, will command something like $100,000. "Dodsworth" may bring as much. Even "Page Miss Glory," which was not the best of the season's comedies, was worth $72,500 to Hollywood.

I really must try to write a play. It looks so easy.

Bubbling Springs

Someone the other day said of a man: "He is like a bubbling spring bubbling up through the quicksands. Plug him up at one place, and he invaribly comes up at another."

What are you going to do with a spring that simply will not be stopped up or broken off? It is something to reckon with. When such a spring is in the right place, it is fine. It serves mankind. But when it is in the wrong place, it is bad.

Once we observed a group of builders, engaged in the construction of a business block, wrestling with a spring that had been uncovered in excavating for the foundation. That spring simply would not be stopped. So the contractors with all their force and ingenuity wrestled for weeks with that solitary little spring before they could devise a way to make it go some other way.

The person who is a bubbling spring of endless perseverance and push is hard to beat. He does not need much brains. No matter how mediocre his ability, he will, if he keeps up the pressure, get somewhere; he will tire out and discourage persons a hundred times more capable than he, but having less persistency, less bubble.

But the bubbling spring person, if he happens to be going wrong, can be as bad in the wrong way as he could be good in the right way. Take, for instance, that bubbling-spring fellow, Dillinger, who was shot down like a dog after having made himself the most notorious criminal of his particular day; he was a vivid example of a bubbling spring gone wrong. If Dillinger's persistent courage and determination had been directed constructively, what a fine help he might have been to the welfare of humanity!

Suppose anybody who is not getting along very well, or who is getting along very well, should make up his mind that he is going to be a Dillinger gone right instead of wrong. Suppose that you, if you feel like a dried up spring, should make up your mind that you are going to bubble, and bubble hard and high, and keep on bubbling until you die. Suppose that you, if conditions aren't so rosy with you now, should say to yourself, "I'm going out to do something, and I'm going to be eternally brave and persistent about it. I'm not going to be brave about shooting up banks and killing officers and defying the entire United States until they get me. But I'm going to be brave and persistent about going after something I should have and going some places I should go; and I'm going to keep that up, defying all forces of discouragement and opposition until I get some place and accomplish something."

Should you adopt such an attitude and make it chronic, it would be as easy to push down a spring bubbling up through the quicksands as to hold you down.

CRUSADE FOR QUIET

Everyone who has had his eardrums rattled by the tooting of automobile horns—long since a major part of the noise of every city—will read with wonderment and perhaps with hope of the remarkable adventures in the realm of quiet in London, Berlin and especially in Rome.

Last fall the British minister of transportation instituted regulations barring the use of automobile horns between the hours of 11:30 p. m. and 7 a. m. in London and all other British cities and towns with lampposts less than 200 yards apart. They met with notable success. Then the authorities of Berlin put similar regulations in effect with equally satisfactory results. Now comes Premier Mussolini with a like attack on the noise nuisance in Rome except that his ban on the motorcar horns is in effect all 24 hours. He imposed this rigid rule after successfully experimenting with a night-time ban.

The results reported from Rome are phenomenal. Traffic moves in silence. No whistles of traffic policemen are heard. The first day there were only 36 violators who were fined $5 each and compelled to pay on the spot. Only nine minor accidents were registered, all caused by skidding, as compared to 18 accidents and two deaths on the same day in the previous year when horns were in full blast. When it is considered that three-quarters of the streets in the center of the city are very narrow and have no sidewalks and that Rome has been reputedly one of the noisiest cities in the world, the results are all the more remarkable.

We do not suffer, of course, as much as they do in the larger cities and particularly in New York. But we suffer enough, and it is an especially painful sort of suffering in that most of it is unnecessary. If the crusade for quiet is actually so successful on foreign shores, we hope it won't take long to cross to these.

A lifebelt from the U. S. lightship Rose was found on the beach at Victoria, B. C., 300 miles from where it was lost at Tillamook, Ore., five days earlier.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

ALL ABOUT WHALES

After reading a scientific article concerning them.

The baby whale may flap his tail
And spout the spray in air;
His life will be
Extremely free
From one grave form of care.
He may have many bitter foes
And but a few true friends
But anyway, he always knows
He hasn't got the bends.

The pressure of the briny deep,
Although it may be high,
Will not affect
His intellect
Nor dim his gaping eye.
The depths of oceans he may sound—
He sounds a lot in fact—
But, while he darts and swims around
No bends does he contract.

No man, no ordinary fish,
Can dive a tenth so deep;
But he dives miles
And merely smiles,
And takes a nice long sleep.
And here my knowledge of the whale
And his upbringing ends;
He's lithe and husky, strong and hale,
And never gets the bends.

An Orphan's Need

By BRUCE CATTON

The orphaned child, like the poor, is always with us; and in these times when demands on the public purse are almost innumerable, we do fairly well when we provide such children with board and lodging.

But to go that far is only to scratch the surface of the problem. The orphan eventually will become an adult and take his place in the complex human society that has supported him; and if he is to be as useful a social unit as we want him to be, we must give him a great deal more than food and shelter while he is in our care.

All this was brought out not long ago, when members of the Welfare Council of New York City gathered for a conference on the care of dependent children. And these people agreed that society is only doing part of its job when it removes the orphan from the fear of hunger and cold.

Now this is an important thing to remember, because we tend to get a warped idea of the kind of training a child should receive in the institution which is caring for him.

The natural tendency is to establish a routine which will train him to get along in the institution; to give him such discipline and teaching, in other words, as will lead him to abide by the rules, to get along with the other children, and to refrain from those pranks and misdemeanors which put gray hairs on the heads of orphanage staffs.

Yet we can do all this and still fail in our main job—which is to prepare the youngster for adult life.

The child may learn how to adjust itself to life in the institution, as speakers at the New York conference pointed out, and still be unable to adjust himself to the life he will enter when he grows ups.

And this, in turn, means that the intangibles are of paramount importance in this situation. We owe the child not merely a place to eat and sleep, but the best possible substitute we can devise for the kind of social training which luckier children get in their own homes.

The present moment is a good one for considering that point. It is harder than ever before to find money for these institutions; the simplest way is to eliminate the "frills" and concentrate on food, clothing, and buildings. But to do that is to defeat our own purpose.

These children in orphanages are going to be grown men and women in a few years. The kind of men and women they will be will depend in large part on the wisdom and generosity with which we approach the matter of their training now.

New Deal In Washington

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—It made hardly the slightest difference whether or not this nation entered the world court.

Except for a few rabid isolationists, nearly everyone in Washington agreed on that. The sound and fury in the senate over the issue was a sort of town joke—even on Capitol Hill.

But the court's defeat is a matter of grave concern to the New Dealers because of certain menacing shadows it casts before. Mr. Roosevelt, the great popular leader, is confronted by other rabble-rousers with large popular followings of their own.

For the first time, the administration has been licked through efforts of a combination of leaders whom its members call "demagogs," "crackpots," "blatherskites" and similarly uncomplimentary names. It may not be the last time.

Blame Trio for Defeat

There's no question, of course, that Father Coughlin, William Randolph Hearst, and Huey Long defeated the world court. They aroused masses of voters to fever heat and stirred up the pressure, the tens of thousands of telegrams which pushed Democratic senators out of the administration ranks.

Liberal New Dealers who fear Fascist tendencies in America, although conceding that entry or non-entry into the world court was utterly unimportant, are whispering that here was drummed up the same type of nationalistic fervor which Hitler and Mussolini used so effectively in attaining power.

People generally hadn't been excited about the court. But a straw man was set up and they were whipped to a fury against it. And some New Dealers insist it gives them the creeps.

Officials figure that "demagogs" such as Coughlin, Long, and Dr. Townsend will be encouraged to new efforts.

Townsend, the old age pension man, had nothing to do with the court fight. But thousands of telegrams against the court contained grim threats similar to those with which his followers assure congressmen they'll be "cleaned out" in 1936 unless they espouse his plan.

Strategy Was Wrong

If the vote had been forced by Friday or Saturday instead of being allowed to go over to Tuesday, giving Coughlin a chance to take the air, the court protocols would have been ratified.

Administration leaders were overconfident and felt it would be a smart thing not to let the senate get a too early start on the administration's unpopular five-billion dollar relief bill. Now hardly anybody thinks the idea was so smart.

The state department crowd is discouraged—and its feeling is shared at the White House—because of the unquestionable hampering effect the defeat will have on Roosevelt's efforts for international cooperation and world peace.

Almost any bid Roosevelt makes in that direction now will be met by cynical European suggestions that it doesn't mean anything, because the senate wouldn't support him.

Bad Effect Overseas

The munitions control treaty proposed by Secretary Hull, the assertion of Norman Davis at Geneva that America would "consult" with other nations in efforts to stave off war, and current moves toward a new neutrality policy designed to keep us out of war are all now squirming under a wet blanket.

It all piles up into considerable irony because it's so commonly admitted by detached observers that we had nothing to lose and little to gain by entering the court.

Belief that entry would be little more than a gesture of good will was responsible for the lukewarmth of the fight for ratification.

The plain fact is that the administration had no idea how badly it was going to feel on the morning after.

Your Income Tax

This is one of a series of articles on the subject of the federal income tax, prepared by the Internal Revenue Department. The last day for filing federal income tax returns for the year 1934 is March 15, 1935.

NO. 4
Personal Exemptions

In addition to the personal exemption of $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together and for heads of families, a taxpayer is entitled to a credit of $400 for each dependent, defined by income tax law and regulations as a person under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective. The term "mentally or physically defective" means not only cripples and those mentally defective but persons in ill health and the aged.

In order to be entitled to the $400 credit, the taxpayer must furnish the dependent his or her chief support. The credit is based upon actual financial dependency and not mere legal dependency. For example, a father whose children receive half or more of their support from a trust fund or other separate source is not entitled to the credit.

Neither relationship nor residence is a factor in the allowance of the $400 credit for a dependent. The taxpayer and the dependent may be residents of different cities. If husband and wife both contribute to the support of a dependent, the $400 credit may be taken by the one contributing the chief support, and may not be divided between them.

A single person who supports in his home an aged mother is entitled not only to the $400 credit for a dependant, but also to the personal exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family. A widower supporting under similar circumstances a dependent child under 18 years of age also is entitled to the personal exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family, plus the $400 credit for a dependent.

Under the Revenue Act of 1934 both the personal exemption and the credit for dependents are required to be pro-rated where the status of the taxpayer changed during the year.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

WHERE TIME STANDS STILL.—Our system of measuring time is based upon the motion of the earth upon its own axis. The inhabitants of the earth do not realize this motion, it appearing instead that the sun moves around the earth. When the sun crosses the meridian we call it noon and begin the day 12 hours afterwards. Noon continually travels around the earth at the rate of one hour for every 15 degrees of longitude. Each hour's difference constitutes a different time zone. At the South Pole where all meridians merge into one, all the various systems of measuring time become one. As a result all clocks, whether slow or fast, or even when they stand still, show the correct time at the South Pole. But the passage of time remains unaffected. The earth still requires 24 hours to revolve on its axis, and 365 times 24 hours are required before the earth will accomplish its annual evolution around the sun. Admiral Byrd when exactly at the South Pole can hear any program that is on the air at the same time, regardless of time zones, but he cannot anticipate the future or any program that lies even a minute ahead.

Lights Of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—Meanderings backstage: Pity Melville Cooper. Mr. Cooper is a comedian in the cast of "Laburnum Grove," and during every performance he has to eat four bananas. On matinee days he has to eat eight bananas. The play ran 436 performances in London before it, together with Mr. Cooper and his appetite, was brought to Broadway. And so Mr. Cooper will soon devour his two-thousandth banana. He still looks surprisingly well.

The Shubert boys, of whom little has been heard of late, will have a new Ziegfeld Follies ready for the spring . . . Charles B. Cochran, London's greatest showman, and the man who brought Elizabeth Bergner to these shores, has managed in his day a circus, several prize-fights, tennis matches, a rodeo, a hotel, a cabaret, Houdini, Will Rogers and Sarah Bernhardt . . . The Theater Guild cabled Bernard Shaw for permission to abbreviate the title of his "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles." Mr. Shaw said "no" in 20 words.

Realism

Notes on realism: The revival of "Rain," in which Tallulah Bankhead is about to reign, will be the wettest "Rain" ever staged. Showers here and there; stage-hands in slickers and boots; a man to drench Miss Bankhead as she goes on stage. Even the sound effects will be produced by falling water instead of buckshot being swished around in a dishpan.

Six of the thirteen "Sailors of Cattaro," who must chip rust, polish brass and swab decks in stage, actually have been sailors . . . Then there is the matter of Alfred Lunt playing the accordion in Noel Coward's "Point Valaine." Accustomed to the half-hearted pretenses of most stage musicians, who bring forth lovely music without even pressing down the keys of a piano, I was skeptical about Mr. Lunt and his accordian. He really plays it, though. Says he learned up at Gennessee Depot, Wis., last summer while Lynn Fontanne, his wife, was hoeing the potatoes.

Fear "Pastures" Ban

Three new European plays are being imported . . . "The Green Pastures," returning to Manhattan for a fifth-birthday festival, has toured practically all of the United States. Yet no company has bought the movie rights for fear it might be banned in some parts of the country . . . Helen Broderick's friends say she has quit the stage for good and all . . . Florence Robinson's first stage job was testing the flying apparatus by which Eva Le Gallienne flitted about in "Peter Pan."

The great Bergner, who's being compared to Duse and Bernhardt, isn't in the least imposing in stature. About five feet tall, and sort of elfin. Shy, too. As a kid she was even afraid to get up in school and recite . . . Roland Young has returned from Hollywood. And is welcome. His principal enthusiasm just now concerns a new bronze penguin. He collects them.

Flush Stages Comeback

A great many people will be glad to know that Flush, Katharine Cornell's cocker spaniel, is about to resume his stage career. He'll resume it where he left off, in "The Barrets of Wimpole Street," a Broadway revival Miss Cornell will be in it too.

Recently there have been some malicious rumors about Flush—that he had gone blind, that he had the gout, that he had bitten Guthrie McClintic, Miss Cornell's husband, that he had run away to Hollywood, that he had given up acting and was going to write a play. No truth in any of those. Flush is still a fine figure of a dog, only five years old and practically a juvenile.

It is true that he has been moping in his mistress' dressing room while she has appeared in "Romeo and Juliet." But that is because Flush doesn't like Shakespeare. No dog parts.

Profitable Art

Let no one tell you that the theater these days is a profitless art. There's "Tobacco Road," well past its 500th performance by now, and rolling up a net gain ten times its cost . . . "The Drunkard," a tear-jerker rudely exhumed from the 1850s has grossed $140,000 in Manhattan.

Neither of these plays has been sold to the movies, but consider a few that have. "Merrily We Roll Along" brought a cool $75,000. "Anything Goes," to top musical, will command something like $100,000. "Dodsworth" may bring as much. Even "Page Miss Glory," which was not the best of the season's comedies, was worth $72,500 to Hollywood.

I really must try to write a play. It looks so easy.

HEALTH OFFICER NAMED

JENA, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Dr. E. L. Miller, director of the LaSalle parish health unit, has been elected city health officer by the mayor and board of aldermen of the town of Jena and has actively entered upon his duties with a view of remedying all unsanitary conditions in the city.

EXPERT WITNESS' IDEAS BANNED AT KENNAMER TRIAL

attorneys, however, contend he was temporarily insane.

Judge Mason testified to three acts of irrationality on the part of young Kennamer:

That he once remarked, while pacing Judge Mason's 16th floor office that "it would be a swell place to commit suicide. Just jump out head first."

That he wanted a job on an Oklahoma city newspaper, but wanted to start as editor.

That he told Judge Mason he wanted to be a flier in a Central American revolution and thought he could rule the country as its dictator.

Under cross-examination by W. F. Gilmer, Jr., assistant county prosecutor, Judge Mason said he did not consider it "irrational" for a boy to want adventure in foreign lands nor to own a large newspaper. Both, he said, he considered normal impulses.

Finally Gilmer demanded.

"If you thought this boy hadn't killed that boy, you probably never would have testified he was crazy, would you?"

The witness squirmed.

"That is true. I would not have testified in this way under other circumstances.

"And isn't it true, judge, that you are here testifying in this fashion because this boy's father holds the responsible, powerful position of United States judge for the northern district of Oklahoma?"

"No," Mason said, "I have a high regard for Judge Kennamer's friendship."

Kennamer, described by his attorneys as "brilliant but abnormal," sat with lowered head as his boyhood escapades were recited. His father shielded his eyes from spectators.

The crash of the mighty Macon was compared to "a paper sack exploding" today before the naval court investigating the loss of America's last big dirigible.

The comparison was drawn by Henry Miller, assistant lighthouse keeper at Point Sur, the rocky promontory near where the Macon fell into the ocean last Tuesday.

PRISON INMATES BOO HAUPTMANN

marked Washington, D. C., was mailed at 8 p.m., last night.

Written in a long scrawl, and bearing a crude skull and bones, the letter, addressed to Hoffman, Justice Trenchard, who presided at the Hauptmann trial, and the jury, warned "You may all meet the death of revenge" if Hauptmann's sentence to death is not commuted to "life sentence" by February 27.

The governor said he would turn the letter over to the department of justice.

"I want to have this mark (the skull and cross bones) removed from Hauptmann," the writer of the letter said, "and at least give him life sentence till the kidnaper is found. If not so may you all meet the death of revenge, not even all the army or the state militia can protect you. If you do not make the move mentioned by February 27, it will be bad."

The letter was signed "8-26 and 15,000 people of the U. S. A." In a paragraph beneath the signature, the writer charged the case against Hauptmann was a "frame-up," spoke disparingly of Attorney General David T. Wilentz, chief prosecutor of the one-time German machine gunner, and said New Jersey was "guilty of breaking the federal law."

It was generally believed the letter was the work of a crank, but Governor Hoffman's action in referring it to federal authorities added a serious note to its receipt.

As Hauptmann—now prisoner 17,400—sat in cell 9, six steps from the death chamber which he has been sentenced to enter the week of March 18, his attorneys continued plans to appeal from the conviction.

Egbert Rosecrans of defense counsel, set Tuesday as a tentative date for his appearance before Justice Trenchard to ask that the state bear the expense of appeal. Hauptmann yesterday signed a petition asserting he was a pauper.

Today Hauptmann left Flemington under a guard as heavy as that which accompanied him the night he was brought to the Hunterdon county jail from the Bronx.

Five cars, containing troopers and constables, Sheriff John H. Curtiss, and Warden Harry O. McCrea, made a leisurely trip to Trenton, covering the 24 miles through open country side in 55 minutes.

The prisoner said little on the trip, smoked four cigarettes, watched an airplane overhead. He was bracing himself, his guards felt, for what may be his last public stand.

JUSTICE AGENTS TO PROBE THREAT

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Investigation of threats received by Governor Harold C. Hoffman of New Jersey, in connection with the conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the Lindbergh kidnap-murder was announced today by R. George Harvey, local head of the bureau of investigatoin of the United States justice department.

"Because of the seriousness of the entire case," Harvey said he was "taking no chances" and had sent federal agents to Trenton, N. J., to pick up the trail of a letter received by Governor Hoffman threatening the governor, the jury that convicted Hauptmann, and Thomas W. Trenchard, justice of the supreme court before whom the case was tried.

GOLD DECISION IS SEEN MONDAY

ings, in the event that the decision goes against the government.

However, among the governors, sentiment is understood to be that the market should remain open for business as usual, but with all dealings subject to the strictest regulation.

If the decision is not announced on Monday, it probably would be withheld until at least March 4, since the court's schedule calls for a fortnight's recess beginning after the announcement of opinions day after tomorrow.

The capital kept close watch on the court throughout the day looking for another Saturday statement. Newspapermen congregated in the office of the court clerk, Charles Elmore Cropley, who, too, was waiting for Chief Justice Hughes to authorize an announcement.

However, the chief justice departed and Cropley merely said:

"There is nothing I can say. The court has gone and has not authorized any statement of its plans for Monday."

The court must decide whether congress had constitutional authority for invalidating promises to pay in gold or its equivalent. An adverse decision would make some $100,000,000,000 in outstanding public and private bonds redeemable at $169,000,000,000 in the present devalued currency.

Government counsel told the court "chaos" would result, and experts of the justice department and the treasury have since devised courses of action intended to meet any eventuality of the decision.

Generally the attitude of the administration has been that no decision adverse to the government was expected. Nevertheless, all possible steps have been taken for counter-action in case of such a decision. Congressional leaders have conferred with Mr. Roosevelt on the situation, and, with the preparations made by the treasury and justice departments quick action generally is expected should the court rule the government had been wrong in abrogating the gold payment clause found in many contracts.

2 FRENCH FLIERS SPEED OUT OVER SOUTH ATLANTIC

miles away, and officials at Le Bourget field believed they might well complete the crossing in 65 hours.

With the same lack of concern that has characterized their previous flights, the two old hands at long distance flying limited themselves to brief, unadorned reports to air France radio stations along the route.

Three and one-half hours after the take-off they passed over Cap Nao, radio advices said. At 2:10 p.m. (9:10 a.m. E.S.T.) they were over Tangier, Morocco, and at 3:16 p.m. (10:16 a.m., E. S. T.) they arrived over Rabat on the northern coast of Africa.

With ideal weather reported over the whole of their 6,875-mile route, Codos and Rossi, the only airmen ever to fly the north Atlantic both ways, hoped to reach their goal, Buenos Aires, in less than 70 hours.

They will thus exceed their New York-Syria long distance record of 5,653 miles by more than 2,000 miles.

Thoroughly overhauled since Codos and Rossi flew it from Paris to New York in an attempted record-breaking flight to California last May, the old Joseph LeBrix carried 1,875 gallons of gasoline and 92 gallons of oil.

For the first time the plane, which weighed nearly 10 tons when loaded, carried mail, about 120 pounds of it. Codos and Rossi were seeking to show that non-stop flights are possible for mail-carrying planes. The air ministry financed the venture.

Powering the Joseph LeBrix was the same 500-horsepower motor that propelled it from New York to Rayak, Syria, in August, 1933, for the present record, and pulled it back across the ocean from Paris to New York last May to complete the two-way crossing.

onetted a thirty-third degree Mason in 1915.

A native of Marion, La., Mr. Thomas was a graduate of the law school at the University of Virginia where he received his degree in 1887.

Previously he attended Howard college, formerly located at Marion, Ala., where he was graduated with an A. B. degree.

After his college days he returned to Louisiana and began the practice of law at Farmerville in Union parish. He moved to Shreveport in 1896.

In 1931 he was elected grand secretary of the Louisiana Masonic organization and moved his residence to New Orleans.

Mr. Thomas is survived by his widow, the former Miss Florence Smith, a sister of James M. Smith, former state treasurer.

CHANGE IS MADE AT WORK OFFICE

to the office here were brought about as a result of civil service examinations.

In commenting upon the changes here Saturday, Mr. Bishop said that they were made strictly on a merit basis and that no influence was brought to bear in any way. All examinations were conducted by federal representatives from Washington and the identities of those being examined were kept secret, to preclude the possibility of any personal favoritism or prejudice.

Before being allowed to take a written test, applicants were required to meet with certain requirements as to education and experience. These were shown in the applications. Those who met these requirements were then allowed to take the written examinations and their papers were sent in to Washington to be graded.

If the applicant made a satisfactory grade on his written test he was given an oral interview by an agent from Washington, with neither the person being interviewed nor the interviewer knowing the identity of the other. A number was issued to the person to be interviewed before he went in for the interview.

After the different classes of examinations were completed, grades made on experience, education, the written examination and the oral interview were averaged and the final grade of the applicant was determined.

Mr. Bishop said he made this explanation in order that there would be no misunderstanding in regard to the changes.

TOWNSEND PLAN GIVEN RIDICULE

taken two years to build up an army of 4,000,000 during the war.

"Would we have much trouble drafting people to take this pension?" asked Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas.

Townsend argued that spending of the $200 pensions for commodities or services would revive business.

"Would shooting craps with half a dozen other fellows be services?" asked Harrison.

"Oh, no," Townsend replied, somewhat indignantly.

"But buying the dice would be a commodity," Senator Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky interjected. Then the Kentucky senator asked:

"What would these people buy with $200 a month?"

"Why, bless your soul," the doctor replied. "I should think anyone who ever had that salary would know. They would buy a car, rebuild their home, refurnish it, travel, buy books, get things for their children."

Senator Black, Democrat, Alabama, asked if it was fair to make the wage earners pay a sales tax to provide pensions for Rockefellers and Fords.

"There are only three or four Fords and Rockefellers in the country," Townsend replied.

Church Carnival Is Ended Last Evening

The three-day carnival sponsored by the congregation of the St. Matthew's Catholic church and held in the former Adler building on South Grand street was brought to a close last night. Large crowds thronged the carnival building during each of the days and evenings on which it was held, and it was declared to have been a complete success.

Members of the carnival committees who worked at the booths and concessions were animated by an enthusiastic spirit and performed their duties with the zeal of professional barkers.

Meals were served in the carnival building and a dance was held each evening. A number of prizes were awarded.

Life insurance companies tell us that the gradual breakdown of the human body causes more deaths every year than disease germs

IF your physical let-down is caused by a lowered red-blood-cell and hemo-glo-bin content in the blood—then S.S.S. is waiting to help you... though, if you suspect an organic trouble, you will, of course, want to consult a physician or surgeon.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic. It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food is better utilized... and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

You should feel and look years younger with life giving and purifying blood surging through your body. You owe this to yourself and friends.

Make S.S.S. your health safeguard and, unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food... sound sleep... steady nerves... a good complexion... and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today. © S.S.S. Co.

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest that you gamble with substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

[EX]PERT WITNESS' [I]DEAS BANNED AT KENNAMER TRIAL

torneys, however, contend he was temporarily insane.

Judge Mason testified to three acts of irrationality on the part of young Kennamer:

That he once remarked, while pacing Judge Mason's 16th floor office that "it would be a swell place to commit suicide. Just jump out head first."

That he wanted a job on an Oklahoma city newspaper, but wanted to start as editor.

That he told Judge Mason he wanted to be a flier in a Central American revolution and thought he could rule the country as its dictator.

Under cross-examination by W. F. Gilmer, Jr., assistant county prosecutor, Judge Mason said he did not consider it "irrational" for a boy to want adventure in foreign lands nor to own a large newspaper. Both, he said, he considered normal impulses.

Finally Gilmer demanded.

"If you thought this boy hadn't killed that boy, you probably never would have testified he was crazy, would you?"

The witness squirmed.

"That is true. I would not have testified in this way under other circumstances.

"And isn't it true, judge, that you are here testifying in this fashion because this boy's father holds the responsible, powerful position of United States judge for the northern district of Oklahoma?"

"No," Mason said, "I have a high regard for Judge Kennamer's friendship."

Kennamer, described by his attorneys as "brilliant but abnormal," sat with lowered head as his boyhood escapades were recited. His father shielded his eyes from spectators.

The crash of the mighty Macon was compared to "a paper sack exploding" today before the naval court investigating the loss of America's last big dirigible.

The comparison was drawn by Henry Miller, assistant lighthouse keeper at Point Sur, the rocky promontory near where the Macon fell into the ocean last Tuesday.

marked Washington, D. C., was mailed at 8 p.m., last night.

Written in a long scrawl, and bearing a crude skull and bones, the letter, addressed to Hoffman, Justice Trenchard, who presided at the Hauptmann trial, and the jury, warned "You may all meet the death of revenge" if Hauptmann's sentence to death is not commuted to "life sentence" by February 27.

The governor said he would turn the letter over to the department of justice.

"I want to have this mark (the skull and cross bones) removed from Hauptmann," the writer of the letter said, "and at least give him life sentence till the kidnaper is found. If not so may you all meet the death of revenge, not even all the army or the state militia can protect you. If you do not make the move mentioned by February 27, it will be bad."

The letter was signed "8-26 and 15,000 people of the U. S. A." In a paragraph beneath the signature, the writer charged the case against Hauptmann was a "frame-up," spoke disparingly of Attorney General David T. Wilentz, chief prosecutor of the one-time German machine gunner, and said New Jersey was "guilty of breaking the federal law."

It was generally believed the letter was the work of a crank, but Governor Hoffman's action in referring it to federal authorities added a serious note to its receipt.

As Hauptmann—now prisoner 17,400—sat in cell 9, six steps from the death chamber which he has been sentenced to enter the week of March 18, his attorneys continued plans to appeal from the conviction.

Egbert Rosecrans of defense counsel, set Tuesday as a tentative date for his appearance before Justice Trenchard to ask that the state bear the expense of appeal. Hauptmann yesterday signed a petition asserting he was a pauper.

Today Hauptmann left Flemington under a guard as heavy as that which accompanied him the night he was brought to the Hunterdon county jail from the Bronx.

Five cars, containing troopers and constables, Sheriff John H. Curtiss, and Warden Harry O. McCrea, made a leisurely trip to Trenton, covering the 24 miles through open country side in 55 minutes.

The prisoner said little on the trip, smoked four cigarettes, watched an airplane overhead. He was bracing himself, his guards felt, for what may be his last public stand.

JUSTICE AGENTS TO PROBE THREAT

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Investigation of threats received by Governor Harold C. Hoffman of New Jersey, in connection with the conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the Lindbergh kidnap-murder was announced today by R. George Harvey, local head of the bureau of investigatoin of the United States justice department.

"Because of the seriousness of the entire case," Harvey said he was "taking no chances" and had sent federal agents to Trenton, N. J., to pick up the trail of a letter received by Governor Hoffman threatening the governor, the jury that convicted Hauptmann, and Thomas W. Trenchard, justice of the supreme court before whom the case was tried.

CHANGE IS MADE AT WORK OFFICE

to the office here were brought about as a result of civil service examinations.

In commenting upon the changes here Saturday, Mr. Bishop said that they were made strictly on a merit basis and that no influence was brought to bear in any way. All examinations were conducted by federal representatives from Washington and the identities of those being examined were kept secret, to preclude the possibility of any personal favoritism or prejudice.

Before being allowed to take a written test, applicants were required to meet with certain requirements as to education and experience. These were shown in the applications. Those who met these requirements were then allowed to take the written examinations and their papers were sent in to Washington to be graded.

If the applicant made a satisfactory grade on his written test he was given an oral interview by an agent from Washington, with neither the person being interviewed nor the interviewer knowing the identity of the other. A number was issued to the person to be interviewed before he went in for the interview.

After the different classes of examinations were completed, grades made on experience, education, the written examination and the oral interview were averaged and the final grade of the applicant was determined.

Mr. Bishop said he made this explanation in order that there would be no misunderstanding in regard to the changes.

ings, in the event that the decision goes against the government.

However, among the governors, sentiment is understood to be that the market should remain open for business as usual, but with all dealings subject to the strictest regulation.

If the decision is not announced on Monday, it probably would be withheld until at least March 4, since the court's schedule calls for a fortnight's recess beginning after the announcement of opinions day after tomorrow.

The capital kept close watch on the court throughout the day looking for another Saturday statement. Newspapermen congregated in the office of the court clerk, Charles Elmore Cropley, who, too, was waiting for Chief Justice Hughes to authorize an announcement.

However, the chief justice departed and Cropley merely said:

"There is nothing I can say. The court has gone and has not authorized any statement of its plans for Monday."

The court must decide whether congress had constitutional authority for invalidating promises to pay in gold or its equivalent. An adverse decision would make some $100,000,000,000 in outstanding public and private bonds redeemable at $169,000,000,000 in the present devalued currency.

Government counsel told the court "chaos" would result, and experts of the justice department and the treasury have since devised courses of action intended to meet any eventuality of the decision.

Generally the attitude of the administration has been that no decision adverse to the government was expected. Nevertheless, all possible steps have been taken for counter-action in case of such a decision. Congressional leaders have conferred with Mr. Roosevelt on the situation, and, with the preparations made by the treasury and justice departments, quick action generally is expected should the court rule the government had been wrong in abrogating the gold payment clause found in many contracts.

taken two years to build up an army of 4,000,000 during the war.

"Would we have much trouble drafting people to take this pension?" asked Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas.

Townsend argued that spending of the $200 pensions for commodities or services would revive business.

"Would shooting craps with half a dozen other fellows be services?" asked Harrison.

"Oh, no," Townsend replied, somewhat indignantly.

"But buying the dice would be a commodity," Senator Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky interjected. Then the Kentucky senator asked:

"What would these people buy with $200 a month?"

"Why, bless your soul," the doctor replied. "I should think anyone who ever had that salary would know. They would buy a car, rebuild their home, refurnish it, travel, buy books, get things for their children."

Senator Black, Democrat, Alabama, asked if it was fair to make the wage earners pay a sales tax to provide pensions for Rockefellers and Fords.

"There are only three or four Fords and Rockefellers in the country," Townsend replied.

Church Carnival Is Ended Last Evening

The three-day carnival sponsored by the congregation of the St. Matthew's Catholic church and held in the former Adler building on South Grand street was brought to a close last night. Large crowds thronged the carnival building during each of the days and evenings on which it was held, and it was declared to have been a complete success.

Members of the carnival committees who worked at the booths and concessions were animated by an enthusiastic spirit and performed their duties with the zeal of professional barkers.

Meals were served in the carnival building and a dance was held each evening. A number of prizes were awarded.

miles away, and officials at Le Bourget field believed they might well complete the crossing in 65 hours.

With the same lack of concern that has characterized their previous flights, the two old hands at long distance flying limited themselves to brief, unadorned reports to air France radio stations along the route.

Three and one-half hours after the take-off they passed over Cap Nao, radio advices said. At 2:10 p.m. (9:10 a.m. E.S.T.) they were over Tangier, Morocco, and at 3:16 p.m. (10:16 a.m., E. S. T.) they arrived over Rabat on the northern coast of Africa.

With ideal weather reported over the whole of their 6,875-mile route, Codos and Rossi, the only airmen ever to fly the north Atlantic both ways, hoped to reach their goal, Buenos Aires, in less than 70 hours.

They will thus exceed their New York-Syria long distance record of 5,653 miles by more than 2,000 miles.

Thoroughly overhauled since Codos and Rossi flew it from Paris to New York in an attempted record-breaking flight to California last May, the old Joseph LeBrix carried 1,875 gallons of gasoline and 92 gallons of oil.

For the first time the plane, which weighed nearly 10 tons when loaded, carried mail, about 120 pounds of it. Codos and Rossi were seeking to show that non-stop flights are possible for mail-carrying planes. The air ministry financed the venture.

Powering the Joseph LeBrix was the same 500-horsepower motor that propelled it from New York to Rayak, Syria, in August, 1933, for the present record, and pulled it back across the ocean from Paris to New York last May to complete the two-way crossing.

Life insurance companies tell us that the gradual breakdown of the human body causes more deaths every year than disease germs

IF your physical let-down is caused by a lowered red-blood-cell and hemo-glo-bin content in the blood—then S.S.S. is waiting to help you... though, if you suspect an organic trouble, you will, of course, want to consult a physician or surgeon.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic. It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food is better utilized... and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

You should feel and look years younger with life giving and purifying blood surging through your body. You owe this to yourself and friends.

Make S.S.S. your health safeguard and, unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food... sound sleep... steady nerves... a good complexion... and renewed strength.

MISSING CHILD'S MOTHER SOUGHT

Estranged Wife Of Scientist Believed To Have Taken Daughter

BUFFALO, Kan., Feb. 16.—(AP)—A mother called upon officers tonight to hunt out her daughter as the abductor of eight-year-old Patricia Gaylord Simpson, daughter of Dr. G. G. Simpson, associate curator of the American Museum of Natural History at New York.

The child was led from her classroom at Stone school, near here, yesterday by a fashionably-dressed woman who identified herself to Miss Louise Erickson, the teacher, as the child's mother, and was driven away in a car with a strange man.

Mrs. Mary Petroja, grandmother with whom the missing girl had been living, told Sheriff Will Chamberlain she was convinced the woman was her daughter, the estranged wife of Dr. Simpson.

"I feel deep concern for Patricia's welfare," Mrs. Petroja said. "My daughter has threatened revenge for a court order giving Dr. Simpson legal custody of Patricia and her three sisters. For that reason I fear harm might befall the child."

The other daughters live with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Simpson, Dr. Simpson's parents, at Washington, D. C. Patricia was sent here because of ill health.

MASTERS OF DRAMATIC ART

At last, Frank Morgan gets the opportunity to be "heart interest" in a picture; this time with none other than lovely Barbara Stanwyck. The film is "A Lost Lady," the First National drama taken from the novel of the same name by Willa Cather. Lyle Talbot, Ricardo Cortez and Phillip Reed are in the cast. "The Lost Lady" comes to the Paramount theater for Tuesday and Wednesday.

AT LOCAL THEATERS

AT THE PARAMOUNT—If there's such a thing as a perfect screen musical, "Kid Millions," Eddie Cantor's new annual extravaganza for Samuel Goldwyn, which came to the Paramount theater last night, is it.

The banjo-eyed comedian is funnier than ever as a boy Cinderella of the Brooklyn waterfront who turns out to be the sole heir of Professor Wilson, late egyptologist who left a fortune in buried treasure in Egypt. The presence of several other claimants to the fortune makes the story fast, funny and furious. Chief of these is Ethel Merman, as a hard-boiled song-plugger posing as the late professor's common-law wife, and her boneheaded gangster boyfriend, played by Warren Hymer. Ann Sothern and George Murphy furnish the heart interest.

The fun begins before the boatload of treasure hunters even embarks and runs high during the crossing when Ethel and Hymer try unsuccessfully to put Eddie out of the way. Arrived in Egypt, Eddie gets mixed up with the Sheik, played by Paul Harvey, and his gorgeous Harem of Goldwyn Girls. The Sheik's not-quite-bright daughter, Fanya, played by Eve Sully, develops a terrific crush on Eddie and saves him from the boiling oil vats on his promise to wed her. But Eddie wants to get back to his Brooklyn sweetheart and Fanya's jealous fiance, played by Jesse Block, helps him get away with the fortune in a plane. Following a crazy flight over the Atlantic, Eddie lands in New York and opens a free ice cream factory for boys and girls. The finale, showing the ice cream being frozen and served, is the loveliest and most effective Technicolor sequence the screen has offered to date.

Lavishly produced for release through United Artists, "Kid Millions" offers several gorgeous girl and song numbers, and the "Mandy" number, in which Irving Berlin's song hit, which Eddie introduced in an early Ziegfeld Follies, is revived is staged with terrific effect. "Okay, Toots," "An Earful of Music," "When My Ship Comes In," and "Your Head On My Shoulder," are other tuneful hits you'll be humming and whistling for months.

AT THE CAPITOL—"Murder In The Clouds," the new First National mystery thriller, comes to the Capitol theater today, with Lyle Talbot, Ann Dvorak and Gordon Westcott heading the all-star cast.

It is an exciting melodrama of the air, written by the noted magazine writers, Roy Chanslor and Dore Schary, concerns a plot of international conspirators to steal a secret formula for high explosives from the U. S. government.

Learning that the formula is being shipped from the west coast to the war department in Washington by plane, the band of spies blow up the ship thousands of feet in the air.

This leads to a thrilling hunt for the air robbers, with airplane battles in which ships are shot down in flames as their occupants leap for their lives. There also is a stirring romance in which two air pilots battle for the love of a girl. Her kidnaping by the conspirators involves more exciting incidents that wind up in a crashing climax.

Lyle Talbot and Westcott are the two aviators who battle for the love of an air hostess, a part played by Ann Dvorak. Others in the cast include Robert Light, George Cooper, Charles Wilson, Henry O'Neill, Russell Hicks and Edward McWade.

A score of nationally famous pilots work with the members of the cast in the thrilling air stunts. These include Dick Renaldi, Clinton Herberger, Frank Clarke, Howard Batt and Frank Tomick. The battle scenes were taken high above the San Jacinton mountains of California at Camp Keene.

Jaffe Points Out New Merchandising Trends

In discussing fashions with I. W. Jaffe of the Ruth Shops it was pointed out that an entirely new trend of fashion merchandising has developed during the past few years.

At the turn of the century retailers throughout the United States, used to buy ready-to-wear merchandise in a sufficient quantity to last them over a period amounting to about four months.

The trend since the war, however, due to the rapid changes that take place in fashion, which in some cases amount to an overnight development, stores such as the Ruth Shops have found it a necessity to align themselves with sources of fashion analysis and market information.

New York City, even though it is over 2,000 miles away, being the center of fashion merchandise, is only two nights distance by fast railway express.

In New York the style and manufacturing center is stratified into groups of manufacturers who specialize in turning out coats, suits, dresses, formal gowns, etc., each at a different price level. Naturally the complex picture that one gets of the manufacturing market is one that calls for some kind of an agent being in the background all the time.

The Ruth Shops have just such an "agent" in the form of an organization consisting of twenty-two people who purchase ready-to-wear merchandise in all different types, on overnight air mail orders on the store.

The word "broccoli" is the Italian plural of "broccolo," which means "sprout."

Long And Allen Are Denounced For Killing Of State Trooper

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Square Deal association "companies" in Louisiana, sworn by their platform to have the Senator Huey Long "dictatorship" repealed, were spreading their activities at the week-end while their spokesmen denounced Long and his political ally, Governor O. K. Allen, for the accidental shooting to death of a trooper in the state capitol martial law zone.

The Plaquemine company of the Square Deal association was holding a meeting tonight to further the cause of the anti-Long group. This is one of the several "companies" of undetermined strength organized in the Baton Rouge and New Orleans area with the avowed purpose of having the laws which set up the "dictatorship" repealed.

While the Square deal was quietly carrying out its organization moves East Baton Rouge parish was still under technical martial law and Long was in Washington seeking an investigation of Postmaster General Farley, a member of President Roosevelt's cabinet.

Corporal Hugh J. Belanger, of Houma, the soldier who was shot and killed near the capitol, was buried yesterday at his home with military honors and services attended by high officials of the national guard.

Military officials refused to name the man who shot Corporal Belanger but announced that their investigation established that the shooting was an accident.

Former Judge Charles Kilbourne, of Clinton, La., and Mrs. J. S. Roussel, president of the women's division of the Square Deal association issued statements blaiming the fatal wounding of the soldier on Long and Allen for maintaining the garrison at Baton Rouge in "senseless soldier play."

Three Personal Injury Suits Are Settled Here

Compromise settlements of three personal injury suits were filed yesterday at the office of the clerk of parish court.

A settlement of $250 was awarded Grady Campbell by the Brown Paper Mill and the mill's insurers for injuries Campbell received last September while employed by the mill. Coincident with the settlement, Campbell's judgment against the mill was cancelled.

Mrs. Eva Stratton was awarded $160 in a compromise settlement of a suit against the American Service Company, Inc., in bankruptcy with H. L. Burk as trustee. The suit was based on injuries Mrs. Stratton's minor son, Harry Stratton, received last December when he was struck on South Grand street by a motor vehicle owned by the defendants. The vehicle was driven by Tom Smith.

John E. Zufall was awarded $43.50 in settlement of his claims against C. H. Treadwell, of Shreveport. Zufall's petition for damages stated that while employed by the defendant last July his shoulder struck a bolt with the result that he suffered a carbuncle.

FIREMEN APPROVED

JENA, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Fire Chief W. H. Bishop has been notified by Lorris M. Wimberly, secretary of the state civil service commission, that the following fire fighters in Jena had been commissioned by that body: Lloyd Jones, assistant chief; A. D. Flowers and C. H. Davis, captains; Fred Wright, R. W. Stephenson, W. D. Renfrow, C. I. Humphries, Q. R. Hudson, O. J. Evans, H. M. Davis, O. S. Burdick and A. M. Cobb.

IN NEW OFFICES

Beginning Monday, Dr. Henry E. Guerriero and Dr. L. L. Shlenker, who have been members of the staff of the Vaughan-Wright-Bendel clinic during the past six or seven years, will be located in their new offices, 319 Wood street. The physicians' new offices are located in the building which was occupied by Dr. A. D. Tisdale before he purchased the Riverside sanitarium. The building has been remodeled and completely renovated.

EROS CLUB MEETS

EROS, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Miss Mary Vernon, Jackson parish home demonstration agent, met with the Eros home demonstration club. Seven old members were present and seven new members were enrolled. Mrs. Roy Hearne, nutrition leader gave a southern stew demonstration. Miss Vernon discussed balanced meals and school lunches.

A bill drafted for introduction in the North Carolina legislature would substitute a lethal gas chamber for the electric chair as the means of inflicting capital punishment.

An event of charming informality was the bridge party arragned by Miss Louise Buffington at her home on Thursday evening. The Valentine atmosphere was reflected in the card table covers, tallies, score pads and candies offered at the tables during the games, Miss Cooksey, winner of high score, was presented a sewing kit. Miss Buffington was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Z. L. Buffington, in serving a delectable chicken spaghetti supper to Miss Marie Minard, Miss Mildred Bird, Miss Thalia Ferree, Miss Doyne Buffington, Mrs. Robert Busch, Miss Dora Cooksey, Miss Sentelle Johns and Miss Helen Thomas.

The Baptist Women's Missionary union met at the church on Thursday afternoon. The program feature was the mission study lesson from the book "How to Pray," by Dr. R. A. Torrey. The Rev. Paul Jones, church pastor, taught the lesson from the chapter, "Praying in the Spirit."

Mrs. W. B. Perkins, chairman of the junior organizations of the W. M. U., and Mrs. V. E. Lewis, director, are working with the members on the stewardship declamation contest. The contest will be presented at the church at an early date.

Special deputy sheriffs were appointed to assist in the poll registrations of voters for Caldwell parish. Mrs. S. H. Allbritton was appointed to serve at Clarks. The books were opened on Monday, remaining through Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Sheppard motored to Jackson, Miss., last week, where Mr. Sheppard was a speaker on the program of the Mississippi Retail Lumbermen's association.

Mrs. Golda Hair received a broken right ankle in an automobile accident on Wednesday night. The accident occurred on the Monroe-Riverton highway when Mr. Hair, driver, struck the rear of Miss Helen Vawter's car.

National Air Reserve To Hold Meeting Today

A meeting of the local organization of the National Air reserve will be held at 2:30 p.m. today at the squadron headquarters, 406 Moore avenue, it was announced by Major Harry Barnes, squadron commander. All members and cadets are requested to be present.

Maj. Barnes announced that members of the National Air reserve are requested by George Bruce, national commander of the organiatzion, to write to their representatives and senators in congress protesting "vehemently against the type of manipulated promotion of active officers in the United States marine corps now being carried out by the so-called selective board of the corps."

The announcement said "the nastiest type of discrimination is being shown against World war officers who are the backbone of the (marine) corps, and will result in public scandal unless curbed."

DOCTORS OPPOSE INSURANCE PLANS

Vigorous Opposition Recorded Against Sickness Safeguard

CHICAGO, Feb. 16. — (AP) — The American Medical association today reiterated its vigorous opposition to compulsory sickness insurance plans being studied by the president's committee on economic security.

But it tempered its stand by approving projects for setting up systems of voluntary illness insurance on a community basis.

Decrying what it termed attempts to regiment the profession in proposed legislation and attacking certain sections of the Wagner bill embodying the national administration's social security program, the association's house of delegates adopted a declaration of policy for its 100,000 member physicians.

Te report, carried unanimously at the second extraordinary session in the organization's history, set forth:

"The house of delegates of the American Medical association re-affirms its opposition to all forms of compulsory sickness insurance whether administered by the federal government, the governments of the individual states or by any individual industry, community or similar body. It reaffirms also its encouragement to local medical organizations to establish plans for the provision of adequate medical service for all of the people, adjusted to present economic conditions, by voluntary budgeti[ng to] meet the costs of illness.

The top screen of the chipper has holes which are just large enough to let chips of the right size pass through. The holes in the bottom screen are much smaller so it retains these chips, but lets sawdust and other particles pass through. The uniform chips are conveyed to the chip bins, from which they enter the digester for the cooking process. We know that they are going to cook evenly, because they are all the same size.

Right here, in what is the first step in the preparation of pulp wood for Atlantic Bond, you have evidence of the uniformity which is characteristic of the process of manufacturing Atlantic Bond—as well as of the finished product.

MISSING CHILD'S MOTHER SOUGHT

Estranged Wife Of Scientist Believed To Have Taken Daughter

BUFFALO, Kan., Feb. 16.—(AP)—A mother called upon officers tonight to hunt out her daughter as the abductor of eight-year-old Patricia Gaylord Simpson, daughter of Dr. G. G. Simpson, associate curator of the American Museum of Natural History at New York.

The child was led from her classroom at Stone school, near here, yesterday by a fashionably-dressed woman who identified herself to Miss Louise Erickson, the teacher, as the child's mother, and was driven away in a car with a strange man.

Mrs. Mary Petroja, grandmother with whom the missing girl had been living, told Sheriff Will Chamberlain she was convinced the woman was her daughter, the estranged wife of Dr. Simpson.

"I feel deep concern for Patricia's welfare," Mrs. Petroja said. "My daughter has threatened revenge for a court order giving Dr. Simpson legal custody of Patricia and her three sisters. For that reason I fear harm might befall the child."

The other daughters live with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Simpson, Dr. Simpson's parents, at Washington, D. C. Patricia was sent here because of ill health.

The world's biggest image of Buddha has been built at a spot near Tokio. The image is 40 feet high and is built of concrete at a cost of $50,000. Three thousand persons can stand in the lap of the statue.

MASTERS OF DRAMATIC ART

At last, Frank Morgan gets the opportunity to be "heart interest" in a picture; this time with none other than lovely Barbara Stanwyck. The film is "A Lost Lady," the First National drama taken from the novel of the same name by Willa Cather. Lyle Talbot, Ricardo Cortez and Phillip Reed are in the cast. "The Lost Lady" comes to the Paramount theater for Tuesday and Wednesday.

AT LOCAL THEATERS

AT THE PARAMOUNT—If there's such a thing as a perfect screen musical, "Kid Millions," Eddie Cantor's new annual extravaganza for Samuel Goldwyn, which came to the Paramount theater last night, is it.

The banjo-eyed comedian is funnier than ever as a boy Cinderella of the Brooklyn waterfront who turns out to be the sole heir of Professor Wilson, late egyptologist who left a fortune in buried treasure in Egypt. The presence of several other claimants to the fortune makes the story fast, funny and furious. Chief of these is Ethel Merman, as a hard-boiled song-plugger posing as the late professor's common-law wife, and her boneheaded gangster boyfriend, played by Warren Hymer. Ann Sothern and George Murphy furnish the heart interest.

The fun begins before the boatload of treasure hunters even embarks and runs high during the crossing when Ethel and Hymer try unsuccessfully to put Eddie out of the way. Arrived in Egypt, Eddie gets mixed up with the Sheik, played by Paul Harvey, and his gorgeous Harem of Goldwyn Girls. The Sheik's not-quite-bright daughter, Fanya, played by Eve Sully, develops a terrific crush on Eddie and saves him from the boiling oil vats on his promise to wed her. But Eddie wants to get back to his Brooklyn sweetheart and Fanya's jealous fiance, played by Jesse Block, helps him get away with the fortune in a plane. Following a crazy flight over the Atlantic, Eddie lands in New York and opens a free ice cream factory for boys and girls. The finale, showing the ice cream being frozen and served, is the loveliest and most effective Technicolor sequence the screen has offered to date.

Lavishly produced for release through United Artists, "Kid Millions" offers several gorgeous girl and song numbers, and the "Mandy" number, in which Irving Berlin's song hit, which Eddie introduced in an early Ziegfeld Follies, is revived is staged with terrific effect. "Okay, Toots," "An Earful of Music," "When My Ship Comes In," and "Your Head On My Shoulder," are other tuneful hits you'll be humming and whistling for months.

AT THE CAPITOL—"Murder In The Clouds," the new First National mystery thriller, comes to the Capitol theater today, with Lyle Talbot, Ann Dvorak and Gordon Westcott heading the all-star cast.

It is an exciting melodrama of the air, written by the noted magazine writers, Roy Chanslor and Dore Schary, concerns a plot of international conspirators to steal a secret formula for high explosives from the U. S. government.

Learning that the formula is being shipped from the west coast to the war department in Washington by plane, the band of spies blow up the ship thousands of feet in the air.

This leads to a thrilling hunt for the air robbers, with airplane battles in which ships are shot down in flames as their occupants leap for their lives. There also is a stirring romance in which two air pilots battle for the love of a girl. Her kidnaping by the conspirators involves more exciting incidents that wind up in a crashing climax.

Lyle Talbot and Westcott are the two aviators who battle for the love of an air hostess, a part played by Ann Dvorak. Others in the cast include Robert Light, George Cooper, Charles Wilson, Henry O'Neill, Russell Hicks and Edward McWade.

A score of nationally famous pilots work with the members of the cast in the thrilling air stunts. These include Dick Renaldi, Clinton Herberger, Frank Clarke, Howard Batt and Frank Tomick. The battle scenes were taken high above the San Jacinton mountains of California at Camp Keene.

Jaffe Points Out New Merchandising Trends

In discussing fashions with I. W. Jaffe of the Ruth Shops it was pointed out that an entirely new trend of fashion merchandising has developed during the past few years.

At the turn of the century retailers throughout the United States, used to buy ready-to-wear merchandise in a sufficient quantity to last them over a period amounting to about four months.

The trend since the war, however, due to the rapid changes that take place in fashion, which in some cases amount to an overnight development, stores such as the Ruth Shops have found it a necessity to align themselves with sources of fashion analysis, and market information.

New York City, even though it is over 2,000 miles away, being the center of fashion merchandise, is only two nights distance by fast railway express.

In New York the style and manufacturing center is stratified into groups of manufacturers who specialize in turning out coats, suits, dresses, formal gowns, etc., each at a different price level. Naturally the complex picture that one gets of the manufacturing market is one that calls for some kind of an agent being in the background all the time.

The Ruth Shops have just such an "agent" in the form of an organization consisting of twenty-two people who purchase ready-to-wear merchandise in all different types, on overnight air mail orders on the store.

The word "broccoli" is the Italian plural of "broccolo," which means "sprout."

Long And Allen Are Denounced For Killing Of State Trooper

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Square Deal association "companies" in Louisiana, sworn by their platform to have the Senator Huey Long "dictatorship" repealed, were spreading their activities at the week-end while their spokesmen denounced Long and his political ally, Governor O. K. Allen, for the accidental shooting to death of a trooper in the state capitol martial law zone.

The Plaquemine company of the Square Deal association was holding a meeting tonight to further the cause of the anti-Long group. This is one of the several "companies" of undetermined strength organized in the Baton Rouge and New Orleans area with the avowed purpose of having the laws which set up the "dictatorship" repealed.

While the Square deal was quietly carrying out its organization moves East Baton Rouge parish was still under technical martial law and Long was in Washington seeking an investigation of Postmaster General Farley, a member of President Roosevelt's cabinet.

Corporal Hugh J. Belanger, of Houma, the soldier who was shot and killed near the capitol, was buried yesterday at his home with military honors and services attended by high officials of the national guard.

Military officials refused to name the man who shot Corporal Belanger but announced that their investigation established that the shooting was an accident.

Former Judge Charles Kilbourne, of Clinton, La., and Mrs. J. S. Roussel, president of the women's division of the Square Deal association issued statements blaming the fatal wounding of the soldier on Long and Allen for maintaining the garrison at Baton Rouge in "senseless soldier play."

Three Personal Injury Suits Are Settled Here

Compromise settlements of three personal injury suits were filed yesterday at the office of the clerk of parish court.

A settlement of $250 was awarded Grady Campbell by the Brown Paper Mill and the mill's insurers for injuries Campbell received last September while employed by the mill. Coincident with the settlement, Campbell's judgment against the mill was cancelled.

Mrs. Eva Stratton was awarded $160 in a compromise settlement of a suit against the American Service Company, Inc., in bankruptcy with H. L. Burk as trustee. The suit was based on injuries Mrs. Stratton's minor son, Harry Stratton, received last December when he was struck on South Grand street by a motor vehicle owned by the defendants. The vehicle was driven by Tom Smith.

John E. Zufall was awarded $43.50 in settlement of his claims against C. H. Treadwell, of Shreveport. Zufall's petition for damages stated that while employed by the defendant last July his shoulder struck a bolt with the result that he suffered a carbuncle.

[NE]W DISSENSION [A]MONG DEMOCRAT RANKS INDICATED

[F]ears Of Blow-Off Felt Unless More Harmony Is Obtained

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—New and unwelcomed evidence of dissension in their own ranks arose today to worry Democrats on Capitol Hill, particularly in the house.

They were unwilling, of course, to let their names be used in connection with their remarks, but several expressed fears of a "blow-off" soon unless greater harmony is attained between house members on the one side and administration officials on the other.

One development of the day was a White House visit by five house members to protest that too many Republicans and too few Democrats have jobs under a Democratic administration.

They talked with the president more than an hour. The upshot was the calling of a new Democratic caucus for Thursday night to talk over for still another time the patronage situation.

Representative Sabath of Illinois, chairman of the patronage committee, remarked after the White House meeting that he thought everything was "fine."

Representative McFarlane of Texas a committee member, said, "I think we made progress."

But privately, some conferees expressed the view that the thing was far from settled. They were to submit to the president later a full list of Republicans who have been given jobs in preference to Democrats. But the president, it was reported, made no definite promise as to what he would do with the list.

Vocational Class Held At Choudrant School

CHOUDRANT, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—A part-time class in vocational agriculture for young men engaged in farming, and those preparing to enter upon the work of the farm, has been in progress in the Choudrant school six weeks. Those enrolled in the work were Euell Webb, Leon Baker, Oren Hammons, Cecil Hammons, William Pipes, Dhu Pipes, James Williams, Gerald Vining, Clarence Vining, Basil Vining, Randolph Holtzclaw, Ira Hammons, Louie Campbell, S. W. Leachman, Emory Williams, Roy McCann and W. H. Smith.

A course in general farm livestock was offered to these young men. The work was made up of a series of assignments dealing with current problems of livestock production which are found on the average Choudrant farm. The wishes of the group were considered in the selection of lesson topics. Some of the problems considered in the course were number and kind of livestock to keep, selection of foundation stock, securing foundation stock, housing, feeding, breeding and the control of parasites and diseases.

The course was taught by C. L. Mondart, local instructor in vocational agriculture, and consisted of a series of 15 meetings. During the progress of the work several athletic teams were organized among the members of the group.

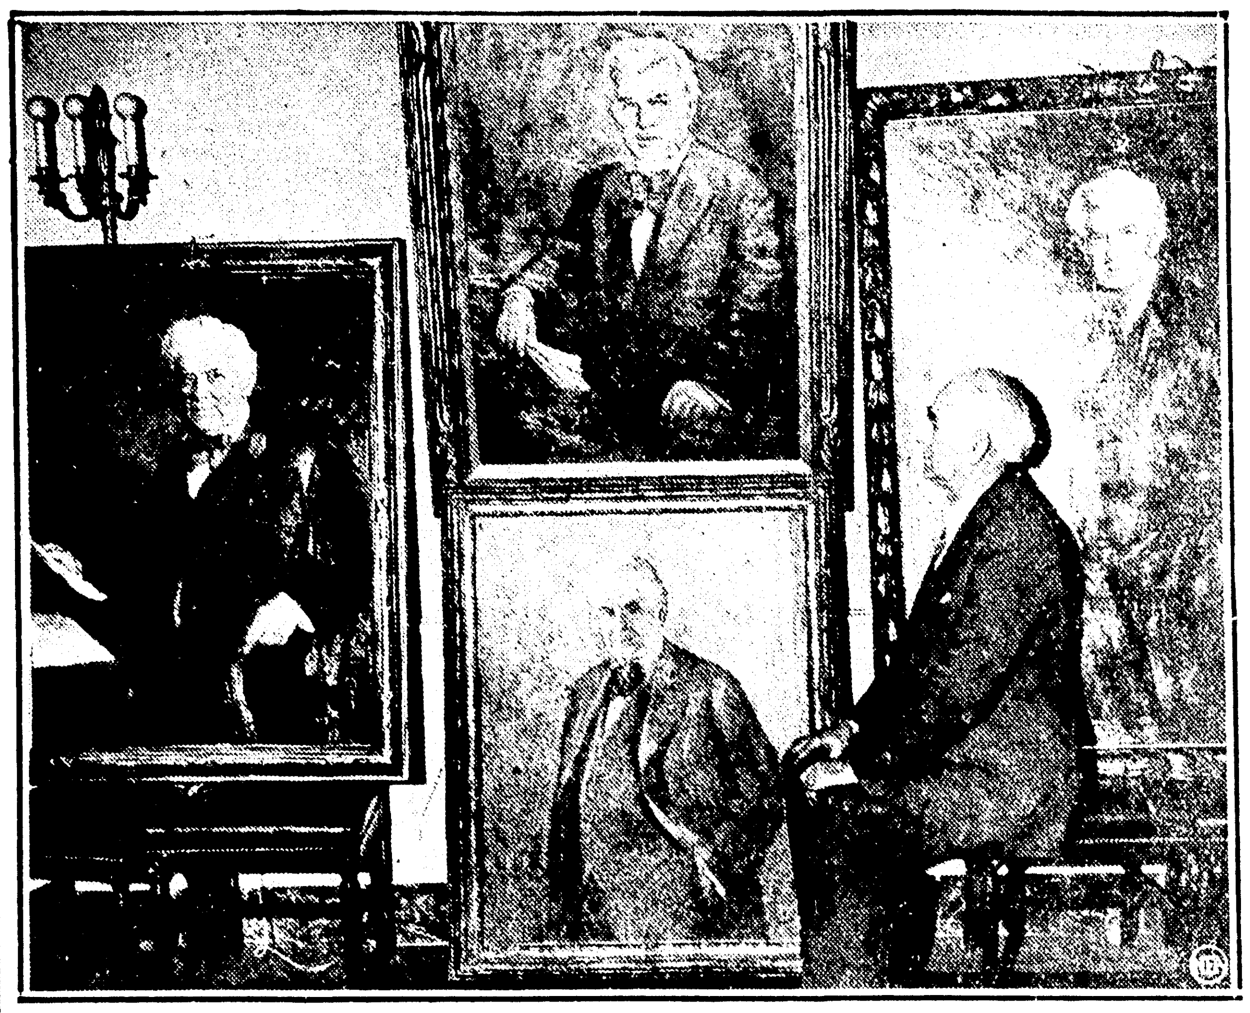
ARTISTIC BATTLE RAGES OVER RAINEY PORTRAITS



Confusion reigns amidst the house library committee, which must choose, from these four portraits of the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey, one to be hung in the speaker's lobby. Four well-known artists, through a misunderstanding, each painted what he thought was an official picture of Mr. Rainey. Here Representative Kent E. Keller of Illinois contemplates the works of Boris Gordon (top center), Edwin B. Child (bottom center), N. R. Brewer (left) and Howard Chandler Christy (right).

Here Is Real Low-Down On This Skoaling Business

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The famous drinking traditions of Sweden are faltering a little, turned to one side by younger generations with more interest in conversation than strict formalities and the older generation is beginning to shed silent tears into wine glasses.

The good old word "skoal," pronounced as "skoal" in English, is involved.

Into this word is packed a good share of the history of Sweden, and one of the most dignified and elaborate drinking procedures the world has ever known. The formula is something like this:

Seat yourself at a table with from one to a dozen good companions, dealing only with one to begin.

Begin by catching the eye of someone, or by pronouncing the word "skoal" in a fairly loud and highly determined voice.

Now take your glass firmly in your hand, raise it quickly to about the level of your chin, and at the same time look deeply and intently into the eyes of the person you are skoaling.

At the moment your eyes meet incline the head and shoulders forward into a graceful bow, your skoaling partner will do the same.

Now drop your eyes out of the line of contact, raise your glass to your lips, drink, resume the contact of the eyes, now once more, and put down your glass.

This is the individual "skoal." In the case of a general skoal, the procedure is the same except that you contrive, holding your glass slightly below your chin, to flick your eyes, left and right, so as to contact all eyes at the table

There are various other rules:

Never skoal your hostess at a formal gathering. Wait until she "skoals" you.

Never, in a formal gathering, skoal a man older than yourself. It's your business to know whether he's older.

Always skoal with the same sort of wine. Don't pick up red wine if someone is challenging your eyes with a glass of white wine.

Now what is beginning to grieve the older generations of Swedes is that this procedure is drifting a little to leeward, especially in restaurants and bars.

The old Swedes still hope it is only a passing phase. They still face each other, bound by the traditions of drinking, with a solid, undeviating one, two, three, four, they drink to the precision of drinking, to the formality of drinking, to the idea that a drink without a "skoal" is no drink at all.

Royal Arms On Currency Void Scottish Bank Notes

EDINBURGH, Feb. 16—(AP)—Millions of Scottish bank notes are being withdrawn from circulation following detection by authorities in London, that the bill designs embodied the royal arms.

The royal arms are insignia of public authority and can be used only by the king or government departments.

New notes are being issued containing the bank's own coats of arms.

Mrs. Hugh Clark was hostess to the members of her bridge club on Tuesday afternoon at her home. At the conclusion of the card game delicious refreshments were served.. Mrs. Hugh Tucker, winner of high score, was presented with a novelty ash tray. Those present were Miss Annie Elizabeth Eckles, Miss Negel Ruff, Miss Gertrude Whipple, Mrs. Lee Roy Simms, Mrs. Conel Evans, Mrs. Hugh Tucker, Mrs. Bob Parcell and Mrs. Leslie Calloway.

Staff Meeting Is Held At Riverside Sanitarium

A good attendance was recorded at the staff meeting of Riverside sanitarium Friday night.

After Dr. P. L. Perot had called the meeting to order, Dr. A. D. Tisdale, operator of the institution, gave a resume of the work that has been done by the hospital since he assumed the management several months ago.

Physicians in attendance were A. D. Tisdale, Ralph Talbot, J. B. Vaughan, I. J. Wolfe, A. E. Fisher, P. L. Perot, E. B. Lehman, H. S. Coon, J. T. French, A. L. Peters, E. J. Young and Marvin Johnson.

Nunn-Bush Shoes Now Handled By Holloway And Thompson Concern

Announcement was made the past week-end of the appointment of Holloway and Thomson, 203 DeSiard street, as retailers in Monroe for the famous and nationally advertised Nunn-Bush line of men's shoes. For the past 11 years Holloway and Thompson have featured high grade women's and misses shoes exclusively.

"For some time," said the management of Holloway and Thompson, "we have been negotiating for this famous brand of men's shoes, and it gives us a source of satisfaction to announce our appointment. Nunn-Bush shoes are made by salaried craftsmen, not hurried price-workers. Slow and measured production and the salary method of compensation insure careful, conscientious craftsmanship. Ankle-fashioning, individual patterns, 'tailor made' counters, personalized lasts—all combine to give the customer an active appreciation of truly unusual quality. Nunn-Bush shoes are made so that you see and feel the difference."

Holloway and Thompson have rearranged their store and besides their women's department a separate space will be used for the men's section.

3 Negroes Sentenced On Pleas Of Guilty

Sentences of 30 days in the parish jail were imposed by Judge David I. Garrett yesterday in cases of three negro defendants who entered pleas of guilty in district court.

The negroes who entered the pleas of guilty were the following: John Henry Ballard, breaking and entering the garage of Watson and Aven of Louisiana, Inc., and stealing two truck tires; Robert Johnson, theft of meat stolen from the smokehouse of Dave Grantham, negro residing near Spanish City; Sam Nicholson, possession of meat stolen from Grantham's smokehouse.

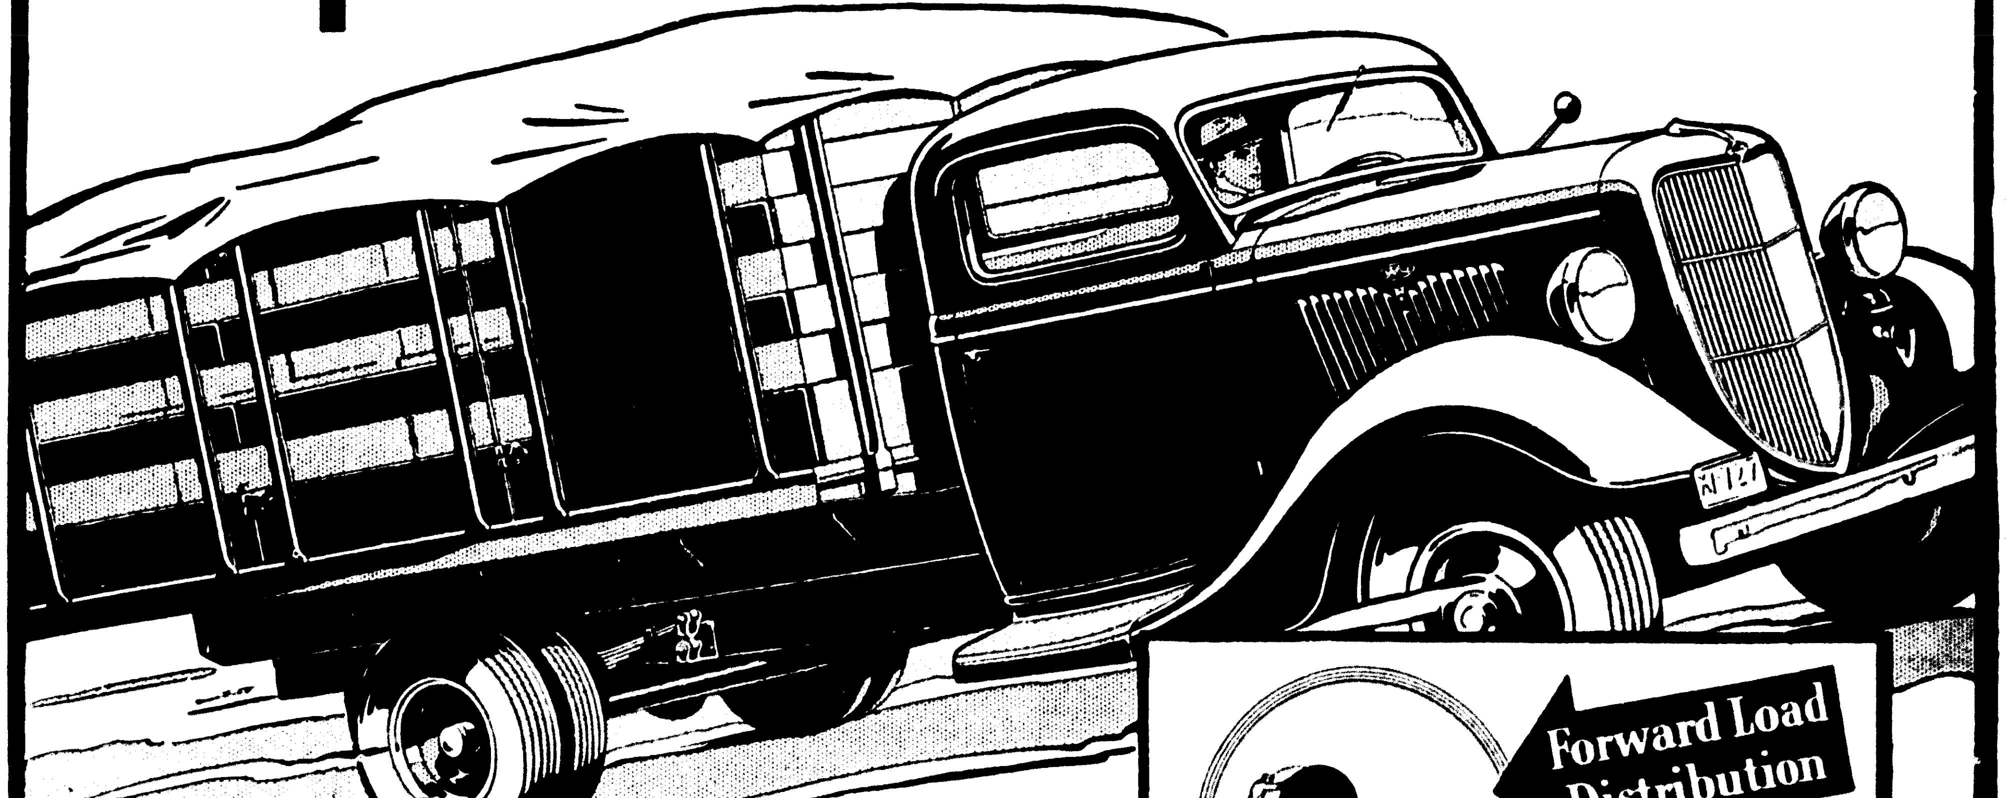
FORD V-8 TRUCK improvements for 1935



Bring new economies to every truck user

The new 1935 Ford V-8 Truck features listed at the right will in themselves bring you major savings and improved operation.

Combined with the Ford V-8 features which have already been proved in every type of hauling, they give you in 1935 a truck which will deliver operating efficiency and economy you never thought possible.

Study that list of 1935 improvements carefully. Then remember that Ford—and only Ford—gives you the 80-horsepower, V-8 engine, with its 4-cylinder economy. Remember that Ford gives you the reliable full-floating rear axle. Remember that the copper-lead connecting rod bearings that resist burning and pounding out are a proved Ford development.

No other truck, regardless of price, matches the combination of features offered by the Ford V-8. And nowhere, except with Ford, can you get the Engine Exchange Plan—which gives you a block-tested, factory-reconditioned engine for less money, and in less time, than an ordinary overhaul.

Examine this new 1935 Ford V-8 Truck today. Here are power and strength, speed and good looks . . . a double-duty truck that meets the needs of heavy haulers and light haulers alike. Here's a truck that costs little to buy—and less to run than any previous Ford truck. Test it on your own job . . . 131½ or 157 inch wheelbase; bodies for almost every use.

Forward Load Distribution

Obtained by mounting front springs ahead of axle and moving V-8 engine forward. This places more load ahead of rear axle, more weight on front end.

FORWARD LOAD DISTRIBUTION . . . More uniform tire and brake wear. Better brake action. Stabilizes the truck. Tends to protect truck and improve operation throughout. With 6½ inches added between back of cab and center of rear axle, you can make acute angle turns with full-width semi-trailer.

NEW QUICK-STOPPING, RIB-COOLED BRAKES . . . Drums of alloy iron, with integrally cast cooling ribs. Rear drums are cast on to a steel mounting disc. Will not "bell-mouth" or "fade" when making a series of fast, successive stops. Easier, stronger, longer-lived, less frequent adjustments.

NEW HEAVY-DUTY TRUCK CLUTCH . . . Centrifugal force increases plate pressure as engine speed increases. Resists slippage. Lower pedal pressure required at idling speeds. Frictional surface increased 20%. Has oil-less ball-thrust bearing. Longer life.

NEW HIGH-EFFICIENCY COOLING SYSTEM . . . Larger water pump impellers increase circulation. Radiator cooling area increased 15%. Greater volume of air drawn through radiator by the 15½ inch, 6-blade fan. Full length water jackets cool cylinder walls and upper part of crankcase. Efficient engine and oil temperatures under severe operation.

NEW COUPE-TYPE CAB . . . Gives driver greater protection and comfort. Welded, all steel construction. Safety glass all around. Clear-vision ventilation. Easy-opening windshield. Large, screened cowl ventilator. Cab lined with attractive, durable, pebble-grain material. Seat increased to 48¾ inches width. Has mattress-type cushions. Is adjustable with tilting back. Speedometer, ammeter and fuel gauge of passenger car design grouped in front of driver; dispatch box at right.

ALSO . . . NEW IMPROVED FRONT SPRING MOUNTING THAT INCREASES STABILITY, REDUCES FRAME DISTORTION . . . NEW ROLLED-EDGE, DEEP-SKIRTED FENDERS THAT PROVIDE GREATER STRENGTH AND PREVENT EXCESSIVE SPLASHING OF BODY . . . DEEP, RUGGED FRAME WITH NO "KICK UP" . . . STRONGER FRONT AXLE . . . NEW EMERGENCY BRAKE LEVER; REDESIGNED FOR GREATER STRENGTH . . . 20-GALLON GAS TANK UNDER SEAT, WITH EXPOSED FILLER CAP . . . NEW SMART APPEARANCE.

W DISSENSION MONG DEMOCRAT RANKS INDICATED

Fears Of Blow-Off Felt Unless More Harmony Is Obtained

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—New and unwelcomed evidence of dissension in their own ranks arose today to worry Democrats on Capitol Hill, particularly in the house.

They were unwilling, of course, to let their names be used in connection with their remarks, but several expressed fears of a "blow-off" soon unless greater harmony is attained between house members on the one side and administration officials on the other.

One development of the day was a White House visit by five house members to protest that too many Republicans and too few Democrats have jobs under a Democratic administration.

They talked with the president more than an hour. The upshot was the calling of a new Democratic caucus for Thursday night to talk over for still another time the patronage situation.

Representative Sabath of Illinois, chairman of the patronage committee, remarked after the White House meeting that he thought everything was "fine."

Representative McFarlane of Texas a committee member, said, "I think we made progress."

But privately, some conferees expressed the view that the thing was far from settled. They were to submit to the president later a full list of Republicans who have been given jobs in preference to Democrats. But the president, it was reported, made no definite promise as to what he would do with the list.

Vocational Class Held At Choudrant School

CHOUDRANT, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—A part-time class in vocational agriculture for young men engaged in farming, and those preparing to enter upon the work of the farm, has been in progress in the Choudrant school six weeks. Those enrolled in the work were Euell Webb, Leon Baker, Oren Hammons, Cecil Hammons, William Pipes, Dhu Pipes, James Williams, Gerald Vining, Clarence Vining, Basil Vining, Randolph Holtzclaw, Ira Hammons, Louie Campbell, S. W. Leachman, Emory Williams, Roy McCann and W. H. Smith.

A course in general farm livestock was offered to these young men. The work was made up of a series of assignments dealing with current problems of livestock production which are found on the average Choudrant farm. The wishes of the group were considered in the selection of lesson topics. Some of the problems considered in the course were number and kind of livestock to keep, selection of foundation stock, securing foundation stock, housing, feeding, breeding and the control of parasites and diseases.

The course was taught by C. L. Mondart, local instructor in vocational agriculture, and consisted of a series of 15 meetings. During the progress of the work several athletic teams were organized among the members of the group.

ARTISTIC BATTLE RAGES OVER RAINEY PORTRAITS

Confusion reigns amidst the house library committee, which must choose, from these four portraits of the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey, one to be hung in the speaker's lobby. Four well-known artists, through a misunderstanding, each painted what he thought was an official picture of Mr. Rainey. Here Representative Kent E. Keller of Illinois contemplates the works of Boris Gordon (top center), Edwin B. Child (bottom center), N. R. Brewer (left) and Howard Chandler Christy (right).

Here Is Real Low-Down On This Skoaling Business

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The famous drinking traditions of Sweden are faltering a little, turned to one side by younger generations with more interest in conversation than strict formalities and the older generation is beginning to shed silent tears into wine glasses.

The good old word "skoal," pronounced as "skoal" in English, is involved.

Into this word is packed a good share of the history of Sweden, and one of the most dignified and elaborate drinking procedures the world has ever known. The formula is something like this:

Seat yourself at a table with from one to a dozen good companions, dealing only with one to begin.

Begin by catching the eye of someone, or by pronouncing the word "skoal" in a fairly loud and highly determined voice.

Now take your glass firmly in your hand, raise it quickly to about the level of your chin, and at the same time look deeply and intently into the eyes of the person you are skoaling.

At the moment your eyes meet incline the head and shoulders forward into a graceful bow, your skoaling partner will do the same.

Now drop your eyes out of the line of contact, raise your glass to your lips, drink, resume the contact of the eyes, now once more, and put down your glass.

This is the individual "skoal." In the case of a general skoal, the procedure is the same except that you contrive, holding your glass slightly below your chin, to flick your eyes, left and right, so as to contact all eyes at the table.

There are various other rules:

Never skoal your hostess at a formal gathering. Wait until she "skoals" you.

Never, in a formal gathering, skoal a man older than yourself. It's your business to know whether he's older.

Always skoal with the same sort of wine. Don't pick up red wine if someone is challenging your eyes with a glass of white wine.

Now what is beginning to grieve the older generations of Swedes is that this procedure is drifting a little to leeward, especially in restaurants and bars.

The old Swedes still hope it is only a passing phase. They still face each other, bound by the traditions of drinking, with a solid, undeviating, one, two, three, four, they drink to the precision of drinking, to the formality of drinking, to the idea that a drink without a "skoal" is no drink at all.

Royal Arms On Currency Void Scottish Bank Notes

EDINBURGH, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Millions of Scottish bank notes are being withdrawn from circulation following detection by authorities in London, that the bill designs embodied the royal arms.

The royal arms are insignia of public authority and can be used only by the king or government departments.

New notes are being issued containing the bank's own coats of arms.

Roosevelt Works On Speech Recommending Extension Of NRA

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—An assertion that "ample evidence" already is available that recovery administration codes have been "promoting monopoly" was thrust by Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, today into the widening debate over NRA continuance.

President Roosevelt worked on a special message to be transmitted on Monday, recommending a one-year extension of the recovery act with authority for extending it another year if necessary.

Borah made his statement in an interview after a senate judiciary subcommittee, of which he is a member, opened and quickly closed the doors on an unofficial inquiry into charges that codes have oppressed independent business. It was described only as a "preliminary cancellation." The investigation has not been authorized by the senate.

"Of course I am glad the investigation is going forward," Borah said. "We cannot have too many facts, but there is already ample evidence at hand that monopoly under NRA is draining the pockets of the average man in the United States through price-fixing.

"If the farmer gets a raise, he also gets an increase in prices for the things he has to buy. If labor gets a raise in wages, he more than pays it out on account of the increase in price for the things he has to buy.

"The anti-trust laws ought never to have been suspended and in the interest of humanity they ought to be restored and enforced."

FIVE OTHER OFFSPRING KEEP 'QUINS' PARENTS BUSY

THREE PERSONS HURT IN HIGHWAY MISHAPS

Three persons injured in two traffic accidents were admitted to a hospital and clinic here last night for treatment.

Jim Thomas, pulp wood worker, and Sam Wise, negro, were treated for injuries received when the truck on which they were riding turned over on the old Columbia road, west of the Ouachita river.

The two men are patients at the Vaughan-Wright-Bendel clinic. The negro suffered a broken arm and bruises. Thomas suffered general bruises and possibly other injuries.

While riding his bicycle Hood Gates, 18-year-old delivery boy of a telegraph company, was struck by an alleged hit-and-run automobile driver on the Sterlington road a short distance north of DeSiard road. He was picked up by a passing motorist and carried to St. Francis sanitarium, where he was treated for a severe cut on his arm.

The youth lives at the corner of Webster street and the Sterlington road.

FIRE ALARMS ANSWERED

Firemen made a run early Saturday night to 1900 Grammont street, where an outhouse of the residence of Mary Bates, negro, was destroyed by fire. Another run was made to the residence of T. Moore, negro, 212 Magnolia street, where soot in a chimney had caught fire. No damage was reported.

BETTY GOW SAILS BACK TO SCOTLAND

Nurse Punches Curious Woman Bystander In Jaw Aboard Ship

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—After a turbulent embarkation, Betty Gow, the dark-haired Scotch nurse maid to the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, was at sea today on the liner Berengaria en route home to her native Scotland.

Center of a whirlwind of excitement and confusion on the Cunard line pier, she ended a helter-skelter chase over the liner with a punch to the jaw of an over-curious woman bystander.

Unable to find her stateroom in the tourist class section, Miss Gow and her party of friends were followed by an increasing crowd of curious passengers and visitors up and down decks, first class quarters, tourist class and between decks.

As the chase increased, a middle-aged woman wearing glasses pushed her way through the crowd and snatched Miss Gow by the arm.

"Let's have a look at you," she demanded.

"Let me alone," cried the now thoroughly harassed young woman, and launched a small doubled fist to the woman's face.

When the Berengaria sailed about 4 a.m. today, she had safely locked herself away in her cabin after bidding a late goodby to her friends.

Miss Gow, who came back to testify for New Jersey against Bruno Hauptmann, arrived at the pier with friends who had given her a farewell party in Englewood. She declined to comment to newspaper reporters, and an internal revenue agent who headed the Gow party declared, "I have been instructed not to talk."

She took up her place in line at the tourist class ticket booth on the pier, but a Cunard line official quickly appeared and led her up the gang plank with her friends.

Evidently his directions were misunderstood, for a few minutes later she was found, apparently bewildered, wandering down "C" deck of the big ship. Then, recognized, she headed the chase which did not end until she locked herself and her party in her cabin, which was finally located some time later.

So tightly was the barricade maintained that one of the ship's officers come to arrange her passage, managed to get in only after repeated knockings and considerable persuasion.

Unlike her trip to the United States, Miss Gow sailed away under her own name.

It was previously reported that the nurse maid had been offered re-employment by Col. Lindbergh, but that Miss Gow had not definitely made up her mind. She was said to have expressed the intention of returning home first, in any eventuality.

Bastrop

Mrs. C. J. Goodwin's home on West Madison street, with a wealth of golden jonquils in classic urns grouped in the background, was the charming setting Thursday evening when Mrs. Goodwin's daughter, Mrs. E. L. Gladney, Jr., entertained in honor of an attractive visitor, Mrs. George Snyder of Munice, Ind.

Bridge was the diversion of the evening, with Mrs. F. H. Howard holding highest score in the games for which she was presented with lovely sport handkerchiefs. Mrs. Gladney's remembrance gift to Mrs. Snyder was exquisite hosiery.

Following the games a delicious salad course was served at dainty appointed tables. The guests sharing this delightful affair with Mrs. Snyder were Mesdames F. H. Howard, George W. Hiatt, Leland Howard, F. W. Hawthorne, J. B. Bennett, W. P. Douglass, R. H. Williams, C. J. Goodwin, Misses Tina Collins, Edith Hobbs, Fannie Hobbs and Mrs. Colvin Todd of Tallulah.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Boone McDowell Post, held their regular meeting Wednesday evening at the V. F. W. home on Madison street with Mrs. Florence Stivers, presiding.

Four new members, Mrs. Felicia A. Lynch, Mrs. Sidney H. Little, Mrs. Howard Harrison and Mrs. R. L. Johnson, were welcomed into the organization. A membership drive is now on and the organization is making an effort to increase its membership.

After the regular routine of business, refreshments were served by Mrs. Garrie Hood and Mrs. Stivers. Music was furnished during the social hour.

The home economics club of the Bastrop high school gave an open program before the members of the Bastrop high school and the seventh grade girls of the Central grammar school Tuesday evening. The title of the program was, "Being Internationally Minded." The purpose of the program was to create an atmosphere and a feeling of friendliness toward other nations and in some degree establish the fact that this is not the only nation having home economics taught in the schools but that other nations have well developed home economics departments.

The program consisted of a series of reports of what other nations are doing in this work, interspersed with national folk songs and dances. The program was climaxed by presenting Katherine Mulls in a typical American dance.

SHOPPING FLASHES

Picked Up Around Town

By IRENE S. REID

GOOD morning! I just must tell you about my interesting shopping day with Monroe's wide-awake merchants. The bright sunshine had its usual inviting appeal so I arose early, finished breakfast and called phone 222, Fresh Air Taxi Cab Co. (You know they are most reliable). I hardly had time to put my gloves and hat on before the cab was at my door . . . My! such service . . . The driver was one of those careful courteous men that gives you the assurance that "you need have no worry, you'll get there safely."

SPRINGTIME is party time . . . Levi Stationery Co. always has in mind something different for your parties. I was so pleased to find that the entire decoration plan for the party is taken off you . . . with the competent assistance Levi's gives. Don't forget George Washington's birthday. It calls for pretty parties—and soon St. Patrick's parties will be here. Don't forget Levi's. I didn't forget to take home a good book to read. It is Stark Young's "So Red the Rose," and let me tell you there is a library where the newest and latest fiction, drama and love stories are always available at a small cost per day. A shipment of new bridge gifts and playing cards just arrived. That's an interesting store, believe me.

I JUST get a kick out of looking at the new spring wearing apparel. For instance, that west window of D. Masur & Sons, was so exciting with those handsome new Campus Togs for men and young men. Would you believe it, marked only $15.00 up to $22.50. There were the new flannels, worsteds, solid greys and other tweed materials shown in double and single breasted models. Smart felt hats for men at $1.95 up. They're light weight, too.

MY visit at Bella Scherck Davidson was about the most exciting I have had . . . From the front door to the back door . . . there were loads and loads of gorgeous spring apparel for the smart woman. The feature that always appeals to me most at this shop is the wonderful quality . . and . . . at the price that fits my pocketbook. . . . Nifty pastel knits . . . furred caped coats and suits will bring a thrill to the shoppers who love beautiful clothes.

OH, SAY! Did it ever occur to you how convenient the Ruth Touchstone Beauty Salon is to the busy business woman? . . , with ample facilities and the sufficient number of operators, you can usually get an appointment immediately. . . . and, you bet your life the quality beauty work that the modern woman of today expects. By the way . . . don't forget about that hair stylist, Mr. Boone, who is brand new in Monroe! His varied experience in New York, Chicago and other large cities has equipped him in the beauty art. . . . He does lovely permanent waving, hair cutting, hair setting, etc.

THE best thing happened to us lately was when Collen's Pharmacy, Inc., announced a cut-rate drug policy . . . I had rather a large drug list to fill and was I astonished to discover the large savings I had made on the entire purchase. . . . Say, listen, those of you who want to keep that school girl complexion, begin with your Du Barry, or Harriett Hubbard Ayers or maybe Cara Nome cosmetics right now before the March winds beat you to it. Buy these items at Collens. Save money!

REALLY, there were three express men crowding into Johnnie Smith Elberts while I was there . . . Boxes of exquisite wearing apparel that Miss Johnnie bought in New York and Chicago last week . . . To sit there and hear her tell you about the styles and materials for this new season was as interesting as a new book. Oh! listen, one of those boxes contained pretty Marion Gross knit wear. Believe me, every garment was a new number.

GEE! . . . The New Grand Leader is really living up to its name! That store carries an assortment of women's fashions that will please the most exacting. You'll rave over those lovely swagger tweeds and by-swing model suits . . . A big shipment of spring coats came while I was there. My! were they beauties! Let me tell you right here . . . about that smart spring silk print I purchased there for only $3.95. I also found lovely ones at $6.95. Think of a size range from 12 to 46. . . . I'll tell you something, I think it would be a task to duplicate it elsewhere for the same money.

WELL, I finally met that charming new manager of the Rhealee Hat Shop. Mrs. Ann Hansen who comes to us from Dallas and Shreveport. And . . . does she know hats! . . . I just adore hats, don't you? . . . But, I simply can't afford to pay too much for one because I like variety . . . I do! There were hundreds of new spring hats to make a selection from . . . The profile brims, breton sailors, off-the-face flares . . . and that adorable regency bonnet in every new spring shade. I also found pleated taffeta and crepe bags at $1.00. You'll find the newest news of hats at Rhealee's, I am sure.

THIS shopping business is a great experience, one that every woman loves, but my . . . my . . . how tired I was when I finally reached Holloway & Thompson Shoe Shop! I didn't see how I could manage to have shoes fitted . . . but let me tell you . . . the surprise of my life came when I slipped my foot into a lovely pair of $8.50 Foot Delight navy oxfords which gave my feet a ready restful feeling and an appearance as smart as I would wish for. By the way, you can get those smart navy blue chiffon hose at $1.00 there also. Well, here's more news from this popular shoe shop . . . A complete Men's Shoe Department has been [illegible]ded featuring that famous Nunn-Bush shoe for men . . . Tell your husband about this . . . he'll like foot comfort as well as you.

SO tired but really hungry, I walked into Hemphill's Cafeteria for a nice juicy steak . . . Here I found a restful atmosphere and quiet surroundings. Before my eyes were gobs and gobs of delicious foods spread so tempting . . . Fresh vegetables, fowl, fish and meats, pies, fresh breads and desserts. From the way I filled the tray, I felt sure the check would be staggering but to my surprise, it totalled a measely little 31c. Think of it . . . You really can eat cheaper . . . and such deliciously prepared foods at Hemphill's . . . Try it next time you are really hungry.

THE show windows of the shops are unusually attractive with so much that is new . . . and right here, I must tell you about the attractive window at the Griffin's Studio. Those gorgeous photographs, sizes 11x14 that usually cost a great deal are now available for only $1.00 each. They're finished on a white background and should you desire, they will finish them in oil and sketch them in pencil . . . really a work of art . . . Say, Griffin will honor any coupon p[illegible]ased from any other studio at [illegible] ur-chase price. No, no, don't [illegible] an appointment, that isn't nece[illegible] . . . Just go right down. You never saw such a bargain in photographs before.

WHAT do you think I discovered when I reached Grant's? A full grown grocery store. Did you know there was one in the rear of this big store? Staple groceries and meats, even fresh eggs and cured hams. Well, I will leave it to you to guess how reasonable they are. Just like every item in this store, always cheaper but chucked full of quality. I found some new bolts of curtain material for 10c yard, in every color. Spring house cleaning won't catch me sleeping because I stocked up with polishes, oil mops, pastel paints and a host of new kitchen utensils. I found the aisles simply crowded and I do believe everybody shops there.

WITH my arms full of packages and rather tired, I could think of no better opportunity to accept that invitation to ride in the new Oldsmobile . . . I stepped into the drug store and called 2588. The courteous salesman was there very soon, and . . . Oh! how can I tell you the thrill of riding in this luxurious automobile. It seemed that I was relaxed in a big easy chair . . . no jolting, or bumping . . . just floating through the air as if on a magic carpet . . . The price is very moderate and can be bought on easy terms. The Twin City Motor company offers this invitation to everyone in the city, and believe me, I would accept it if I were you. . . . It's the popular automobile of today.

OH! . . . I nearly forgot to tell you, I selected a new Garland range at the Monroe Hardware company. When I arrived home I found the service men connecting it . . . Let me say right here . . . That a man's work may be from sun to sun, but a woman's work can be done much easier and with a lot less work when a Garland range is at her service . . . My reason for selecting it was that most of my friends are Garland users. They tell me there are over 5,000 satisfied users right here in this community! Every conceivable gadget and convenience to simplify cooking and baking is attached . . . I selected a table type style and it really is a beauty. Listen, it cost me only $59.00 . . . and another thing, such a liberal allowance on my old stove.

OH, say! . . . regardless of how busy you are or how hurriedly your shopping time is spent, be sure to run on down to the Home Furniture company and see for yourself the wonderful furniture bargains they are offering in their February furniture sale . . . Don't fail to see that 4-room outfit for only $290. Listen, a complete kitchen, dining room, bedroom and living room . . . A small payment will deliver the complete (four rooms) . . . Oh, those Gold Seal Congoleum rugs . . . Real first quality, all sorts of patterns at only $8.75. There are other size rugs featured during this sale. In fact, everything in the store is on sale.

NOW, for that entertaining program that my new 1935 Philco always assures me. The turn of the dial . . . and there . . . any foreign point that I should care to listen to. Clear of tone and free of any interference . . . You know it really is a pleasure to have a radio that you can depend upon at any time. My Philco not only gives me entertainment but is an outstanding piece of beautiful furniture in my home. The Home Furniture Co. will deliver one to your home on the same easy payment plan that they sell fine furniture.

ALTHOUGH I was tired from this strenuous day of shopping, I had no fear that I would not have a comfortable night's rest. The beautiful new "Rest Well" mattress that I purchased last week from the Dixie Bedding & Furniture Co. has actually repaid me in rest for the money I spent for it . . . Only $22.50—and by the way that is a special price right now . . . There will be no more restless nights as "Rest Well" invites sleep . . . I also had three of my old mattresses made over at this place which saves me the price of new mattresses for a long time to come. By the way, Mr. Kusin came back recently from New York furniture markets and told me that he purchased a full line of summer furniture and already it is arriving . . . See it.

Listen, Monroe housewives, how about accompanying me on my next week's tour.

Sincerely,

IRENE.

Roosevelt Works On Speech Recommending Extension Of NRA

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—An assertion that "ample evidence" already is available that recovery administration codes have been "promoting monopoly" was thrust by Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, today into the widening debate over NRA continuance.

President Roosevelt worked on a special message to be transmitted on Monday, recommending a one-year extension of the recovery act with authority for extending it another year if necessary.

Borah made his statement in an interview after a senate judiciary subcommittee, of which he is a member, opened and quickly closed the doors on an unofficial inquiry into charges that codes have oppressed independent business. It was described only as a "preliminary canceilation." The investigation has not been authorized by the senate.

"Of course I am glad the investigation is going forward," Borah said. "We cannot have too many facts, but there is already ample evidence at hand that monopoly under NRA is draining the pockets of the average man in the United States through price-fixing.

"If the farmer gets a raise, he also gets an increase in prices for the things he has to buy. If labor gets a raise in wages, he more than pays it out on account of the increase in price for the things he has to buy.

"The anti-trust laws ought never to have been suspended and in the interest of humanity they ought to be restored and enforced."

FIVE OTHER OFFSPRING KEEP 'QUINS' ' PARENTS BUSY

THREE PERSONS HURT IN HIGHWAY MISHAPS

Three persons injured in two traffic accidents were admitted to a hospital and clinic here last night for treatment.

Jim Thomas, pulp wood worker, and Sam Wise, negro, were treated for injuries received when the truck on which they were riding turned over on the old Columbia road, west of the Ouachita river.

The two men are patients at the Vaughan-Wright-Bendel clinic. The negro suffered a broken arm and bruises. Thomas suffered general bruises and possibly other injuries.

While riding his bicycle Hood Gates, 18-year-old delivery boy of a telegraph company, was struck by an alleged hit-and-run automobile driver on the Sterlington road a short distance north of DeSiard road. He was picked up by a passing motorist and carried to St. Francis sanitarium, where he was treated for a severe cut on his arm.

The youth lives at the corner of Webster street and the Sterlington road.

FIRE ALARMS ANSWERED

Firemen made a run early Saturday night to 1900 Grammont street, where an outhouse of the residence of Mary Bates, negro, was destroyed by fire. Another run was made to the residence of T. Moore, negro, 212 Magnolia street, where soot in a chimney had caught fire. No damage was reported.

BETTY GOW SAILS BACK TO SCOTLAND

Nurse Punches Curious Woman Bystander In Jaw Aboard Ship

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—After a turbulent embarkation, Betty Gow, the dark-haired Scotch nurse maid to the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, was at sea today on the liner Berengaria en route home to her native Scotland.

Center of a whirlwind of excitement and confusion on the Cunard line pier, she ended a helter-skelter chase over the liner with a punch to the jaw of an over-curious woman bystander.

Unable to find her stateroom in the tourist class section, Miss Gow and her party of friends were followed by an increasing crowd of curious passengers and visitors up and down decks, first class quarters, tourist class and between decks.

As the chase increased, a middle-aged woman wearing glasses pushed her way through the crowd and snatched Miss Gow by the arm.

"Let's have a look at you," she demanded.

"Let me alone," cried the now thoroughly harassed young woman, and launched a small doubled fist to the woman's face.

When the Berengaria sailed about 4 a.m. today, she had safely locked herself away in her cabin after bidding a late goodby to her friends.

Miss Gow, who came back to testify for New Jersey against Bruno Hauptmann, arrived at the pier with friends who had given her a farewell party in Englewood. She declined to comment to newspaper reporters, and an internal revenue agent who headed the Gow party declared, "I have been instructed not to talk."

She took up her place in line at the tourist class ticket booth on the pier, but a Cunard line official quickly appeared and led her up the gang plank with her friends.

Evidently his directions were misunderstood, for a few minutes later she was found, apparently bewildered, wandering down "C" deck of the big ship. Then, recognized, she headed the chase which did not end until she locked herself and her party in her cabin, which was finally located some time later.

So tightly was the barricade maintained that one of the ship's officers, come to arrange her passage, managed to get in only after repeated knockings and considerable persuasion.

Unlike her trip to the United States, Miss Gow sailed away under her own name.

It was previously reported that the nurse maid had been offered re-employment by Col. Lindbergh, but that Miss Gow had not definitely made up her mind. She was said to have expressed the intention of returning home first, in any eventuality.

Bastrop

Mrs. C. J. Goodwin's home on West Madison street, with a wealth of golden jonquils in classic urns grouped in the background, was the charming setting Thursday evening when Mrs. Goodwin's daughter, Mrs. E. L. Gladney, Jr., entertained in honor of an attractive visitor, Mrs. George Snyder of Munice, Ind.

Bridge was the diversion of the evening, with Mrs. F. H. Howard holding highest score in the games for which she was presented with lovely sport handkerchiefs. Mrs. Gladney's remembrance gift to Mrs. Snyder was exquisite hosiery.

Following the games a delicious salad course was served at dainty appointed tables. The guests sharing this delightful affair with Mrs. Snyder were Mesdames F. H. Howard, George W. Hiatt, Leland Howard, F. W. Hawthorne, J. B. Bennett, W. P. Douglass, R. H. Williams, C. J. Goodwin, Misses Tina Collins, Edith Hobbs, Fannie Hobbs and Mrs. Colvin Todd of Tallulah.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Boone McDowell Post, held their regular meeting Wednesday evening at the V. F. W. home on Madison street with Mrs. Florence Stivers, presiding.

Four new members, Mrs. Felicia A. Lynch, Mrs. Sidney H. Little, Mrs. Howard Harrison and Mrs. R. L. Johnson, were welcomed into the organization. A membership drive is now on and the organization is making an effort to increase its membership.

After the regular routine of business, refreshments were served by Mrs. Garrie Hood and Mrs. Stivers. Music was furnished during the social hour.

The home economics club of the Bastrop high school gave an open program before the members of the Bastrop high school and the seventh grade girls of the Central grammar school Tuesday evening. THIS shopping business is a great experience, one that every woman loves, but my . . . my . . . how tired I was when I finally reached Holloway & Thompson Shoe Shop! I didn't see how I could manage to have shoes fitted . . . but let me tell you . . . the surprise of my life came when I slipped my foot into a lovely pair of $8.50 Foot Delight navy oxfords which gave my feet a ready restful feeling and an appearance as smart as I would wish for. By the way, you can get those smart navy blue chiffon hose at $1.00 there also. Well, here's more news from this popular shoe shop . . . A complete Men's Shoe Department has been added featuring that famous Nunn-Bush shoe for men . . . Tell your husband about this . . . he'll like foot comfort as well as you.

SO tired but really hungry. I walked into Hemphill's Cafeteria for a nice juicy steak . . . Here I found a restful atmosphere and quiet surroundings. Before my eyes were gobs and gobs of delicious foods spread so tempting . . . Fresh vegetables, fowl, fish and meats, pies, fresh breads and desserts. From the way I filled the tray. I felt sure the check would be staggering but to my surprise, it totalled a measely little 31c. Think of it . . . You really can eat cheaper . . . and such deliciously prepared foods at Hemphill's . . . Try it next time you are really hungry.

THE show windows of the shops are unusually attractive with so much that is new . . . and right here, I must tell you about the attractive window at the Griffin's Studio. Those gorgeous photographs, sizes 11x14 that usually cost a great deal are now available for only $1.00 each. They're finished on a white background and should you desire, they will finish them in oil and sketch them in pencil . . . really a work of art . . . Say, Griffin will honor any coupon p[illegible]ased from any other studio at [illegible] urchase price. No, no, don't [illegible] an appointment, that isn't nece[illegible] . . . Just go right down. You never saw such a bargain in photographs before.

WHAT do you think I discovered when I reached Grant's? A full grown grocery store. Did you know there was one in the rear of this big store? Staple groceries and meats, even fresh eggs and cured hams. Well, I will leave it to you to guess how reasonable they are. Just like every item in this store, always cheaper but chucked full of quality. I found some new bolts of curtain material for 10c yard, in every color. Spring house cleaning won't catch me sleeping because I stocked up with polishes, oil mops, pastel paints and a host of new kitchen utensils. I found the aisles simply crowded and I do believe everybody shops there.

WITH my arms full of packages and rather tired, I could think of no better opportunity to accept that invitation to ride in the new Oldsmobile . . . I stepped into the drug store and called 2588. The courteous salesman was there very soon, and . . . Oh! how can I tell you the thrill of riding in this luxurious automobile. It seemed that I was relaxed in a big easy chair . . . no jolting, or bumping . . . just floating through the air as if on a magic carpet . . . The price is very moderate and can be bought on easy terms. The Twin City Motor company offers this invitation to everyone in the city, and believe me, I would accept it if I were you. . . . It's the popular automobile of today.

OH! . . . I nearly forgot to tell you, I selected a new Garland range at the Monroe Hardware company. When I arrived home I found the service men connecting it . . . Let me say right here . . . That a man's work may be from sun to sun, but a woman's work can be done much easier and with a lot less work when a Garland range is at her service . . . My reason for selecting it was that most of my friends are Garland users. They tell me there are over 5,000 satisfied users right here in this community! Every conceivable gadget and convenience to simplify cooking and baking is attached . . . I selected a table type style and it really is a beauty. Listen, it cost me only $59.00 . . . and another thing, such a liberal allowance on my old stove.

OH, say! . . . regardless of how busy you are or how hurriedly your shopping time is spent, be sure to run on down to the Home Furniture company and see for yourself the wonderful furniture bargains they are offering in their February furniture sale . . . Don't fail to see that 4-room outfit for only $290. Listen, a complete kitchen, dining room, bedroom and living room . . . A small payment will deliver the complete (four rooms) . . . Oh, those Gold Seal Congoleum rugs . . . Real first quality, all sorts of patterns at only $8.75. There are other size rugs featured during this sale. In fact, everything in the store is on sale.

NOW, for that entertaining program that my new 1935 Philco always assures me. The turn of the dial . . . and there . . . any foreign point that I should care to listen to. Clear of tone and free of any interference . . . You know it really is a pleasure to have a radio that you can depend upon at any time. My Philco not only gives me entertainment but is an outstanding piece of beautiful furniture in my home. The Home Furniture Co. will deliver one to your home on the same easy payment plan that they sell fine furniture.

ALTHOUGH I was tired from this strenuous day of shopping, I had no fear that I would not have a comfortable night's rest. The beautiful new "Rest Well" mattress that I purchased last week from the Dixie Bedding & Furniture Co. has actually repaid me in rest for the money I spent for it . . . Only $22.50—and by the way that is a special price right now . . . There will be no more restless nights as "Rest Well" invites sleep . . . I also had three of my old mattresses made over at this place which saves me the price of new mattresses for a long time to come. By the way, Mr. Kusin came back recently from New York furniture markets and told me that he purchased a full line of summer furniture and already it is arriving . . . See it.

Listen, Monroe housewives, how about accompanying me on my next week's tour.

Sincerely,

IRENE.

SOCIETY

BY EVE BRADFORD

GOOD MORNING! A pot pourri of small social affairs perfume the waning of February . . . The days grow longer and consequently we have more leisure to see our friends, more time to read beside our firesides . . . visitors come to town and we lunch here and there and play bridge . . . The sun rises higher, warming the world more and more as the days go by . . . soon Persephone, her period of darkness and penitence over, will come back to spend two-thirds of the year with her mother—the time of springing grass, flowers and fruit . . . The Earth Mother, young and joyous, will dance with us, her children of the dust. . . . Blue birds are flitting among the nude trees where buds are swelling preparatory to the greatest miracle of the whole year . . . April this year, will bring us more than showers—a regular whirlwind of brides, so we are told . . . no use to speculate as to their identity as two of them will come as a complete surprise. . . . Who said a woman couldn't keep a secret? . . . Elizabeth Clarke closely guarded her engagement . . . not until the eleventh hour was the news revealed and then what a scampering there was to entertain her. . . . She was an exquisite bride, her clear cut features reflected in the full length mirror forming the background for the improvised altar. . . . We lose many of our favorites when they walk altarward but new ones come to fill the niche. . . . Elizabeth goes to a new home, new scenes and new friends. . . . Charlie Eby brings his bride into our midst and the shuttle keeps weaving back and forth with the bright threads predominating. . . . Breeze from the Airways—Jean Dryburgh motoring out to Selman Field to wish Elizabeth Carr a safe landing, makes a quick decision . . . after a hurried telephone conversation in which her parents are quite helpless she steps aboard the plane, Alabama bound . . . this, my dears, is the spirit of the age—youth never wades along the shore in shallow water—they strike out boldly for the deep water with self reliance and assurance . . . timidity, fear and uncertainty has no place in the bright lexicon of today's youth. . . . Sally Walters blew into town last week from Washington, lovelier than ever and possessing a dash and verve all Washingtonians acquire sooner or later. . . . Elmer and Anna Slagle off to visit the newlyweds, Ching and Melville Vaughan in Illinois . . . so anxious were they for first hand word from home they met them halfway on the road. . . . Bessie Biedenharn tells us that Elizabeth (Cutler) will visit us when spring flaunts its beauty at Bethaven . . . the garden where hundreds of tulips, reminiscent of a Dutch village, soon in bloom, will be the setting, and naturally society is on the qui vive. . . . February, the little month with its numerous fete days, always brings to mind the beautiful but sad story of Lincoln and Ann Rutledge the girl who died an untimely death . . . Lincoln gave all of himself to this love that was cut down by death before it had flowered. . . . After Ann's death he almost lost his grip on reality . . . there was the night of the storm and thunder when he looked out the door and said to his friends, "I can't bear to think of her out there alone." Then he clenched his hands and mubied, "The rain and the storm shan't beat on her grave." But he could do nothing to stop the rain and the storm. . . . Ann's death was to give him a humility which was to stand him in good stead in years to come. . . . Swift on the heels of Lincoln's birthday came St. Valentine's day . . . it was a sad, heartless day for little girls who trudged home from school with hot, dry mouths, aching eyes, a pain in the heart and no Valentines . . . if so, their grief gave way to muffled sobbing once they were safe in the sanctity of their bedrooms, away from prying, mischievous little brothers. . . . Motoring along Riverside yesterday we were almost consumed with the desire to snatch those saucy young pines, recently planted directly in front of the beautiful red-bud trees and fling them back to their native forests . . . dreams of an avenue of red-buds glorifying the landscape each spring have long been entertained by dwellers along Riverside and just as their dreams were coming true along came some one and planted a pine tree directly opposite each tree . . . and still the wonder grows—why should a pine be selected for this section of Louisiana when we have the magnolia, the crape myrtle, the dogwood and the red-bud . . . pine trees are for climates where flowering trees are unknown but not in our dear southland, land of flowers of vivid hue. . . . Any state can have a pine but only Louisiana can produce the perfect flowering trees. . . . There are those who feel a grave injustice has been done that section of the city where the red-bud trees have been pushed into the background. . . . Society thronged the Webb home last night where several interesting visitors were the toast of the evening . . . it was most enjoyable, gay and mouvemente with many beautiful flowers, candles in the dining room gleaming on bare shoulders and much exotic finery . . . these brilliant little cocktail hours certainly do add zest and color to our daily life. . . .

Engagement Announced

Of sincere interest to friends is the following announcement:

Mr. and Mrs. David Solomon, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mehiba, to Mr. William Thomas, of Greenville, Miss. The wedding will take place in the early spring.

John C. Eby, member of the senior class, University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Eby and incidentally attended the marriage of his brother, Mr. Charlie Eby on the fifteenth.

Marriage Of Miss Clarke And Mr. Tobin Is Event Of Great Interest In This City

The cordial and sincere interest of society is centered in the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Clarke, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Clarke of this city and Mr. Mylin Tobin, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Tobin of Bonham, Texas, Saturday evening, February the sixteenth at five o'clock in the afternoon at the home of the bride's parents with Father Walsh of St. Matthew's church officiating in the presence of the family and a few intimate friends

An improvised altar was reared in the reception suite with a handsome floor length mirror in the background reflecting the beautiful details. Southern smilax traced its graceful, sinuous length over the arches, windows and doorways and tall floor standards overflowed with golden jonquils and long stemmed purple violets. The altar was flanked by classic urns filled with golden jonquils and ferns.

Miss Margaret Tobin, sister of the bride-groom, played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin at the nuptial hour.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Stanley Wyatt who wore a smart navy blue ensemble with accessories of beige. A corsage of Johanna Hill roses and valley lilies was worn. Mr. Tobin was attended by Mr. Stanley Wyatt.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a smart ensemble of beige Jallierd crepe trimmed with brown summer ermine and accessories of brown. She carried a beautiful bridal bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and valley lilies.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Tobin left in their automobile for a honeymoon trip and upon their return will be at home in Dallas, Texas, where Mr. Tobin is associated with Swift and company. He is a graduate of the University of Texas and a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Mrs. Tobin is a daughter of a prominent Monroe family long identified with the social and civic life of this city. She is a graduate of the city high school and the University of Texas. She also attended Centenary college. She is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. For the past year she has been identified with Northeast Center, Louisiana State university.

In the pictures today we have members of the Sperry-Kellogg wedding personnel. Reading from left to right, they are: Mr. Vermont Royster of Raleigh, N. C.; Mr. Palmer Kellogg of Hughes, Ark.; Miss Sue Graves, Mr. Laurence Kellogg of Alexandria, La.; Miss Violet Meyer, Mr. John Blackmon, Miss Elizabeth Carr, Mr. Keith Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kellogg, bridegroom and bride; Mr. Richard Kellogg, Miss Sara Snipes, Mr. Burt Sperry, Miss Anna Laurie Smith, Dr. Prentice Gray, Miss Jean Dryburgh, Mr. James Shell, Mr. George Miller. The flower girls, Betty Kellogg and Rhoda Kellogg. Ring bearer, Marguerite Lamkin (center). Portrait by Griffin studio.

Mrs. Franklin Shaw, charming member of the younger married set, who will guide the destiny of the Junior Charity league in this city during the coming year. Mrs. Shaw was recently elected president of this organization. Home portrait by Nina Webb.

Blue birds fluttering in the forsythia bushes.

To see Mrs. Clyde Paine in surplice and cap singing "O Perfect Love."

The knitted suit just finished by Miss Eunice Haynes.

Mrs. John Breard's Scotch terrier.

THINGS TO LOOK FORWARD TO . . .

Three hundred tulips unfolding their petals in the gardens at Bethaven.

The blooming of the red bud along Riverside drive.

Snowy drifts of dogwood blossoms at Sycamore hall.

The announcement of the engagement of a popular member of the younger set.

Pre-nuptial affairs for Miss India Stubbs.

Miss Mary Bonita Allen in the Little Theater play Tuesday night.

FOREHEAD WRINKLERS . . .

What young lady is planning to spend the summer at Lake Placid?

Whose automobile is parked every evening at the door of a charming widow?

What young couple won twenty dollars on the races in New Orleans last week?

What literary aspirant of Monroe is writing under a pen name?

What young man sent a certain party in this city a twenty-five dollar bottle of Guerlain's for a Valentine?

THINGS ENJOYED RECENTLY . . .

Hearing Mrs. Clarence Faulk tell of snowdrifts in New York city.

Watching Miss Jean Dryburgh board a plane for her first flight.

Hearing Mrs. George Lowery talk on bird life.

Seeing Mrs. Howard Greene in smart spring tailleur with violets in the lapel of her coat.

Nuptial Event Of Charming Simplicity Claims The Interest Of Many Friends In This City

A wedding characterized by exquisite simplicity and impressiveness was solemnized when Miss Marjorie Simms, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Franklin Newberry of Rayville, La., and Mr. Charlie Crosley Eby, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Eby of West Monroe, were united in marriage at 7 o'clock in the evening, Friday, February the fifteenth.

St. David's Episcopal church, Rayville, was redolent with the perfume of myriad spring blossoms for the ceremony impressively performed by Dr. Edward F. Hayward, rector of Grace church, this city, in the presence of the immediate family and a few intimate friends.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Ben Edward Simms of Baton Rouge, wore a distinctive grey tailleur with accessories of Madelon blue. A corsage of pink Bride's-Blush roses and valley lilies completed the becoming ensemble. Mr. Eby was attended by Mr. Richard Kellerman of South Pittsburgh Tenn., a former college classmate and fraternity brother.

Following a brief honeymoon in Mississippi, Mr. and Mrs. Eby will be at home to their friends with Mr. Eby's parents for the time being. Mrs. Eby, a graduate of Underhill college, Salisbury, N. C., will be a distinct acquisition to society. She is a young lady of charming personality and a great favorite in this city where she has visited from time to time. Mr. Eby, member of an old pioneer family of this community, is a graduate of the University of the South and a member of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity. Mr. Eby is a popular principal of the Millsaps school, West Monroe, and a great favorite in Little Theater and social circles.

Miss Gray Will Lead Debate At Brenau College

Miss Louise Gray, talented young daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. P. Gray of this city, has again won favorable recognition in literary circles at Brenau college, Gainsville, Ga. Miss Gray will represent the college in the second Brenau debate of the spring semester, which is scheduled for Saturday, March 2, with a team from Vanderbilt university. Brenau will support the affirmative of the question: "Resolved, that the nations should agree to prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions."

Miss Gray is a pledge of Tri-Delta, national social sorority on Brenau campus.

Visit Of Mrs. White Is The Signal For Several Charming Informal Social Affairs

Mrs. J. N. White of Louisville, Ky., found her visit in the home of her son, Mr. R. C. White and Mrs. White, unusually delightful, with some form of social activity marking each day. Among the hostesses entertaining during the past week were Mrs. R. C. Sparks, Jr., who entertained with a theater party and tea later at her lovely home on Riverside Drive. Mrs. Henry Guerriero and Mrs. Sydney Moore gathered a few congenials together for bridge at the Guerriero home and Mr. and Mrs. Flood Madison were hosts at dinner. Mrs. Murray Hudson was hostess at bridge; also Mrs. Ben Downing who welcomed just a few intimates at Lakeside Country club. Mrs. C. H. Read also entertained informally at bridge.

Mrs. R. C. White brought the pleasures of the week to a climax with a bridge-luncheon at the Lotus club with her mother-in-law the central figure. The luncheon table in the private dining room was deveoped in vivid hues symboic of St. Valentine. Gorgeous crimson carnations formed a central plaque down the full length of the table with cunning Valentine cards and other charming reminders of the day ruled over by the patron saint of love. A four-course luncheon was faultlessly served and later bridge was introduced in the lounge of the club. The interesting games resulted in the presentation of gifts for high scores. Mrs. Frederick Millsaps received a beautiful potted plant and Mrs. George Lester received a double deck of cards. Mrs. A. G. McHenry received exquisite linen handkerchiefs and Mrs. Maish of Indiana received for remembrance a novel of current interest. Mrs. White, the honor guest was favored with linen handkerchiefs. The gifts were charming wrapped in crimson tissue and ribbon tied.

Those present were Mrs. J. N. White, Mrs. A. G. McHenry, Mrs. L. P. Milner, Mrs. Murray Hudson, Mrs. F. Millsaps, Mrs. Vernon Maish, Mrs. B. Maish, Mrs. Alice Briggs, Mrs. George Lester, Mrs. A. B. Gregory, Mrs. Ralph King, Mrs. Ben Downing, Mrs. R. C. Sparks, Sr., Mrs. Flood Madison, Mrs. F. Marshall, Mrs. C. H. Read and the hostess.

Younger Beau Monde Pays Respects To June Lewis On Her Birthday Anniversary

Happy indeed the little girl who can celebrate her birthday anniversary during the St. Valentine season when the god of love rules the world. June Lewis, golden-haired and lovely and inheriting the spirit of hospitality from her maternal side, stood under fluttering hearts in the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Grisham, on her seventh birthday, to welcome members of the younger beau monde who came with gifts for their fair hostess. They romped and played in the spacious reception suite and were favored with cunning Valentines and heart-shaped boxes of red satin filled with sweetmeats, for their success in the games.

The cutting of the luscious heart-shaped birthday cake with its flaring crimson tapers overshadowed all the other pleasures of the afternoon. The cake ornamented the center of the lace-draped table in the dining room encircled with myriad crimson hearts. Crimson ribbons attached to favors for every guest led from the cake to the table's edge. Little heart-shaped cakes and "Valentine" ices were served in the greatest abundance by June's mother, Mrs. O. R. Lewis and her cherished grandmother, Mrs. Grisham.

Invited to share the pleasures of the day with the young celebrant were: Adrienne Gaston, Ann Brown, Thomas Sandridge, Edith McWilliams, Betty McRoberts, Gwendolyn and Jacquelyn Walker, Charlotte Cooper, Cleta Godfrey, Mary Dixon, Elmer Slagle, David Bubb, Louise Littlepage, Nora Marie Lennon, Windsor Greene, Ann Brown, Jane Melebeck, Joy Harper, Dixie Troy, Henry Guerriero, Jr., Cherry Bernstein, Robert Layton, Carol Layton, Tommy Wright, Joan and Jerry Biedenharn, Charles Reid, Jr., Betty Hoskins, Arabella Bancroft, David King, Prentice Castle, Mary Anita Lennon, St. Claire Hayden, Minnie Madden, Patsy Zeigan, Dilmer Bernhardt, Flood Garrett, Peggy Prindle, Mary Alice Michel, Owen Johnson, Joan Boardman, James Noe, Jean Flournoy, June Griffin, "Judge" Davis, Mary Stuart Kellogg, Rhoda Kellogg, Camille Hancock, Sallie Sue Johnson, Patricia Higgins, Katheryn Winters, Ray Braswel, Betina Moore, Betty Sue Shotwell, Louise Frisbie, Sonny Parker, Angelina Swift, Vettye Bernhardt, Joy Anice Bernhardt, Alymer Montgomery, Jr., Edward Seymour, Jr., S. Business Women Meet

The regular business meeting of the Business and Professional Women's club was held at the club house with 23 members present. A letter was read from Mrs. Gertrude Slay resigning as president of the local club due to the fact that she had moved to Memphis, Tenn., to accept a position in the insurance department of the Home Owners' Loan office. Miss C. Mae Johnson, first vice president was elected president to serve the unexpired term. Two new members were introduced to the club, Mrs. Goldie Copes, secretary to Mr. Warren of the Southern Bell Telephone company, and Miss Zelda Moss, English instructor at Ouachita parish high school. Both members were cordially welcomed. Finance chairman reported that the Purple side had submitted the sum of $188 and the Gold side, $158. Miss Mae McIntosh, legislation chairman, brought up facts concerning group insurance for the club members, a report will be made at next business meeting. Publicity chairman spoke of plans for Business Women's week, beginning March 17th, National President Mrs. Geline McBowman will broadcast over N.B.C., 4 to 4:30, eastern standard time, on March 19th. Due to the resignation of Mrs. Ida Kaplan from the board of governors, Miss Florence Powers was elected to serve in her place for the balance of this year and next year. Mrs. Charles McCord was appointed club hostess to fill the vacancy created by the death of Mrs. Mildred Richeson. A committee was appointed to draw resolutions, same to be published in local paper, copies sent to the family and copy place on permanent records.

Mrs. Johnnie Smith Elbert will have the annual Spring Style Show on the 19th of March. Time and place to be named later.

Mr. Isaac Lemle has agreed to direct a ladies' minstrel for the Business and Professional Woman's club, to be given the first Friday after Easter. Miss Florence Powers, chairman of the Purple side will have a Bingo party at the residence of Mrs. E. C. Thompson, 3103 South Grand on Friday, February 22. Reports from the various committees were given. The Agnes Morris Loan fund chairman reported that application had been made for a loan this coming year. For the benefit of those who do not understand this fund an explanation is given. This fund was started in 1920, each club in the state contributing $600, paying a certain amount of this sum each year. At that time there were twelve clubs in the state, this made a revolving fund of $7,200. Loans are made to girls preferably some one connected with the club, with six per cent interest. The borrower makes a note, has endorsers, also the club has to endorse the note, and after the borrower begins earning money, she must start paying back after she has been working three months. Paying back as she earns it. The proceeds going into this fund. The fund was named for Agnes Morris of New Orleans. At the close of the meeting banks were opened and quite a neat sum was realized.

The following members were present: Miss C. May Johnson, Mae McIntosh, Alice Baur, Hazel Wakefield, Florence Powers, Kate Clark, Mary O'Kelley, Nora Downs, Mrs. Flora Cryse, Johnnie S. Elbert, Laura Slator, Dora Anish, Mary Bailey, Clara Dennis, Lillian Jackson, Lillie Arent, Marie Wamsley, Eunice Lee, Lizie Mozrris and the two new members, Mrs. Goldie Copes and Miss Zelda Moss.

Program meeting the fourth Tuesday in the month.

Birthday Party

Sue Atkinson reached the interesting age of seven years Friday, and in commemoration of the happy event invited her most intimate little friends to share the pleasures of the day with her.

The ideal weather prompted games on the lawn, after which the children were invited to the dining room to view the handsome cake, and to find their places at the beautifully decorated table developed in pink and green.

Clever little carnival hats and noise makers marked each place and resulted in much merry making.

After the refreshments, fortunes were told, and brought to a close a very happy day and one never to be forgotten by Sue and the following friends:

Bob Hickerson, Betty Hale, Gail Stewart, Barbara Trotter, Jean Trotter, Sarah Roberts, Ida Sophia Davidson, Catherine Winters, Evelyn Jones, Beverly Handy, Paula Friedlander, John Ellis Bryant, Jr., Frances Whittelsey, Jimmy Phelps, Fred S. Hightower, Jr., Jerry Hightower, Sam Hightower, Elizabeth Ann Golson, Fred Key Golson, Gene Hodges, George Mouk, Malcolm Steen, Wilfred Ellis, John Humble.

Members of the Dixie Benevolent club are planning a charming social affair for Tuesday night at the Masonic hall and extend a cordial invitation to the public generally to be their guests. A George Washington theme will be reflected in the details and a silver offering will be featured.

Members of the Literary Guild are notified through this medium of the postponement of meetings for two weeks.

Subject Of Art Is Discussed By Mrs. Christman

Mrs. D. H. Christman, state chairman of art, Louisiana Federated Women's clubs, has the following interesting remarks to make in behalf of art in this state:

The arts, paintings, music, poetry, literature and sculpture are the most important and essential factors in our lives today. They take us by the hand and lead us everywhere.

Leo Tolstoi, the great Russian writer and social reformer, tells us life and art so closely connected. After 15 years of thought and study of aesthetics he wrote "What is art?" and the answer, "It is life."

They are the principles on which we build and furnish our homes, landscape and beautify the highways, build our public buildings, churches, museums, and indeed all architecture since the beginning of time, the arts have influenced our styles, both of dress and screen; without their art, directors would be without plan or culture.

Sir Thomas Brown says nature is the art of God. Art is not religion, nor either is religion art, yet art will lead you on to higher and loftier planes into the outer courtyards of heaven.

At the present time the art activities throughout the state are most encouraging, which is an inspiration to art circles and club life to go forward to broader fields.

Our purpose and plans this year are to build on the firm foundation of my predecessor, beloved and brilliant past leader established and not to feel our duty done until every club in the state has established an art department.

May I suggest one form of study; decide what phase of art to follow. The history of art will lead you from Egyptian art through Italian, the Renaissance, down to the French art of the twentieth century, to art of our modern times and the impressions and realistic schools.

Whenever you have the opportunity, visit art museums, galleries and dealers in art. When in the southern part of the state, visit New Orleans Delgado Museum of art, Reed Art galleries on Royal street, and the Louisiana state capitol at Baton Rouge. In the house of representatives and senate chambers there are works of New Orleans sculpture—22 in all. You will also see sculptures done by one of our outstanding sculptors of the day, Lorado Taft; beautiful porcelain urns from France to our state, and many more beautiful subjects.

Encourage our artists of the state by purchasing their statues and assisting in holding small exhibits and sales, support and assist your chairman of the art department of the Louisiana State Fair by contributing your studies, framed and addressed, ready to be hung. Rules governing this will be announced later. Entries will be free. If they are for sale, make the department acquainted with the fact, for this is also a state market.

The art department of the Louisiana Federation of Women's clubs will sponsor an art contest for state artists at the annual convention this fall. Each woman's club in the state where there are local artists are asked to hold their exhibit at least two weeks in advance of the convention date. The four winners in local contests will be sent to the state convention where all entries are to be judged and prizes will be awarded. First, second, and honorable mention. All rules governing the contest will be published in the daily newspapers and sent you by the art chairmen later. May we endeavor to have many new studies from artists throughout the state?

The Penny Art fund is the plan whereby every club member is to contribute one penny a year for a prize fund. This fund is handled in each state by the art chairman. She purchases with the money pieces of American art to be presented at the annual state meeting to the club doing the most to raise the standard of beauty and spread the knowledge of art in their communities.

No club will be eligible unless it adopts the penny art fund. It is well to put it in the club's annual budget. It is simply this—if your club numbers 17, send 17 cents; if 100, send $1—one penny for each member per year.

Please send check to your state art chairman. All money stays in your own state. May I ask all clubs throughout the state to send their funds to me at an early date, as it is necessary for me to send an April report.

In order to give the small clubs an equal chance to secure coveted prizes, clubs will be placed in three divisions;

Division 1—All clubs of 400 members or over.

Division 2—All clubs of 200 members to 399.

Division 3—All clubs of 10 members to 199.

Our slogan is: "Federated American Pennies for American Art." "Without vision the people perish." Henry Van Dyke's beautiful poem:

"Four things we must learn to do,
If we make our records true;
To think without confusion, clearly;
To love our fellowman sincerely;
To act through honest motives purely;
To trust in God and heaven securely."

Charming Visitor In City

Mrs. George Hildebrandt of New Britton, Conn., is enjoying Louisiana winter weather to the fullest as the house guest of Mrs. Thomas Sholars. A motor trip down in the Bayou Teche country, famed in story and song and a few days in New Orleans, the nation's most interesting city, included the pleasures of the past ten days.

Returning home Mrs. Sholars gathered a few intimates together for tea and dispensed with characteristic grace her special brand of hospitality. Mrs. Hillyer Speed and Mrs. R. B. Frizzell also welcomed a few friends for tea at the Frizzell home on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Hildebrandt the central figure.

Miss Peggy Joyce, lovely little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Frantom is now convalescing from a recent serious illness at St. Francis sanitarium and will be glad to have her friends call.

ALPACAS STRIKE SPRING NOTE

Crisp silk alpaca in bold red and white checks makes the first spring evening frock finished with a wide collar of white pique. The other, made of the same fabric in small blue and white checks, is designed with a little pique-trimmed bolero and a belt of blue patent leather. Checked silk alpacas are one of the outstanding notes in smooth, hard-surfaced fabrics. Taffeta and linen also are seen frequently in the smart spring togs.

News Of Miss Dawkins

LITTLE THEATER NOTES

You have been asking yourself by now, we are sure, whether this play that the Little Theater of Monroe is presenting the night of February 21, at Northeast Center L. S. U. is composed mostly of male characters. Well —yes it is—but the little lady who takes the lead, Mary Bonita Allen, by name, makes up for a lack of the sweeter sex. As Toby Van Buren, a most modern and courageous miss, Bonita stands up to the members of Jack Dillon's gang, just as saucy as you please.

Dozens of Mary Bonita's admirers have expressed delight at the fact that she is taking part in "Whistling In The Dark," and when you see her and hear her tell the big boss, (Elmer Richards), where to go, figuratively speaking, you'll love her as much as all the gangsters do. She plays a big part in helping her fiance, Wally Porter, (Frank Breece), do his difficult job, and we are sure that you will agree with us when we say that Bonita makes a perfect "Toby."

Society Mee[ts] House Gue[sts] In Webb Ho[me]

Mrs. Nellie Webb Budd and [Miss] Caro Webb, introduced their int[er]esting house guests, Mrs. Geor[ge] Luckett, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Davi[s,] Mrs. Edith Carey Wheadon and Mrs. Staples of Alexandria, during the cocktail hour Saturday night at their home on Roselawn.

The drawing room, to friends who called during the evening, dining room and reception hall, ensuite were adorned with spring flowers of vivid coloring.

Mrs. Bubb moved among her guests in a smart white satin evening model and Miss Webb wore a charming pink Alencon lace evening model.

Refreshing aperitifs were served at a beautifully-appointed, candle-lit table in the dining room where two lovely sub-debs, Miss Peggy Bubb and Miss Irene Stroud assisted in the courtesies. Mrs. Benton Holt and Mrs. Florence Bubb also presided in the dining room.

Subject Of Art Is Discussed By Mrs. Christman

Mrs. D. H. Christman, state chairman of art, Louisiana Federated Women's clubs, has the following interesting remarks to make in behalf of art in this state:

The arts, paintings, music, poetry, literature and sculpture are the most important and essential factors in our lives today. They take us by the hand and lead us everywhere.

Leo Tolstoi, the great Russian writer and social reformer, tells us life and art so closely connected. After 15 years of thought and study of aesthetics he wrote "What is art?" and the answer, "It is life."

They are the principles on which we build and furnish our homes, landscape and beautify the highways, build our public buildings, churches, museums, and indeed all architecture since the beginning of time, the arts have influenced our styles, both of dress and screen; without their art, directors would be without plan or culture.

Sir Thomas Brown says nature is the art of God. Art is not religion, nor either is religion art, yet art will lead you on to higher and loftier planes into the outer courtyards of heaven.

At the present time the art activities throughout the state are most encouraging, which is an inspiration to art circles and club life to go forward to broader fields.

Our purpose and plans this year are to build on the firm foundation of my predecessor, beloved and brilliant past leader established and not to feel our duty done until every club in the state has established an art department.

May I suggest one form of study; decide what phase of art to follow. The history of art will lead you from Egyptian art through Italian, the Renaissance, down to the French art of the twentieth century, to art of our modern times and the impressions and realistic schools.

Whenever you have the opportunity, visit art museums, galleries and dealers in art. When in the southern part of the state, visit New Orleans Delgado Museum of art, Reed Art galleries on Royal street, and the Louisiana state capitol at Baton Rouge. In the house of representatives and senate chambers there are works of New Orleans sculpture—22 in all. You will also see sculptures done by one of our outstanding sculptors of the day, Lorado Taft; beautiful porcelain urns from France to our state, and many more beautiful subjects.

Encourage our artists of the state by purchasing their statues and assisting in holding local exhibits and sales, support and assist your chairman of the art department of the Louisiana State Fair by contributing your studies, framed and addressed, ready to be hung. Rules governing this will be announced later. Entries will be free. If they are for sale, make the department acquainted with the fact, for this is also a state market.

The art department of the Louisiana Federation of Women's clubs will sponsor an art contest for state artists at the annual convention this fall. Each woman's club in the state where there are local artists are asked to hold their exhibit at least two weeks in advance of the convention date. The four winners in local contests will be sent to the state convention where all entries are to be judged and prizes will be awarded. First, second, and honorable mention. All rules governing the contest will be published in the daily newspapers and sent you by the art chairmen later. May we endeavor to have many new studies from artists throughout the state?

The Penny Art fund is the plan whereby every club member is to contribute one penny a year for a prize fund. This fund is handled in each state by the art chairman. She purchases with the money pieces of American art to be presented at the annual state meeting to the club doing the most to raise the standard of beauty and spread the knowledge of art in their communities.

No club will be eligible unless it adopts the penny art fund. It is well to put it in the club's annual budget. It is simply this—if your club numbers 17, send 17 cents; if 100, send $1—one penny for each member per year.

Please send check to your state art chairman. All money stays in your own state. May I ask all clubs throughout the state to send their funds to me at an early date, as it is necessary for me to send an April report.

In order to give the small clubs an equal chance to secure coveted prizes, clubs will be placed in three divisions:

Division 1—All clubs of 400 members or over.

Division 2—All clubs of 200 members to 399.

Division 3—All clubs of 10 members to 199.

Our slogan is: "Federated American Pennies for American Art." "Without vision the people perish." Henry Van Dyke's beautiful poem:

"Four things we must learn to do,
If we make our records true;
To think without confusion, clearly;
To love our fellowman sincerely;
To act through honest motives purely;
To trust in God and heaven securely."

Charming Visitor In City

Mrs. George Hildebrandt of New Britton, Conn., is enjoying Louisiana winter weather to the fullest as the house guest of Mrs. Thomas Sholars. A motor trip down in the Bayou Teche country, famed in story and song and a few days in New Orleans, the nation's most interesting city, included the pleasures of the past ten days.

Returning home Mrs. Sholars gathered a few intimates together for tea and dispensed with characteristic grace her special brand of hospitality. Mrs. Hillyer Speed and Mrs. R. B. Frizzell also welcomed a few friends for tea at the Frizzell home on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Hildebrandt the central figure.

Miss Peggy Joyce, lovely little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Frantom is now convalescing from a recent serious illness at St. Francis sanitarium and will be glad to have her friends call.

ALPACAS STRIKE SPRING NOTE

Girl Reserves Meet

Members of the Junior Girl Reserve of Neville high school held their second meeting at the Y. W. C. A. during the supper hour. At this time officers were elected.

The following officers were elected as follows: President, Nora Abernathy; vice-president, Bernice Worthington; secretary and treasurer, Jean Hale; reporter, Mary Guy.

The supper table was festive with flowers—yellow daffodils in a crystal bowl. Following the delectable meal a candle-lit ceremony welcoming the new members was featured.

Those present were Counsellor, Mrs. Fagan Cox, and sponsor, Miss Robbie Lee Hanna.

Charter members—Jean Hale, Nora Va Abernathy, Martha Hopson, Evelyn Morgan, La Rue Pettit, Georgiana Williams, Carolyn Oliver and Sara Francis Hinkle.

New members—Josephine McCook, Mary Guy, Glendine Stewart, Roberta Stewart, Bernice Worthington, Patsy Slack and Martha Ann Moore.

The intermediate class of the Swartz Baptist church was entertained with a Valentine party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hill. Prizes were awarded to Miss Virginia Hare and Mr. Garland Shell for high scores. Later a supper course was served.

Those enjoying the evening were: Virginia Hare and Woodrow Williams; Erna Mae Maxwell and Garland Shell; Irene Tarver and Jack Wigley; Marie Hudson and "Hoot" Fowler; Omah Botson and Robert McGowen; and Mary Angie Balch.

News Of Miss Dawkins

LITTLE THEATER NOTES

You have been asking yourself by now, we are sure, whether this play that the Little Theater of Monroe is presenting the night of February 21, at Northeast Center L. S. U. is composed mostly of male characters. Well—yes it is—but the little lady who takes the lead, Mary Bonita Allen, by name, makes up for a lack of the sweeter sex. As Toby Van Buren, a most modern and courageous miss, Bonita stands up to the members of Jack Dillon's gang, just as saucy as you please.

Dozens of Mary Bonita's admirers have expressed delight at the fact that she is taking part in "Whistling In The Dark," and when you see her and hear her tell the big boss, (Elmer Richards), where to go, figuratively speaking, you'll love her as much as all the gangsters do. She plays a big part in helping her fiance, Wally Porter, (Frank Breece), do his difficult job, and we are sure that you will agree with us when we say that Bonita makes a perfect "Toby."

Society Mee[ts] House Gue[sts] In Webb Ho[me]

Mrs. Nellie Webb Budd and [Miss] Caro Webb, introduced their interesting house guests, Mrs. Geor[ge] Luckett, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Davi[s,] Mrs. Edith Carey Wheadon and Mrs. Staples of Alexandria, during the cocktail hour Saturday night at their home on Roselawn.

The drawing room, to friends who called during the evening, dining room and reception hall, ensuite were adorned with spring flowers of vivid coloring.

Mrs. Bubb moved among her guests in a smart white satin evening model and Miss Webb wore a charming pink Alencon lace evening model.

Refreshing aperitifs were served at a beautifully-appointed, candle-lit table in the dining room where two lovely sub-debs, Miss Peggy Bubb and Miss Irene Stroud assisted in the courtesies. Mrs. Benton Holt and Mrs. Florence Bubb also presided in the dining room.

[F]ounder's Day Program Is Enjoyed By P.-T. A. Members Of Barkdull Faulk School

The thirty-eighth anniversary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers was observed in Barkdull Faulk school auditorium Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Car Couch, Founder's day chairman, stirred the birthday cake as the mothers marched by and contributed the ingredients essential to a perfect Parent-Teacher association." The "ingredients" included parents, teachers, well discussed needs, well chosen committees, consistently applied work and cooperation. The cake was flavored with enthusiasm, the filling was knowledge and the icing kindliness, beauty and hospitality.

Two school girls, Dorothy Taylor and Carolyn Husted, wearing colonial costumes, presented a beautiful cake donated by J. W. Rohr, a P.-T. A. "dad." It was embossed in blue and gold, the P.-T. A. colors, with 38 candles burning.

The cake was placed on a table, flanked with four flaming tapers in silver candelabra. The first candle was dedicated by Miss Julia Wossman, principal of the school, to the memory of the founders of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, Mrs. Alice Birney and Mrs. Phoebe Hearst. The second was dedicated to childhood by Mrs. Max Thompson and the third to Miss Wossman, principal and founder of Barkdull Faulk P.-T. A., by Mrs. L. Howell. The fourth was dedicated to the future success of the P.-T. A. by the present president, Mrs. W. H. Armstrong.

The candles were blown out one by one as teachers and mothers expressed a sincere wish for the success and progress of the organization.

Mrs. Armstrong presided over the regular meeting. Mrs. C. W. Williams told of the splendid results of the school of instruction, attended by Mrs. L. A. Mailhes of Shreveport, state president, in this city.

The state secretary, Mrs. R. L. McHenry, president of the Twin City council, extended greetings and expressed satisfaction over the work of this group of men and women.

Mrs. Virginia Newman presided over the meeting of the study club and led an enthusiastic discussion on "The Activities of the Child."

At the conclusion, tea was served and a silver offering was taken for the benefit of the state and national organizations.

Program Of Interest

The Twentieth Century Book club was delightfully entertained by Mrs. J. M. Munholland, Wednesday afternoon. Golden jonquils and narcissi in profusion created a spring-like atmosphere. A most interesting program was inspired by the subject, "Careers." Among "Interesting People," Mrs. J. W. Smith mentioned William C. Boyd, PhD. and his wife, Lyle Boyd, being energetic research workers at the Memorial hospital in Boston. From crumbling muscle fibers of Egyptian mummies, 4,000 years old, these two young scientists are the first to tabulate blood groups in ancient races of men, one of the most important contributions to anthropology in recent times.

Cora Wilson Stewart is the founder of the Moonlight Schools and leads a war against illiteracy.

E. C. Segar, a paper hanger, house painter, window dresser, motion picture operator, heard that cartoonists made big money, took a correspondence course, worked at a tempestuous pace for eighteen months, received his diploma, went to Chicago, got a job and discovered "Popeye," when he saw a sailor eating spinach. Now Segar's sailorman with the swinging stride, is a loud laugh in every moving picture playhouse.

Another interesting American is Mrs. Floyd Bostwick Odlum, who is the first woman to head a large retail store on Fifth avenue. Her innovations brought in the customers. A tray service for the hungry—a grand duchess to conduct a photographic studio.

Joseph Baermann Strauss is one of the greatest engineers in the world and is undertaking a job no other man has ever dared. He is spinning a web of steel across San Francisco's Golden Gate for the longest suspension bridge ever built.

Mrs. Louis Hullum gave review of book "Life Begins at Forty," by Walter B. Pitkin.

The thesis of the book is that Americans of forty or a little over are the luckiest generation in the history of the United States. The author maintains that the man or woman of forty, instead of being on the shelf, is just beginning to live. He says, "Every day brings forth some new thing that adds to the joy of life after forty. Work becomes easy and brief—play grows richer and longer—leisure lengthens. Life's afternoon is brighter, warmer, fuller of song; and long before the shadows stretch, every fruit grows ripe." Man may order and adorn his own life as he will—the machine age, the richest blessing of science has freed him!

Mrs. Grayson Guthrie, a former member, was welcomed by the club. Members present included: Mrs. T. O. Brown, Mrs. S. M. Collins, Mrs. E. C. Gibson, Mrs. Louis Hullum, Mrs. Ernest Holloway, Mrs. S. J. Meek, Mrs. M. M. Munholland, Mrs. W. C. Oliver, Mrs. J. W. Smith, Mrs. M. S. McGuire, Mrs. S. M. McReynolds, Mrs. Sidney Stroud, Mrs. J. E. Vaughn, Mrs. Henry Whitfield. Mrs. Munholland assisted by her daughters, Mrs. Thomas Munholland and Mrs. Dix Ellett served a delicious salad, hot rolls and parfait.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Landreaux are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a lovely daughter on the fourteenth of February.

Music Is The Theme Of Talk ByClubWoman

Completion of their study of music prompted members of the Miro Delphian chapter to arrange a coffee hour in the home of Mrs. Arthur Tidwell where a charming program was enjoyed during the afternoon. Mrs. Henry Whitfield's talk on the subject of the great composers was exceedingly interesting. She said:

"If Weber is the first out-and-out romanticist in the field of opera, Schumann may claim the distinction of having set romantic instrumental music upon the way it was to go. We have noted that it is not always possible to draw a straight line marking the boundaries of the classical and the romantic; for general emotion is likely to approach the definite, and an avowed romanticist may be, and frequently is, a master of form.

"When we examine Schumann's music, it is well to have in mind the tendency of the age as revealed in other arts. In literature the romantic movement showed faint beginnings at the end of the eighteenth century, it found glorious expression in the poetry of Burns, Shelley, Keats and Wordsworth in England, not to mention Hogo in France, and Heine and Schiller in Germany. In art, the classic revival inspired by the discovery of Pompeii late in the eighteenth century was followed by a romantic reaction, and Millet, Corot and all the Barbizon school brought a new spirit into painting. Naturally music felt the spirit of the time. Schumann, living from 1810 to 1856, received the full benefit of that movement.

"Yet his genius was peculiarly original. His work for the piano is so far above anything which preceded it that he is rightly named a pioneer of romantic composition. Romanticism, we noted, aims at the definite suggestions, and the tone-images of Schumann's compositions were something new in music.

"Beethoven's colossal intellect made him able to develop his musical creations—those original ideas that came to him—into perfect structures. Schumann's works lack this perfect balance of imagination and technic. But in originality, and power to express humor, and the exact mood of the poetry he put to music, he is an authentic genius, though an uneven craftsman.

"When we compare the work of Chopin and Schumann it is evident immediately that the German romanticist has the greater originality, while the Polish musician's works are freer from technical faults. This is the more remarkable because Chopin never concerned himself with adhering to the forms the classical masters had devised. He was like a poet—Shelley, for example—whose ideas create their own forms. As a child Chopin used to amuse himself by 'playing out his thoughts on the piano.' No wonder he excelled as a tone poet, the singer of his own joys and sorrows, and those of his country.

"Berlioz is best characterized by the statement that he was more interested in the sound of music than in the music itself. A famous American orator was said to be able to move his audience to tears simply by pronouncingthe word "Mesopotamia." So Berlioz set himself to discover what could be done with music, rather than to finding out what music he could create. He was the first to take a poetic story, such as The Damnation of Faust, and translate it into musical sound. His influence upon orchestral music has been remarkable. He left very little music which can be called great but he did blaze the path for Wagner.

"When we come to consider the work of Liszt, we discover that he was himself more important than his music. The works for which he is remembered are chiefly transcriptions of other compositions and not creations of his own imagination. Probably the Hungaria Rhapsodies are the best known and the best of these transcriptions.

"It was as a performer, a teacher, a critic and a patron of music that Liszt made his greatest contribution to the progress of musical art. He was unquestionably the greatest virtuoso of the piano who has yet appeared on our planet. Added to this power over the instrument was his truly marvelous personal charm; a charm which was rooted in a noble and generous character. Wagner owed to Liszt his chance of having his operas performed, and he was a kind of foster-parent to that younger musician.

"It is said that Liszt was inspired to become the supreme performer on the piano from hearing Paganini play. He determined to make his chosen instrument as responsive to his touch as Paganini had made the violin. From Berlioz, Liszt acquired new conceptions of tone-art, and from Chopin his style gained finish and expressiveness. Our study of the history of music should help us to listen to it with greater understanding, and so with greater pleasure. Knowing that vocal music is the first art-music, and what the essentials of vocal music are, we are prepared to listen to the singer's tone, to perceive the melodic quality of the song, and to note her rendition of its musical and emotional content. We shall realize that singers should be heard and not seen, and thus lend our encouragement to the art of music instead of to beauty shops and costumers."

Trout

CUT YOUR COLLAR IN A CLEVER LINE PATTERN 2185

By Anne Adams

There is nothing like having one good dress that is fashioned right and fits right. This one is such. Its shoulder line and panel sections mark it new and make it flattering—and you can change the whole appearance of the frock by the collar, note the three sketched. Besides, it can be worn collarless. By choosing your most becoming color—black, blue or brown—for the dress, and using a white and several other colors or materials for the collars, the patterns of which are included, you have a practical spring wardrobe. The dress is very lovely in print and for warm weather the sleeves may be omitted.

Pattern 2185 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3 1-2 yards 39 inch fabric and 3-8 yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred), for each Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

CHAPTER XXXVII

The day dawned gray and chill. At 10 the mist had turned to a steady, cold rain. Barrett had eaten a scant breakfast and moved restlessly, waiting for Elinor who, for the first time he could remember, had had her breakfast in bed. He stood before the fire, hands thrust deeply into his pockets, rattling coins. He moved to a window and then turned away, picked up a book, laid it down and sat down to try to read a paper. A moment later he had cast that aside to wander once more to the window. He did all these things half a dozen times and found he could settle to nothing.

The maid, dusting, watched him circumspectly. "He's a very restless sort of gentleman," she said later to the cook.

At 11 Barrett gave in and sent a note to Elinor. His handwriting was nervously unsteady. The note read:

"Child—Will you give me a chance to talk to you? I don't deserve your consideration in the least but I don't know how to go through another hour without trying to make you understand a little of my shame.

Barrett."

Elinor came down almost immediately. She looked pale and there were shadows beneath the blue eyes. Shivering a little, she dropped to an ottoman near the fire and turned her wan face to the dancing flames.

"You were very good to come down," he said with the stiffness which speaks of strain.

"Oh, no—" she answered listlessly.

"Elinor!"

"Will you try to understand me?"

"I have always tried, Barrett. Sometimes it hasn't been easy. You see I feel the same way all the time. You—well, you know how it's been with us from the first!" The words ended a trifle brokenly.

He dropped to a chair that was close to her and leaned toward her, arms on knees. "I have always loved you," he said slowly and gravely.

"Then it hasn't made you kind!" she answered hotly. "I'm sorry but for the first time since I've known you, I doubt you! If you had loved me things wouldn't have happened the way they did last night. The way you kissed me—it was as though it was something you were ashamed of!"

Her chin raised. She turned eyes made hostile by pride to meet his gaze.

"I don't want love like that. I don't want anyone to love me and be ashamed of it!" she stated after a stretch of silence that became more tense with each moment.

"I have hurt you badly," he said half-aloud.

"Yes; from the first. You've given me no chance to be of any worth to anyone. I am one of those weak people who can't help being dependent. When I know I've displeased you I feel perfectly miserable. I'm afraid to speak and quite certain that I'll say or do the wrong thing. I'm never sure of myself. I've always been aware of my shortcomings. They've been pointed out to me by many people. It isn't kind or fair to take advantage of a person who stumbles habitually—"

"Elinor—," he began but she cut him short.

"Before our marriage and since," she said, "there have been times when you seemed to care a little for me. And then you always drew away again—as though you were ashamed. I suppose you regretted your lack of taste!" She was breathing quickly and her face had flushed.

He took her hand, held it between his tightly. He saw the tears in her eyes. Perhaps, he reasoned, if his attitude had been different she would not have turned to Bob Telfare.

"I love you," he said. "God knows, Elinor, that I speak the truth!"

"You think me to be capable of flirting and trying to hide it! You said last night that I needn't pretend to be surprised!"

She tried to look the scorn for this she felt. She failed. Her lips trembled and she turned from him, crying.

"But, child—" he said brokenly.

"Oh, don't!" she begged. "I'll begin to think it will last again. I'll start being happy and then tomorrow or the next day you'll scarcely speak to me!"

"You care—?" he murmured, amazed.

"Yes, if it's any satisfaction to you, I do. And I, too, am ashamed of caring!"

She struggled up. Barrett got to his feet and put a hand on her arm.

"Please let me go, Barrett!" she begged.

"I will in a moment, dear. Elinor, if I can make you happy for the rest of the time we must spend together and if by the end of that time you have gained some trust in me, there is nothing in the world that would make me so happy as to help you to a life worth while—open, without evasion—"

"I haven't forgotten," she said, wiping her eyes, "what you did for us all when you married me but—it's been so hard! You don't know how hard! When I thought you cared a little and then you—you—"

He drew her into his arms and held her close. She had not spoken the truth, he was sure. She had gone somewhere with Bob Telfare that afternoon when he wanted to tell her he loved her. But she had had little from life to help her in building a strong, decent code. Perhaps love — his love — offered honestly would help to do this. Perhaps she could learn the satisfaction of living honestly and straightforwardly.

She was shaking from her sobs. He felt his own eyes sting. Stooping, he pressed his cheek against her hair.

She drew away. "Tomorrow," she said, "you'll scarcely speak to me! I know you'll change!"

"No!" he contradicted sharply.

She smiled wanly and turned from him to hurry to the hall and up the stairs. Alone he considered the situation. She was pitiably dependent and alone. He had not helped her. Instead he had hindered her. A little blindness to her faults, a greater appreciation of the good that was hers—perhaps with a few years of this her leaning to "affairs" would be lessened and they could have a decent sort of life together.

After all, he thought, all life seems to be a compromise. "Never the whole eternal quietude." He loved her. It was love he felt—love that had made his eyes sting when she was crying in his arms. But he did not, could not, respect or trust her.

Bentwell Stafford did not leave his bed that day. "One of the bad days," he panted to Barrett who wandered to his room to visit him. The nurse, Barrett noticed, kept attentive fingers on his wrist. Elinor remained in her own room. The rain fell slowly, dismally. A wire came from Lyda to announce that she was coming.

Twilight settled early and the night that followed was velvet black. Miss Hemmingway telephoned for the physician who was attending Bentwell Stafford. At dinner, the first meal of the day Elinor had eaten with Barrett, the girl was abstracted, worried by her father's condition and wilted by the emotional tension that she had known during the last 24 hours.

Barrett, who could not forget her accusations, was conscience-stricken. He could not take his eyes from her. She seemed so weary and so badly shaken by her father's loss of consciousness.

Barrett could sense the strain that made it impossible for her to do more than toy with her food. He decided that he would see to it that the doctor had a look at the daughter as well as the father. His heart caught at the thought of her being ill.

As the clock struck midnight the maid hurried down the stair. At the door of the living room she paused, swallowed hard and then spoke.

"Mr. Colvin," she said, "please sir, Miss Hemmingway wants you to come up. Mr. Stafford has gone—"

[F]ounder's Day Program Is Enjoyed By P.-T. A. Members Of Barkdull Faulk School

The thirty-eighth anniversary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers was observed in Barkdull Faulk school auditorium Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Car Couch, Founder's day chairman, stirred the birthday cake as the mothers marched by and contributed the ingredients essential to a perfect Parent-Teacher association." The "ingredients" included parents, teachers, well discussed needs, well chosen committees, consistently applied work and cooperation. The cake was flavored with enthusiasm, the filling was knowledge and the icing kindliness, beauty and hospitality.

Two school girls, Dorothy Taylor and Carolyn Husted, wearing colonial costumes, presented a beautiful cake donated by J. W. Rohr, a P.-T. A. "dad." It was embossed in blue and gold, the P.-T. A. colors, with 38 candles burning.

The cake was placed on a table, flanked with four flaming tapers in silver candelabra. The first candle was dedicated by Miss Julia Wossman, principal of the school, to the memory of the founders of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, Mrs. Alice Birney and Mrs. Phoebe Hearst. The second was dedicated to childhood by Mrs. Max Thompson and the third to Miss Wossman, principal and founder of Barkdull Faulk P.-T. A., by Mrs. L. Howell. The fourth was dedicated to the future success of the P.-T. A. by the present president, Mrs. W. H. Armstrong.

The candles were blown out one by one as teachers and mothers expressed a sincere wish for the success and progress of the organization.

Mrs. Armstrong presided over the regular meeting. Mrs. C. W. Williams told of the splendid results of the school of instruction, attended by Mrs. L. A. Mailhes of Shreveport, state president, in this city.

The state secretary, Mrs. R. L. McHenry, president of the Twin City council, extended greetings and expressed satisfaction over the work of this group of men and women.

Mrs. Virginia Newman presided over the meeting of the study club and led an enthusiastic discussion on "The Activities of the Child."

At the conclusion, tea was served and a silver offering was taken for the benefit of the state and national organizations.

Program Of Interest

The Twentieth Century Book club was delightfully entertained by Mrs. J. M. Munholland, Wednesday afternoon. Golden jonquils and narcissi in profusion created a spring-like atmosphere. A most interesting program was inspired by the subject, "Careers." Among "Interesting People," Mrs. J. W. Smith mentioned William C. Boyd, PhD, and his wife, Lyle Boyd, being energetic research workers at the Memorial hospital in Boston. From crumbling muscle fibers of Egyptian mummies, 4,000 years old, these two young scientists are the first to tabulate blood groups in ancient races of men, one of the most important contributions to anthropology in recent times.

Cora Wilson Stewart is the founder of the Moonlight Schools and leads a war against illiteracy.

E. C. Segar, a paper hanger, house painter, window dresser, motion picture operator, heard that cartoonists made big money, took a correspondence course, worked at a tempestuous pace for eighteen months, received his diploma, went to Chicago, got a job and discovered "Popeye," when he saw a sailor eating spinach. Now Segar's sailorman with the swinging stride, is a loud laugh in every moving picture playhouse.

Another interesting American is Mrs. Floyd Bostwick Odlum, who is the first woman to head a large retail store on Fifth avenue. Her innovations brought in the customers. A tray service for the hungry—a grand duchess to conduct a photographic studio.

Joseph Baermann Strauss is one of the greatest engineers in the world and is undertaking a job no other man has ever dared. He is spinning a web of steel across San Francisco's Golden Gate for the longest suspension bridge ever built.

Mrs. Louis Hullum gave review of book "Life Begins at Forty," by Walter B. Pitkin.

The thesis of the book is that Americans of forty or a little over are the luckiest generation in the history of the United States. The author maintains that the man or woman of forty, instead of being on the shelf, is just beginning to live. He says, "Every day brings forth some new thing that adds to the joy of life after forty. Work becomes easy and brief—play grows richer and longer—leisure lengthens. Life's afternoon is brighter, warmer, fuller of song; and long before the shadows stretch, every fruit grows ripe." Man may order and adorn his own life as he will—the machine age, the richest blessing of science has freed him!

Mrs. Grayson Guthrie, a former member, was welcomed by the club. Members present included: Mrs. T. O. Brown, Mrs. S. M. Collins, Mrs. E. C. Gibson, Mrs. Louis Hullum, Mrs. Ernest Holloway, Mrs. S. J. Meek, Mrs. M. M. Munholland, Mrs. W. C. Oliver, Mrs. J. W. Smith, Mrs. M. S. McGuire, Mrs. S. M. McReynolds, Mrs. Sidney Stroud, Mrs. J. E. Vaughn, Mrs. Henry Whitfield. Mrs. Munholland assisted by her daughters, Mrs. Thomas Munholland and Mrs. Dix Ellett served a delicious salad, hot rolls and parfait.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Landreaux are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a lovely daughter on the fourteenth of February.

Music Is The Theme Of Talk ByClub Woman

Completion of their study of music prompted members of the Miro Delphian chapter to arrange a coffee hour in the home of Mrs. Arthur Tidwell where a charming program was enjoyed during the afternoon. Mrs. Henry Whitfield's talk on the subject of the great composers was exceedingly interesting. She said:

"If Weber is the first out-and-out romanticist in the field of opera, Schumann may claim the distinction of having set romantic instrumental music upon the way it was to go. We have noted that it is not always possible to draw a straight line marking the boundaries of the classical and the romantic; for general emotion is likely to approach the definite, and an avowed romanticist may be, and frequently is, a master of form.

"When we examine Schumann's music, it is well to have in mind the tendency of the age as revealed in other arts. In literature the romantic movement showed faint beginnings at the end of the eighteenth century, it found glorious expression in the poetry of Burns, Shelley, Keats and Wordsworth in England, not to mention Hogo in France, and Heine and Schiller in Germany. In art, the classic revival inspired by the discovery of Pompeii late in the eighteenth century was followed by a romantic reaction, and Millet, Corot and all the Barbizon school brought a new spirit into painting. Naturally music felt the spirit of the time. Schumann, living from 1810 to 1856, received the full benefit of that movement.

"Yet his genius was peculiarly original. His work for the piano is so far above anything which preceded it that he is rightly named a pioneer of romantic composition. Romanticism, we noted, aims at the definite suggestions, and the tone-images of Schumann's compositions were something new in music.

"Beethoven's colossal intellect made him able to develop his musical creations—those original ideas that came to him—into perfect structures. Schumann's works lack this perfect balance of imagination and technic. But in originality, and power to express humor, and the exact mood of the poetry he put to music, he is an authentic genius, though an uneven craftsman.

"When we compare the work of Chopin and Schumann it is evident immediately that the German romanticist has the greater originality, while the Polish musician's works are freer from technical faults. This is the more remarkable because Chopin never concerned himself with adhering to the forms the classical masters had devised. He was like a poet—Shelley, for example—whose ideas create their own forms. As a child Chopin used to amuse himself by "playing out his thoughts on the piano." No wonder he excelled as a tone poet, the singer of his own joys and sorrows, and those of his country.

"Berlioz is best characterized by the statement that he was more interested in the sound of music than in the music itself. A famous American orator was said to be able to move his audience to tears simply by pronouncingthe word "Mesopotamia." So Berlioz set himself to discover what could be done with music, rather than to finding out what music he could create. He was the first to take a poetic story, such as The Damnation of Faust, and translate it into musical sound. His influence upon orchestral music has been remarkable. He left very little music which can be called great but he did blaze the path for Wagner.

"When we come to consider the work of Liszt, we discover that he was himself more important than his music. The works for which he is remembered are chiefly transcriptions of other compositions and not creations of his own imagination. Probably the Hungaria Rhapsodies are the best known and the best of these transcriptions.

"It was as a performer, a teacher, a critic and a patron of music that Liszt made his greatest contribution to the progress of musical art. He was unquestionably the greatest virtuoso of the piano who has yet appeared on our planet. Added to this power over the instrument was his truly marvelous personal charm; a charm which was rooted in a noble and generous character. Wagner owed to Liszt his chance of having his operas performed, and he was a kind of foster-parent to that younger musician.

"It is said that Liszt was inspired to become the supreme performer on the piano from hearing Paganini play. He determined to make his chosen instrument as responsive to his touch as Paganini had made the violin. From Berlioz, Liszt acquired new conceptions of tone-art, and from Chopin his style gained finish and expressiveness. Our study of the history of music should help us to listen to it with greater understanding, and so with greater pleasure. Knowing that vocal music is the first art-music, and what the essentials of vocal music are, we are prepared to listen to the singer's tone, to perceive the melodic quality of the song, and to note her rendition of its musical and emotional content. We shall realize that singers should be heard and not seen, and thus lend our encouragement to the art of music instead of to beauty shops and costumers."

CHAPTER XXXVII

The day dawned gray and chill. At 10 the mist had turned to a steady, cold rain. Barrett had eaten a scant breakfast and moved restlessly, waiting for Elinor who, for the first time he could remember, had had her breakfast in bed. He stood before the fire, hands thrust deeply into his pockets, rattling coins. He moved to a window and then turned away, picked up a book, laid it down and sat down to try to read a paper. A moment later he had cast that aside to wander once more to the window. He did all these things half a dozen times and found he could settle to nothing.

The maid, dusting, watched him circumspectly. "He's a very restless sort of gentleman," she said later to the cook.

At 11 Barrett gave in and sent a note to Elinor. His handwriting was nervously unsteady. The note read:

"Child—Will you give me a chance to talk to you? I don't deserve your consideration in the least but I don't know how to go through another hour without trying to make you understand a little of my shame.

Barrett."

Elinor came down almost immediately. She looked pale and there were shadows beneath the blue eyes. Shivering a little, she dropped to an ottoman near the fire and turned her wan face to the dancing flames.

"You were very good to come down," he said with the stiffness which speaks of strain.

"Oh, no—" she answered listlessly.

"Elinor!"

"Will you try to understand me?"

"I have always tried, Barrett. Sometimes it hasn't been easy. You see I feel the same way all the time. You—well, you know how it's been with us from the first!" The words ended a trifle brokenly.

He dropped to a chair that was close to her and leaned toward her, arms on knees. "I have always loved you," he said slowly and gravely.

"Then it hasn't made you kind!" she answered hotly. "I'm sorry but for the first time since I've known you, I doubt you! If you had loved me things wouldn't have happened the way they did last night. The way you kissed me—it was as though it was something you were ashamed of!"

Her chin raised. She turned eyes made hostile by pride to meet his gaze.

"I don't want love like that. I don't want anyone to love me and be ashamed of it!" she stated after a stretch of silence that became more tense with each moment.

"I have hurt you badly," he said half-aloud.

"Yes; from the first. You've given me no chance to be of any worth to anyone. I am one of those weak people who can't help being dependent. When I know I've displeased you I feel perfectly miserable. I'm afraid to speak and quite certain that I'll say or do the wrong thing. I'm never sure of myself. I've always been aware of my shortcomings. They've been pointed out to me by many people. It isn't kind or fair to take advantage of a person who stumbles habitually—"

"Elinor—," he began but she cut him short.

"Before our marriage and since," she said, "there have been times when you seemed to care a little for me. And then you always drew away again—as though you were ashamed. I suppose you regretted your lack of taste!" She was breathing quickly and her face had flushed.

He took her hand, held it between his tightly. He saw the tears in her eyes. Perhaps, he reasoned, if his attitude had been different she would not have turned to Bob Telfare.

"I love you," he said. "God knows, Elinor, that I speak the truth!"

"You think me to be capable of flirting and trying to hide it! You said last night that I needn't pretend to be surprised!"

She tried to look the scorn for this she felt. She failed. Her lips trembled and she turned from him, crying.

"But, child—" he said brokenly.

"Oh, don't!" she begged. "I'll begin to think it will last again. I'll start being happy and then tomorrow or the next day you'll scarcely speak to me!"

"You care—?" he murmured, amazed.

"Yes, if it's any satisfaction to you, I do. And I, too, am ashamed of caring!"

She struggled up. Barrett got to his feet and put a hand on her arm.

"Please let me go, Barrett!" she begged.

"I will in a moment, dear. Elinor, if I can make you happy for the rest of the time we must spend together and if by the end of that time you have gained some trust in me, there is nothing in the world that would make me so happy as to help you to a life worth while—open, without evasion—"

"I haven't forgotten," she said, wiping her eyes, "what you did for us all when you married me but—it's been so hard! You don't know how hard! When I thought you cared a little and then you—you—"

He drew her into his arms and held her close. She had not spoken the truth, he was sure. She had gone somewhere with Bob Telfare that afternoon when he wanted to tell her he loved her. But she had had little from life to help her in building a strong, decent code. Perhaps love — his love — offered honestly would help to do this. Perhaps she could learn the satisfaction of living honestly and straightforwardly.

She was shaking from her sobs. He felt his own eyes sting. Stooping, he pressed his cheek against her hair.

She drew away. "Tomorrow," she said, "you'll scarcely speak to me! I know you'll change!"

"No!" he contradicted sharply.

She smiled wanly and turned from him to hurry to the hall and up the stairs. Alone he considered the situation. She was pitiably dependent and alone. He had not helped her. Instead he had hindered her. A little blindness to her faults, a greater appreciation of the good that was hers—perhaps with a few years of this her leaning to "affairs" would be lessened and they could have a decent sort of life together.

After all, he thought, all life seems to be a compromise. "Never the whole eternal quietude." He loved her. It was love he felt—love that had made his eyes sting when she was crying in his arms. But he did not, could not, respect or trust her.

Bentwell Stafford did not leave his bed that day. "One of the bad days," he panted to Barrett who wandered to his room to visit him. The nurse, Barrett noticed, kept attentive fingers on his wrist. Elinor remained in her own room. The rain fell slowly, dismally. A wire came from Lida to announce that she was coming.

Twilight settled early and the night that followed was velvet black. Miss Hemmingway telephoned for the physician who was attending Bentwell Stafford. At dinner, the first meal of the day Elinor had eaten with Barrett, the girl was abstracted, worried by her father's condition and wilted by the emotional tension that she had known during the last 24 hours.

Barrett, who could not forget her accusations, was conscience-stricken. He could not take his eyes from her. She seemed so weary and so badly shaken by her father's loss of consciousness.

Barrett could sense the strain that made it impossible for her to do more than toy with her food. He decided that he would see to it that the doctor had a look at the daughter as well as the father. His heart caught at the thought of her being ill.

As the clock struck midnight the maid hurried down the stair. At the door of the living room she paused, swallowed hard and then spoke.

"Mr. Colvin," she said, "please sir, Miss Hemmingway wants you to come up. Mr. Stafford has gone—"

TORRANCE FAILS TO BREAK RECORD IN INDOOR MEET

JACK APOLOGIZES FOR INABILITY TO BETTER OLD MARK

Insecure Footing His Downfall; Cunningham Wins Baxter Mile

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Burly Jack Torrance, who has beaten 57 feet outdoors in hurling the 16-pound shot, disappointed a capacity crowd of 16,000 track fans in Madison Square Garden tonight when he failed by nearly a foot to touch the world indoor record of 52 feet 8 3-8 inches, held by Leo Sexton, in the first featured event of the New York Athletic club meet.

The giant Louisiana State athlete, competing indoors for the first time in his career, found the footing uncertain, the shot too rough to handle comfortably and did not better than 51 feet 9 1-2 inches in six attempts. His second best toss was 50 feet, 5-8 inches.

Torrance had no difficulty winning his specialty, beating his nearest rival, J. Geniawicz of Dartmouth, by more than three feet, but the southerner apologized to officials for his inability to surpass the record, as advertised. His main difficulty, he explained, was the unfamiliar board footing. He fouled on one of his best throws, well over 51 feet, and this did not restore his confidence.

Glenn Cunningham, the "iron horse," again demonstrated his mastery of American milers with a smashing victory over Gene Venzke and Bill Bonthron, his two eastern rivals, in the Baxter mile, feature act of the meet.

Cunningham, pulling away from his pursuers with a spectacular closing sprint, broke the tape 25 yards in front of Venzke in the brilliant time of 4 minutes, 9.8 seconds, a new record for the event but short of the former University of Kansas star's own indoor record of 4:08.4. Bonthron, third for the second time in two weeks, trailed Venzke by five yards.

Harry Williamson of North Carolina faded after sticking with the leaders for the first half-mile and finished fourth, ten yards behind Bonthron. The fifth starter, Erik Ny of Sweden, dropped out after setting a sizzling pace for the first quarter, which the foreign star covered in 57 seconds flat.

The issue was never in doubt after Cunningham moved out in front on the back stretch of the sixth lap. His rivals dropped steadily behind. Bonthron began to tire with four laps to go, and the crowd got its only thrill when the former Princeton captain was passed by Venzke on the tenth lap of the 11-lap journey.

The times by quarters revealed unusually erratic pacing in order they were 57 seconds, 64.4, 66.2 and 62.2.

Cunningham in capturing his second Baxter mile within three years, gained sweet revenge for the eyelash decision he lost last year in this event to Bonthron. It was Glenn's fourth victory in seven races with Bill. His time eclipsed the former Baxter mile record of 4:10, set by Venzke in 1932.

Indiana's Chuck Hornbostel, unbeaten so far during the indoor campaign, added the "Matt Halpin" half-mile trophy to his collection without difficulty. The Hoosier ace staved off the pace until the bell lap and then breezed in a winner by five yards over Bill Ray of Manhattan college in 1:54.1.

The University of Maryland's crack one mile relay quartet came from behind to whip Princeton and Yale in a

O'DOUL RELEASED TO MANAGE SEALS

Giants Allow Former Batting Champion To Realize Ambition

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Frank J. (Lefty) O'Doul, world traveler, raconteur and one of the great batsmen of modern baseball, today was given his unconditional release by the New York Giants so that he can become manager of the San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast league.

The celebrated "man in the green suit," who duplicated Babe Ruth's stunt of switching from southpaw pitching to championship slugging, this returns to the place of his birth to realize a managerial ambition.

O'Doul never compared with Ruth as a pitcher. In fact he was not a regular until he shifted to the outfield but thereafter he won two National league batting championships, in 1929 with the Phillies and 1932 with the Dodgers, besides winding up his aggregate of 11 major league years with one of the best life-time hitting marks in the books.

Of the players who finished on any National league roster last year, only Chuck Klein of the Cubs shaded O'Doul in the life-time batting list. Their figures are .3524 and .3523, respectively. O'Doul's high mark for a season was .398 in 1929.

O'Doul made his big league debut as a southpaw rookie with the New York Yankees in 1919, the year that Ruth came to the club from Boston, and after the Babe quickly became the home run king and soared to record home run heights, O'Doul rode the bench. He had two more unsuccessful trials, one with the Yankees and another with the Red Sox, before [illegible] the box and making his [illegible]

Carnera Starts Anew In Bout With Impellittiere

Other Heavies Steal March As Ex-Champ's Pilot Blunders Again

By Harry Grayson
(NEA Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Whatever else may be said about Primo Carnera, he forever will stand as a colossal monument to the cupidity and stupidity of fight managers.

They did a 100 per cent bad job on Carnera from the outset, and have maintained the standard since Maxie Baer treated the Venetian Leviathan like a big bowling pin last June.

The result is that Carnera today is back in the circus where he started. His affair with the equally large Ray Impellittiere at Madison Square Garden on Feb. 22 puts him there.

Instead of clamoring for a return match with Baer to which most any ex-champion is entitled, and attempting to corner Steve Hamas, the next man in line, in a rebuilding program, Louis Soresi hid Carnera in South America. There Carnera added nothing to his prestige by permitting an over-stuffed Victorio Campolo to stick around for 10 rounds. Carnera ironed out the same Campolo in two rounds three years before.

The Carnera-Impellittiere bout is attractive only because they are the two biggest men who ever met with padded mittens on their hands. It affords Carnera no opportunity to prove that he is something more than the mere hulk that many have suspected all along.

Meanwhile, the winner of the Hamas-Max Schmeling meeting in Hamburg on March 10 will be in a much better position to heckle Baer.

Carnera has only a six-figure note to show for five years of effort under Leon See, the little Frenchman to whom he was directed by Paul Journee, who discovered Big Boy.

The avaricious See twice sent Carnera against the late Young Stribling abroad for 10 rounds. The man knew how to hold up his hands. The foul endings of these two brushes were viewed obliquely.

See made unfortunate Broadway connections and Carnera became involved in several unsavory performances which left him discredited.

Carnera must have had something to have lived all this down, and was far from disgraced in his battle with Baer. Against Baer, he exhibited courage worthy of a finer setting than the prize ring.

Every possible break went against him. He trained virtually alone, with Bill Duffy, the only man in whom he had confidence, detained by the government because of income tax trouble.

Carnera appeared to be the lonesomest man in the world and frightened when he ascended the platform. Primo was on the floor badly hurt before he could get a grip on himself. He twisted an ankle in a knockdown some time before the finish. Yet he continued carrying the fight to the hard-hitting Baer until Referee Arthur Donovan intervened.

Just how much the beating by Baer took out of Carnera is a question. Certainly, it did Primo no good, but it will take someone more formidable than Impellittiere to prove just what the Ambling Alp has left.

Impellittiere is a young giant of Cold Springs, N. Y., whom Harry Lenny threatened to make champion without his going to the trouble of fighting.

Finally, Lenny matched Impellittiere with Tommy Loughran, who decisively outpointed him after being badly cut above an eye. Then Walter Neusel, the blond German chemist, chased Impellittiere several country miles.

Carnera starts all over again in the Impellittiere joust, but he may be getting a break at that. It's just as well for any of the current heavyweights to keep just as far away from Baer as possible.

Sherrill Favors Japan For 1940 Olympic Games

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Brigadier General Charles H. Sherrill, American member of the international Olympic committee, tonight indicated he favored award of the 1940 Olympic games to Japan. The site for the 1940 games will be decided at the international committee's meeting in Oslo, starting February 25.

VANDY LOSES TO TIGER FIVE AGAIN

Louisiana State Trims Commodores, 40-31, In Fast Exhibition

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The Louisiana State university's fast stepping basketball team continued on its unbeaten conference way tonight by again trouncing Vanderbilt for a sweep of local games with the Commodores, winning 40 to 31.

The scrap was a much better exhibition of cage play than last night's many foul affair, and was hard fought throughout.

With it under their belts, the Louisianians have only to beat Tulane two games next week to finish the season unscathed in the Southeastern conference. Tonight's game was their tenth straight loop triumph.

The first half was played on nip and tuck lines, but a 10-point offensive carried L. S. U. substantially ahead as the second half got under way and provided the final winning margin.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR BASKETBALL RALLY AT RUSTON

Annual Cage Tournament To Be Held At Tech Friday, Saturday

RUSTON, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Final plans for the staging of the annual North Louisiana high school basketball tournament at Louisiana Tech to be held on February 22 and 23 this year, are being made as letters from various high schools in this section of the state announce their intention of attending the tourney, according to an announcement by M. H. Folk, Jr., secretary of the rally association.

The cage meet is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock Friday morning with about 35 teams—boys and girls—expected to enter. Parish elimination contests were held last week to select the two representatives from each parish, stated Mr. Folk.

Last year 21 boys' teams and 14 girls' teams were entered in the rally. Oak Grove of Sabine parish was the champion in the boys' division with Kelly second best in 1934. Oak Grove was also the winner in 1933. Last year the Collinston girls' team was the winner with the Bastrop squad getting second place.

The boys' teams will start playing about 8 o'clock Friday morning in the boys' gym and the girls' will start about 9 o'clock in the women's gym. Elimination games will be 20 minutes long with two ten minute halves and a rest period of five minutes. Regulatioon length games will be played in the semi-finals and finals. Semi-finals in both divisions will be played Saturday morning and play in the finals will begin at 7 o'clock Saturday night. Both the boys' and girls' divisions will play the semi-finals and finals in the men's gym. It is hoped that play will progress to the semi-final stage Friday night, said Mrr. Folk.

Losers in the semi-finals will play for third place Saturday afternoon. Winners of the first three places will be eligible to enter the annual state rally held at Baton Rouge, stated Mr. Folk.

A committee will meet in Mr. Folk's office at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, February 18, to decide the order of play—that is, seeding the teams. This committee is composed of A. A. Smith, Athens; G. E. Jones, Saline; and M. H. Folk, Ruston.

The boys' teams will be quartered in the boys' dormitory and the girls' teams will be housed in the girls' dormitory.

M'CARTHY RAPS NIGHT BASEBALL

Not Necessary For Majors To Resort To That, Says Yanks Pilot

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Joe McCarthy, who said his Yanks will be no "worse" than last year, when they finished second in the American league, tonight joined Joe Cronin, Boston pilot, and the venerable Connie Mack as opponents of night baseball.

"Everyone knows baseball should be played in the daytime," the New York pilot said. "I don't believe it is necessary for the big leagues to resort to the night game."

Marse Joe stated without hesitation that he saw no reason to predict New York would finish lower than second, if it didn't take the top rung of the American league ladder.

"In fact," he said, "Earl Coombs feels just as good as ever after recovering from a skull fracture suffered last summer when he crashed into a wall at St. Louis. If he is able to resume his old post in the outfield and plays his former brand of ball, that solves one of my problems.

"Bill Dickey, our first-string catcher, has reported his injured right hand has healed," McCarthy continued. "If the stiffness works out in spring training, that will be another question answered."

McCarthy, preparing to depart for the training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., two weeks from tomorrow, said all he knew about Babe Ruth was what he had read in the papers.

NEVILLE TO MEET IMPROVED BOLTON MITTMEN FRIDAY

Tigers' Last Home Match To Be Fought At Roosevelt Stadium

Considerably heartened by their overwhelming victory over the Catholic high school Golden Bears of Baton Rouge here Friday night, their first victory in the last three weeks, the state champion Tiger boxing team of Neville high school is laying preparations for its last home dual meet of the season here next Friday night when they tangle with their old foes the Bears of Bolton high school of Alexandria. The dual meet will be staged at Roosevelt Stadium, instead of in the high school gym.

The champions, who already claim two victories over the Bolton mittmen this season, are favorites to keep the first championship boxing team in the state from recovering from the drubbing it has been taking this year.

The Bruins were the first to win the state boxing title in 1932 when the first state tournament was held and they still have several of the boys left who were on that powerful squad.

In the Tigers' opening match of the season they trounced the Bolton boxers 8 to 2 and in a return meet at Alexandria the locals were held to a close 6 to 5 victory. There was a marked difference in the showing made by the Bears in their opener, and in their next bout and the Bengals can be looking for a determined force to come against them Friday.

The match will be the last dual meet to be staged here by Neville high school this season. Following the Bolton encounter, the Tigers have only two other matches and both are to be fought at Baton Rouge on successive nights when they face in return matches the Bulldogs of Baton Rouge high and the Golden Bears of Catholic high. To date the Bengals have won five dual meets and lost two. They were defeated by the Bulldogs of Baton Rouge and Lutcher.

GILLIE WINNER OF ANITA DERBY

Greentree Stable Thoroughbred Finishes Fast To Win Stake

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Out of the dust in a wild stretch dash came Gillie today to win the first running of the Santa Anita derby and $19,650 first place money for Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree stable.

The time was 1 minute 44 3-5 seconds for the mile and a sixteenth. Whiskolo of the Milky Way farm was second, a length and a half behird, and Demonstration was third, another length and a half in the ruck.

Silvio Coucci rated the three-year-old bay son of Victorian perfectly as he brought him into the stretch wide. Gillie was running fourth at the time, head extended, and thundered past the rapidly tiring Bluebeard, Pantoufle and Whiskolo as the finish line leaped up to meet the classy field of 17 starters.

A fifteen to one shot at post time after his entry mate, Peradventure—considered the best of the two—had been scratched, Gillie was given a deafening demonstration from the 35,000 persons as he moved out of nowhere off the last turn to win going away.

The winner paid $32.20 to win; $13.40 and $8.40 on $2 pari-mutuel tickets.

Sound Advice, coupled with Polar Flight, had been the post time favorite at 9 to 10 odds, with the C. V. Whitney entry of Pantoufle and Pundit heavily played as second choice.

Whiskolo, bay colt out of Diavolo, paid $16.80 and $10.00, while Demonstration was worth $39.40 on $2 tickets.

DALLAS, Texas, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Bob Tarleton, business manager of the Dallas Steers, said tonight the Rayne, La., club of the Evangeline league, had been added to the Dallas "farm system."

Tech Devises Elaborate Intramural Sports Card

Basketball And Boxing Hold Students' Interest This Spring

RUSTON, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—According to a report given out here this week, students of Louisiana Tech are rallying to the organization of the intramural program being drafted by the athletic department under the direction of Eddie Wojecki, trainer.

The program, which will sponsor practically all sports, was organized for the benefit of those students that do not play on the regular college teams. A plan has been in the air at Tech for some time regarding compulsory recreation similar to schools having an R. O. T. C. unit, but the local athletic officials have devised a scheme by which they expect to create enough interest to have everyone taking some kind of exercise without force.

In order to put the program on a competative basis, various campus organizations have been asked to enter teams in the numerous sports. The winning team of any one of the tournaments, held as a part of the program, will receive a pennant banner. The organization having the highest average in all the various intramural sports will be given a trophy by the "T" club

The basketball league is already functioning with the sophomore class leading at present The biggest upset of the league was the defeat of the T. K. N. Flashes by Bill Ruple's Handsome Five. The Ruston Celtics, a team composed of former Mississippi boys, are about the strongest bid for the title, it is said. Due to a bad start, the Tech Engineers are slightly handicapped but the last victory brought a fine spirit, observers say. Only seven more league games remain to be played before the final playoff. The four leading teams will battle it out for the title.

In order to give his material another year's seasoning before entering intercollegiate competition, Coach Ray E. Davis has put his boxing team in as a part of the intramural program.

A Golden Glove tournament will begin here Wednesday, February 20, to decide the champions of the different divisions. All participants are asked to meet Coach Davis at the gym Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock for further details. Over 35 applicants have already been received with the dead line set for February 19.

Trainer Wojecki announced the following intramural basketball standings:

Team	Won	Lost	Pct.
T. K. N. Frat	2	1	.666
Handsome Five	2	1	.666
Ruston Celtics	1	1	.666

Chow Hall Boys	1	2	.333
Y. M. C. A.	1	2	.333
Racketeers	1	2	.333
Tech Engineers	1	2	.333
Tech Tornados	0	3	.000

Following is the coming week's cage schedule: Monday—Sophomore class vs. Handsome Five; T. K. N. vs. Tech Tornadoes; Tech Engineers vs. Ruston Celtics; Racketeers vs. A. L. T.; Y M. C. A. vs. Chow Hall. Tuesday—Sophomore class vs. Tech Tornadoes; Tech Engineers vs. T. K. N.; Racketeers vs. Y. M. C. A.; A. L. T. vs. Ruston Celtics; Chow Hall vs. Handsome Five. Cleveland Swimmer Sets Five Backstroke Records

CLEVELAND, Feb. 16.—(AP)—A junior at Case school of applied science, Paul Grossman, splashed five National A. A. U. backstroke swimming records out ofthe 60-foot Case pool today.

With five officials A. A. U. timers clocking him, Grossman made 880 yards in 12:00.2 compared with the old mark of 12:33.5.

He kept right on going, setting four more marks, 1,000 yards in 13:48.8 compared with the old mark of 14:30; 1,320 yards in 18:19.3, breaking the old mark of 21:35.8; 1,500 yards in 20:48.8, for which the old record was 22:44.2, and 1,500 meters in 22:40, compared with the old mark of 27.09.4.

Who Said Ping Pong Is A Sissie's Game?

LONDON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Bloodshed marked the final match of the world's table tennis championship tonight as Victor Barna of Hungary won the title for the fourth year in a row.

The loser, M. Szabados of Hungary, fell during the second set and cut his right hand. Despite the injury he made a close match of it. The scores were 17-21, 21-17, 19-21, 21-11, 21-19.

BIG SIX LEAGUE MEETS TUESDAY

Circuit May Enter Professional Baseball For 1935 Campaign

Tentative organization of the Big Six league for the coming season is expected to be made at the first meeting of the year, to be held in Monroe Tuesday night, it was announced yesterday.

Club officials have been considering entering professional baseball this season and information concerning the proposed move will be studied at Tuesday's meeting.

J. Walter Morris, of Dallas, an organizer of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, conferred with the league president last week relative to the proposal. Mr. Morris said that outside assistance, in the way of financial help from leagues of higher classification could be obtained for each Big Six team.

Four clubs comprised the circuit last season. They were Winnsboro, Tallulah, Oak Grove and Waterproof. Following the organization of the league Tuesday night, it is hoped to increase the loop to six teams. Natchez and Vicksburg have been mentioned as possible entries, and other towns in this section also will be contacted.

All four of the teams were assisted through last season by the operation of slot machines but with the machines banned, a new means of raising revenue will be sought. It is thought that the assistance obtained from organized baseball would solve the financial difficulties

Representatives from the four towns in the league last year will attend the meeting and others interested in obtaining information of the proposed plans for 1935 are urged to attend.

RACING LEGAL IN ARKANSAS AGAIN

Governor Futrell Signs Bill To Permit Pari-Mutuel Betting

LITTLE ROCK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—An outlaw for 23 years, horse race betting returned to Arkansas as a legal ward of the state at noon today when Gov. J. Marion Futrell signed the Hampton racing bill legitimatizing and taxing pari-mutuel pools.

By his action, the governor made this state the 14th to legalize wagering on thoroughbreds.

Cheers went up in Hot Springs, where plans had been perfected weeks ago for the opening of Oaklawn park's spring meeting on Washington's birthday, only to be dampened a week ago when the governor said he would permit no further illegal racing at that track.

Oaklawn operated last year without benefit of legalization.

Spurred by the governor's manifesto, the legislature this week took up the Hampton bill and passed it in five days with comfortable majorities in both houses, attaching an emergency clause to make it immediate law upon signature by the chief executive.

With his signature, Governor Futrell created a state racing commission of seven members, vested with authority to supervise tracks, races and betting.

OUACHITA GIRLS NOSE OUT STRONG IN CAGE THRILLER

Local Sextet Wins From Tinymites By One Point, 27 To 26

STRONG, Ark., Feb. 16.—(Special)—The Ouachita parish high school girls of Monroe, La., won a basketball thriller from the Strong high school Tinymites, 27 to 26, here tonight.

In nosing out the strong local club, the Monroe girls staved off a late rally that threatened to overcome a lead that Ouachita had held through the entire game. With four of the Monroe teams' stars fouled out, the Ouachita team was reinforced with substitutes when the game ended.

Ouachita jumped into an early lead and was ahead, 9 to 4, at the end of the first period. The visitors had stretched their margin to 19 to 9 at the end of the half. Strong rallied somewhat in the third period and when the two teams entered the home stretch, Ouachita was leading by eight points, 25 to 17. With three of the Ouachita guards going out in the fourth period, Strong's scorers began to click, while Ouachita was being held to two points during the quarter. However, the final gun sounded with Strong one point behind.

Newsom, Strong forward, led the scoring with six field goals and six free throws for 18 points. Rowland, Ouachita forward, made 13 points and Wall made 10 to top Ouachita's attack. Both teams played excellent basketball but the Ouachita regulars gave a great exhibition to pile up their margin while they were in there.

BLOCK SEXTET WINS GOLD MEDAL CROWN

SICILY ISLAND, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Block high of Jonesville won the first annual Gold Medal girls' basketball tournament here tonight, defeating Ogden, 29 to 26, in a hard fought game before a packed gymnasium.

The final game was hotly contested throughout. The score at the half was 12-12 but Block managed to forge ahead in the final period and win by a three-point margin.

Seventy-five prizes, many of them gold medals, were awarded at the conclusion of the tournament.

High scorers were R. Bennett, Ogden, 68; Russell, Block, 61, and Head, Eros, 58. The all-tournament team was selected as follows: Wilkinson, Sicily Island, R. Bennett, Ogden and Russell, Block, forwards; Vines, Newellton, A. Breithaupt, Block, and Smith, Ogden, guards.

Block advanced to the finals by defeating Newellton, 21 to 16, while Ogden reached the championship game by eliminating Eros, 44 to 33 in the semi-finals.

Ole Miss Cagers Trounce Southwestern Five, 52-22

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Feb. 16.—(AP)—In a rough and tumble game here tonight the University of Mississippi cage men triumphed over the Southwestern Lynx of Memphis by the one-sided count of 52 to 22.

Chester Curtis, fleet Ole Miss forward, led the attack of his team as they gained revenge of their defeat the night before. Rasberry was again the Lynx star.

FERRIDAY, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Miss Mary Maranta's Ferriday high school girls basketball team were easy victims of the Natchez high school sextet here Friday afternoon, the Natchezians winning by a score of 42 to 19. Liz Junk was high scorer for the winners, while Martha Do Prato led for the local lassies.

Veteran Garner Exits As McAtee Returns To Saddle

(By NEA Service)

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 16.—Mack Garner is here looking for a job.

Those who saw the little Iowan clean up on Cavalcade last season find this hard to believe

However, the news that Linus (Pony) McAtee, once one of the greatest jockeys in America, and one of the finest finishers the American turf ever saw, will return to ride for the Brookmeade Stable and be aboard Cavalcade in 1935 stake and handicap events, probably spells the end of a splendid rider as a star as well as a comeback attempt of another.

The years had begun to steal Garner's magic, as two decades of riding figured to do. Never a finisher of the ability of an Earl Sande, a Garrison, or a McAtee, the advancing years dimmed some of Garner's other riding talents. It is no disgrace to him to say that he no longer might have taken advantage of all the openings, those holes that appear for fleeting seconds in the pack, and which, to the first rate rider, mean a chance for victory.

Riding is much like driving a car in traffic. Oldsters who have developed a bump of caution slow down in the pinches. The better youngsters drive recklessly, but their coordination of eye and muscle, reactions at their best, carry them through safely. So it is with Keester, Westrope, and Gilbert, youngsters who now have far eclipsed Garner, the aging master of pace.

The figures speak for themselves:

Year	Mounts	First	Second	Third	Unplaced	Money Won
1915	775	151	118	90	416
1932	291	50	50	40	151	$ 67,382
1933	179	23	30	20	106	83,765
1934	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

In 1933, Garner had 179 mounts, about one-sixth of those he had enjoyed two decades before, and he won only 23 races. Last year, he had 226 mounts and 30 victories, and in both years had a riding percentage of .13.

Garner was the second highest jockey in point of money won in 1934, but that was only natural, for he was the first string rider of the Brookmeade stable, and as such drew the cream of Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's horses. The Brookmeade barn was the highest winning stable of the year, with such luminaries as Cavalcade, High Quest, Good Goods, Psychic Bid, Okapi, Special Agent, and others.

Despite Cavalcade's success as the three-year-old champion, many critics contend that only a Cavalcade would have done so well with the Garner of 1934 on his back. These contend that the British-bred colt should not have been nosed out by his stablemate, High Quest, in the Preakness, and should not have experienced so much contention in another event or two.

Followed In Brothers' Footsteps

Garner has been on the turf a long time, though by no means as long as the famous name he bears. He jumped into prominence when, as a younger brother of Guy and Willie, he led the list of jockies in 1915. That year this member of the riding Garners had a riding percentage of .19. He won the Grand Union Hotel stakes with Puss in Boots, the Latonia cup with Star Jasmine, and took the Travers when Trial by Jury was disqualified in favor of Lady Rotha.

That was 20 years ago, yet Garner continued to ride, often brilliantly.

In 1916, Mack won the Suburban with Friar Rock and the Camden with Water Witch.

He scored in three successive Latonia Championships with Rockminster, In Memoriam and Chilhowee, and captured the Latonia cup on two occasions. He won a Lawrence Realization with The Nut, a Dixie with the renowned mare, Chacolet, and an Empire City derby with the high class Questionnaire.

Oddly enough, Garner never won a Dwyer, a Futurity, Hopeful, Jockey Club Gold cup, or a Preakness. And until 1934, he had never prevailed in a Kentucky derby. He might have won the derby and Dwyer with the splendid Blue Larkspur had it not been for that animal's dislike of mud.

Uncle Mack Should Be Fine Trainer

Garner perhaps will leave no permanent record of greatness, though during his long career he rode two standouts, Blue Larkspur and Cavalcade, but the American turf always will remember him as one of its foremost gentlemen. Probably that is one reason Uncle Mack lasted so long.

Remarkable riding years left Garner no conceit. The high salaries, the sudden riches, did not go to his head, nor lead him to brawling.

As a rider Garner always was fair and seldom tried to take advantage of the other fellow. Thus, he was in a minimum of accidents, fines and disqualifications. His courage, and he had plenty of it, remained with him long after it had left most of his contemporaries.

Garner is the sort racegoers hope will go into training. If he does, he will be as much a credit to that profession as George Odom, Joe Notter, Clyde Van Dusen, and other jockies who have supplemented riding years with successful careers in the more advanced work.

TORRANCE FAILS TO BREAK RECORD IN INDOOR MEET

JACK APOLOGIZES FOR INABILITY TO BETTER OLD MARK

Insecure Footing His Downfall; Cunningham Wins Baxter Mile

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Burly Jack Torrance, who has beaten 57 feet outdoors in hurling the 15-pound shot, disappointed a capacity crowd of 16,000 track fans in Madison Square Garden tonight when he failed by nearly a foot to touch the world indoor record of 52 feet 8 3-8 inches, held by Leo Sexton, in the first featured event of the New York Athletic club meet.

The giant Louisiana State athlete, competing indoors for the first time in his career, found the footing uncertain, the shot too rough to handle comfortably and he could do no better than 51 feet 9 1-2 inches in six attempts. His second best toss was 50 feet, 5 5-8 inches.

Torrance had no difficulty winning his specialty, beating his nearest rival, J. Geniawicz of Dartmouth, by more than three feet, but the southerner apologized to officials for his inability to surpass the record, as advertised. His main difficulty, he explained, was the unfamiliar board footing. He fouled on one of his best throws, well over 51 feet, and this did not restore his confidence.

Glenn Cunningham, the "iron horse," again demonstrated his mastery of American milers with a smashing victory over Gene Venzke and Bill Bonthron, his two eastern rivals, in the Baxter mile, feature act of the meet.

Cunningham, pulling away from his pursuers with a spectacular closing sprint, broke the tape 25 yards in front of Venzke in the brilliant time of 4 minutes, 9.8 seconds, a new record for the event but short of the former University of Kansas star's own indoor record of 4:08.4. Bonthron, third for the second time in two weeks, trailed Venzke by five yards.

Harry Williamson of North Carolina faded after sticking with the leaders for the first half-mile and finished fourth, ten yards behind Bonthron. The fifth starter, Erik Ny of Sweden, dropped out after setting a sizzling pace for the first quarter, which the foreign star covered in 57 seconds flat.

The issue was never in doubt after Cunningham moved out in front on the back stretch of the sixth lap. His rivals dropped steadily behind. Bonthron began to tire with four laps to go, and the crowd got its only thrill when the former Princeton captain was passed by Venzke on the tenth lap of the 11-lap journey.

The times by quarters revealed unusually erratic pacing in order they were 57 seconds, 64.4, 66.2 and 62.2.

Cunningham in capturing his second Baxter mile within three years, gained sweet revenge for the last year's loss of the event to Bonthron. It was Glenn's fourth victory in seven races with Bill. His time eclipsed the former Baxter mile record of 4:10, set by Venzke in 1932.

Indiana's Chuck Hornbostel, unbeaten so far during the indoor campaign, added the "Matt Halpin" half-mile trophy to his collection without difficulty. The Hoosier ace staved off the pace until the bell lap and then breezed in a winner by five yards over Bill Ray of Manhattan college in 1:54.1.

The University of Maryland's crack one mile relay quartet came from behind to whip Princeton and Yale in a

Giants Allow Former Batting Champion To Realize Ambition

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Frank J. (Lefty) O'Doul, world traveler, raconteur and one of the great batsmen of modern baseball, today was given his unconditional release by the New York Giants so that he can become manager of the San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast league.

The celebrated "man in the green suit," who duplicated Babe Ruth's stunt of switching from southpaw pitching to championship slugging, thus returns to the place of his birth to realize a managerial ambition.

O'Doul never compared with Ruth as a pitcher. In fact he was not a regular until he shifted to the outfield but thereafter he won two National league batting championships, in 1929 with the Phillies and 1932 with the Dodgers, besides winding up his aggregate of 11 major league years with one of the best life-time hitting marks in the books.

Of the players who finished on any National league roster last year, only Chuck Klein of the Cubs shaded O'Doul in the life-time batting list. Their figures are .3524 and .3523, respectively. O'Doul's high mark for a season was .398 in 1929.

O'Doul made his big league debut as a southpaw rookie with the New York Yankees in 1919, the year that Ruth came to the club from Boston. Lefty and the Babe quickly became pals but while Ruth soared to record home run heights, O'Doul rode the bench. He had two more unsuccessful trials, one with the Yankees and another with the Red Sox, before forsaking the box and making his mark as an outfield slugger.

Carnera Starts Anew In Bout With Impellittiere

Other Heavies Steal March As Ex-Champ's Pilot Blunders Again

By Harry Grayson
(NEA Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Whatever else may be said about Primo Carnera, he forever will stand as a colossal monument to the cupidity and stupidity of fight managers.

They did a 100 per cent bad job on Carnera from the outset, and have maintained the standard since Maxie Baer treated the Venetian Leviathan like a big bowling pin last June.

The result is that Carnera today is back in the circus where he started. His affair with the equally large Ray Impellittiere at Madison Square Garden on Feb. 22 puts him there.

Instead of clamoring for a return match with Baer to which most any ex-champion is entitled, and attempting to corner Steve Hamas, the next man in line, in a rebuilding program, Louis Soresi hid Carnera in South America. There Carnera added nothing to his prestige by permitting an over-stuffed Victorio Campolo to stick around for 10 rounds. Carnera ironed out the same Campolo in two rounds three years before.

The Carnera-Impellittiere bout is attractive only because they are the two biggest men who ever met with padded mittens on their hands. It affords Carnera no opportunity to prove that he is something more than the mere hulk that many have suspected all along.

Meanwhile, the winner of the Hamas-Max Schmeling meeting in Hamburg on March 10 will be in a much better position to heckle Baer.

Carnera has only a six-figure note to show for five years of effort under Leon See, the little Frenchman to whom he was directed by Paul Journee, who discovered Big Boy.

The avaricious See twice sent Carnera against the late Young Stribling abroad before the Italian knew how to hold up his hands. The foul endings of these two brushes were viewed obliquely.

See made unfortunate Broadway connections and Carnera became involved in several unsavory performances which left him discredited.

Carnera must have had something to have lived all this down, and was far from disgraced in his battle with Baer. Against Baer, he exhibited courage worthy of a finer setting than the prize ring.

Every possible break went against him. He trained virtually alone, with Bill Duffy, the only man in whom he had confidence, detained by the government because of income tax trouble.

Carnera appeared to be the lonesomest man in the world and frightened when he ascended the platform. Primo was on the floor badly hurt before he could get a grip on himself. He twisted an ankle in a knockdown some time before the finish. Yet he continued carrying the fight to the hard-hitting Baer until Referee Arthur Donovan intervened.

Just how much the beating by Baer took out of Carnera is a question. Certainly, it did Primo no good, but it will take someone more formidable than Impellittiere to prove just what the Ambling Alp has left.

Impellittiere is a young giant of Cold Springs, N. Y., whom Harry Lenny threatened to make champion without his going to the trouble of fighting.

Finally, Lenny matched Impellittiere with Tommy Loughran, who decisively outpointed him after being badly cut above an eye. Then Walter Neusel, the blond German chemist, chased Impellittiere several country miles.

Carnera starts all over again in the Impellittiere joust, but he may be getting a break at that. It's just as well for any of the current heavyweights to keep just as far away from Baer as possible.

VANDY LOSES TO TIGER FIVE AGAIN

Louisiana State Trims Commodores, 40-31, In Fast Exhibition

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The Louisiana State university's fast stepping basketball team continued on its unbeaten conference way tonight by again trouncing Vanderbilt for a sweep of local games with the Commodores, winning 40 to 31.

The scrap was a much better exhibition of cage play than last night's many foul affair, and was hard fought throughout.

With it under their belts, the Louisianians have only to beat Tulane two games next week to finish the season unscathed in the Southeastern conference. Tonight's game was their tenth straight loop triumph.

The first half was played on nip and tuck lines, but a 10-point offensive carried L. S. U. substantially ahead as the second half got under way and provided the final winning margin.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR BASKETBALL RALLY AT RUSTON

Annual Cage Tournament To Be Held At Tech Friday, Saturday

RUSTON, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Final plans for the staging of the annual North Louisiana high school basketball tournament at Louisiana Tech to be held on February 22 and 23 this year, are being made as letters from various high schools in this section of the state announce their intention of attending the tourney, according to an announcement by M. H. Folk, Jr., secretary of the rally association.

The cage meet is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock Friday morning with about 35 teams—boys and girls—expected to enter. Parish elimination contests were held last week to select the two representatives from each parish, stated Mr. Folk.

Last year 21 boys' teams and 14 girls' teams were entered in the rally. Oak Grove of Sabine parish was the champion in the boys' division with Kelly second best in 1934. Oak Grove was also the winner in 1933. Last year the Collinston girls' team was the winner with the Bastrop squad getting second place.

The boys' teams will start playing about 8 o'clock Friday morning in the boys' gym and the girls' will start about 9 o'clock in the women's gym. Elimination games will be 20 minutes long with two ten minute halves and a rest period of five minutes. Regulatioon length games will be played in the semi-finals and finals. Semi-finals in both divisions will be played Saturday morning and play in the finals will begin at 7 o'clock Saturday night. Both the boys' and girls' divisions will play the semi-finals and finals in the men's gym. It is hoped that play will progress to the semi-final stage Friday night, said Mrr. Folk.

Losers in the semi-finals will play for third place Saturday afternoon. Winners of the first three places will be eligible to enter the annual state rally held at Baton Rouge, stated Mr. Folk.

A committee will meet in Mr. Folk's office at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, February 18, to decide the order of play—that is, seeding the teams. This committee is composed of A. A. Smith, Athens; G. E. Jones, Saline; and M. H. Folk, Ruston.

The boys' teams will be quartered in the boys' dormitory and the girls' teams will be housed in the girls' dormitory.

M'CARTHY RAPS NIGHT BASEBALL

Not Necessary For Majors To Resort To That, Says Yanks Pilot

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Joe McCarthy, who said his Yanks will be no "worse" than last year, when they finished second in the American league, tonight joined Joe Cronin, Boston pilot, and the venerable Connie Mack as opponents of night baseball.

"Everyone knows baseball should be played in the daytime," the New York pilot said. "I don't believe it is necessary for the big leagues to resort to the night game."

Marse Joe stated without hesitation that he saw no reason to predict New York would finish lower than second, if it didn't take the top rung of the American league ladder.

"In fact," he said, "Earl Coombs feels just as good as ever after recovering from a skull fracture suffered last summer when he crashed into a wall at St. Louis. If he is able to resume his old post in the outfield and plays his former brand of ball, that solves one of my problems.

"Bill Dickey, our first-string catcher, has reported his injured right hand has healed," McCarthy continued. "If the stiffness works out in spring training, that will be another question answered."

McCarthy, preparing to depart for the training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., two weeks from tomorrow, said all he knew about Babe Ruth was what he had read in the papers.

NEVILLE TO MEET IMPROVED BOLTON MITTMEN FRIDAY

Tigers' Last Home Match To Be Fought At Roosevelt Stadium

Considerably heartened by their overwhelming victory over the Catholic high school Golden Bears of Baton Rouge here Friday night, their first victory in the last three weeks, the state champion Tiger boxing team of Neville high school is laying preparations for its last home dual meet of the season here next Friday night when they tangle with their old foes the Bears of Bolton high school of Alexandria. The dual meet will be staged at Roosevelt Stadium, instead of in the high school gym.

The champions, who already claim two victories over the Bolton mittmen this season, are favorites to keep the first championship boxing team in the state from recovering from the drubbing it has been taking this year.

The Bruins were the first to win the state boxing title in 1932 when the first state tournament was held and they still have several of the boys left who were on that powerful squad.

In the Tigers' opening match of the season they trounced the Bolton boxers 8 to 2 and in a return meet at Alexandria the locals were held to a close 6 to 5 victory. There was a marked difference in the showing made by the Bears in their opener, and in their next bout and the Bengals can be looking for a determined force to come against them Friday.

The match will be the last dual meet to be staged here by Neville high school this season. Following the Bolton encounter, the Tigers have only two other matches and both are to be fought at Baton Rouge on successive nights when they face in return matches the Bulldogs of Baton Rouge high and the Golden Bears of Catholic high. To date the Bengals have won five dual meets and lost two. They were defeated by the Bulldogs of Baton Rouge and Lutcher.

GILLIE WINNER OF ANITA DERBY

Greentree Stable Thoroughbred Finishes Fast To Win Stake

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Out of the dust in a wild stretch dash came Gillie today to win the first running of the Santa Anita derby and $19,650 first place money for Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree stable.

The time was 1 minute 44 3-5 seconds for the mile and a sixteenth. Whiskolo of the Milky Way farm was second, a length and a half behird, and Demonstration was third, another length and a half in the ruck.

Silvio Coucci rated the three-year-old bay son of Victorian perfectly as he brought him into the stretch wide. Gillie was running fourth at the time, head extended, and thundered past the rapidly tiring Bluebeard, Pantoufle and Whiskolo as the finish line leaped up to meet the classy field of 17 starters.

A fifteen to one shot at post time after his entry mate, Peradventure—considered the best of the two—had been scratched, Gillie was given a deafening demonstration from the 35,000 persons as he moved out of nowhere off the last turn to win going away.

The winner paid $32.20 to win; $13.40 and $8.40 on $2 pari-mutuel tickets.

Sound Advice, coupled with Polar Flight, had been the post time favorite at 9 to 10 odds, with the C. V. Whitney entry of Pantoufle and Pundit heavily played as second choice.

Whiskolo, bay colt out of Diavolo, paid $16.80 and $10.00, while Demonstration was worth $39.40 on $2 tickets.

DALLAS, Texas, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Bob Tarleton, business manager of the Dallas Steers, said tonight the Rayne, La., club of the Evangeline league, had been added to the Dallas "farm system."

Tech Devises Elaborate Intramural Sports Card

Basketball And Boxing Hold Students' Interest This Spring

RUSTON, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—According to a report given out here this week, students of Louisiana Tech are rallying to the organization of the intramural program being drafted by the athletic department under the direction of Eddie Wojecki, trainer.

The program, which will sponsor practically all sports, was organized for the benefit of those students that do not play on the regular college teams. A plan has been in the air at Tech for some time regarding compulsory recreation similar to schools having an R. O. T. C. unit, but the local athletic officials have devised a scheme by which they expect to create enough interest to have everyone taking some kind of exercise without force.

In order to put the program on a competative basis, various campus organizations have been asked to enter teams in the numerous sports. The winning team of any one of the tournaments, held as a part of the program, will receive a pennant banner. The organization having the highest average in all the various intramural sports will be given a trophy by the "T" club

The basketball league is already functioning with the sophomore class leading at present The biggest upset of the league was the defeat of the T. K. N. Flashes by Bill Ruple's Handsome Five. The Ruston Celtics, a team composed of former Mississippi boys, are about the strongest bid for the title, it is said. Due to a bad start, the Tech Engineers are slightly handicapped but the last victory brought a fine spirit, observers say. Only seven more league games remain to be played before the final playoff. The four leading teams will battle it out for the title.

In order to give his material another year's seasoning before entering intercollegiate competition, Coach Ray E. Davis has put his boxing team in as a part of the intramural program.

A Golden Glove tournament will begin here Wednesday, February 20, to decide the champions of the different divisions. All participants are asked to meet Coach Davis at the gym Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock for further details. Over 35 applicants have already been received with the dead line set for February 19.

Trainer Wojecki announced the following intramural basketball standings:

Team	Won	Lost	Pct.
T. K. N. Frat	2	1	.666
Handsome Five	2	1	.666
Ruston Celtics	1	1	.666

Cleveland Swimmer Sets Five Backstroke Records

CLEVELAND, Feb. 16.—(AP)—A junior at Case school of applied science, Paul Grossman, splashed five National A. A. U. backstroke swimming records out ofthe 60-foot Case pool today.

With five officials A. A. U. timers clocking him, Grossman made 880 yards in 12:90.2 compared with the old mark of 12:33.5.

He kept right on going, setting four more marks, 1,000 yards in 13:48.8 compared with the old mark of 14:30; 1,320 yards in 18:19.3, breaking the old mark of 21:35.8; 1,500 yards in 20:48.8, for which the old record was 22:44.2, and 1,500 meters in 22:40, compared with the old mark of 27.09.4.

Who Said Ping Pong Is A Sissie's Game?

LONDON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Bloodshed marked the final match of the world's table tennis championship tonight as Victor Barna of Hungary won the title for the fourth year in a row.

The loser, M. Szabados of Hungary, fell during the second set and cut his right hand. Despite the injury he made a close match of it. The scores were 17-21, 21-17, 19-21, 21-11, 21-19.

BIG SIX LEAGUE MEETS TUESDAY

Circuit May Enter Professional Baseball For 1935 Campaign

Tentative organization of the Big Six league for the coming season is expected to be made at the first meeting of the year, to be held in Monroe Tuesday night, it was announced yesterday.

Club officials have been considering entering professional baseball this season and information concerning the proposed move will be studied at Tuesday's meeting.

J. Walter Morris, of Dallas, an organizer of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, conferred with the league president last week relative to the proposal. Mr. Morris said that outside assistance, in the way of financial help from leagues of higher classification could be obtained for each Big Six team.

Four clubs comprised the circuit last season. They were Winnsboro, Tallulah, Oak Grove and Waterproof. Following the organization of the league Tuesday night, it is hoped to increase the loop to six teams. Natchez and Vicksburg have been mentioned as possible entries, and other towns in this section also will be contacted.

All four of the teams were assisted through last season by the operation of slot machines but with the machines banned, a new means of raising revenue will be sought. It is thought that the assistance obtained from organized baseball would solve the financial difficulties

Representatives from the four towns in the league last year will attend the meeting and others interested in obtaining information of the proposed plans for 1935 are urged to attend.

RACING LEGAL IN ARKANSAS AGAIN

Governor Futrell Signs Bill To Permit Pari-Mutuel Betting

LITTLE ROCK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—An outlaw for 23 years, horse race betting returned to Arkansas as a legal ward of the state at noon today when Gov. J. Marion Futrell signed the Hampton racing bill legitimatizing and taxing pari-mutuel pools.

By his action, the governor made this state the 14th to legalize wagering on thoroughbreds.

Cheers went up in Hot Springs, where plans had been perfected weeks ago for the opening of Oaklawn park's spring meeting on Washington's birthday, only to be dampened a week ago when the governor said he would permit no further illegal racing at that track.

Oaklawn operated last year without benefit of legalization.

Spurred by the governor's manifesto, the legislature this week took up the Hampton bill and passed it in five days with comfortable majorities in both houses, attaching an emergency clause to make it immediate law upon signature by the chief executive.

With his signature, Governor Futrell created a state racing commission of seven members, vested with authority to supervise tracks, races and betting.

OUACHITA GIRLS NOSE OUT STRONG IN CAGE THRILLER

Local Sextet Wins From Tinymites By One Point, 27 To 26

STRONG, Ark., Feb. 16.—(Special)—The Ouachita parish high school girls of Monroe, La., won a basketball thriller from the Strong high school Tinymites, 27 to 26, here tonight.

In nosing out the strong local club, the Monroe girls staved off a late rally that threatened to overcome a lead that Ouachita had held through the entire game. With four of the Monroe teams' stars fouled out, the Ouachita team was reinforced with substitutes when the game ended.

Ouachita jumped into an early lead and was ahead, 9 to 4, at the end of the first period. The visitors had stretched their margin to 19 to 9 at the end of the half. Strong rallied somewhat in the third period and when the two teams entered the home stretch, Ouachita was leading by eight points, 25 to 17. With three of the Ouachita guards going out in the fourth period, Strong's scorers began to click, while Ouachita was being held to two points during the quarter. However, the final gun sounded with Strong one point behind.

Newsom, Strong forward, led the scoring with six field goals and six free throws for 18 points. Rowland, Ouachita forward, made 13 points and Wall made 10 to top Ouachita's attack. Both teams played excellent basketball but the Ouachita regulars gave a great exhibition to pile up their margin while they were in there.

BLOCK SEXTET WINS GOLD MEDAL CROWN

SICILY ISLAND, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Block high of Jonesville won the first annual Gold Medal girls' basketball tournament here tonight, defeating Ogden, 29 to 26, in a hard fought game before a packed gymnasium.

The final game was hotly contested throughout. The score at the half was 12-12 but Block managed to forge ahead in the final period and win by a three-point margin.

Seventy-five prizes, many of them gold medals, were awarded at the conclusion of the tournament.

High scorers were R. Bennett, Ogden, 68; Russell, Block, 61, and Head, Eros, 58. The all-tournament team was selected as follows: Wilkinson, Sicily Island, R. Bennett, Ogden and Russell, Block, forwards; Vines, Newellton, A. Breithaupt, Block, and Smith, Ogden, guards.

Block advanced to the finals by defeating Newellton, 21 to 16, while Ogden reached the championship game by eliminating Eros, 44 to 33, in the semi-finals.

Ole Miss Cagers Trounce Southwestern Five, 52-22

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Feb. 16.—(AP)—In a rough and tumble game here tonight the University of Mississippi cage men triumphed over the Southwestern Lynx of Memphis by the one-sided count of 52 to 22.

Chester Curtis, fleet Ole Miss forward, led the attack of his team as they gained revenge of their defeat the night before. Rasberry was again the Lynx star.

FERRIDAY, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Miss Mary Maranta's Ferriday high school girls basketball team were easy victims of the Natchez high school sextet here Friday afternoon, the Natchezians winning by a score of 42 to 19. Liz Junk was high scorer for the winners, while Martha De Prato led for the local lassies.

Veteran Garner Exits As McAtee Returns To Saddle

(By NEA Service)

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 16.—Mack Garner is here looking for a job.

Those who saw the little Iowan clean up on Cavalcade last season find this hard to believe

However, the news that Linus (Pony) McAtee, once one of the greatest jockeys in America, and one of the finest finishers the American turf ever saw, will return to ride for the Brookmeade Stable and be aboard Cavalcade in 1935 stake and handicap events, probably spells the end of a splendid rider as a star as well as a comeback attempt of another.

The years had begun to steal Garner's magic, as two decades of riding figured to do. Never a finisher of the ability of an Earl Sande, a Garrison, or a McAtee, the advancing years dimmed some of Garner's other riding talents. It is no disgrace to him to say that he no longer might have taken advantage of all the openings, those holes that appear for fleeting seconds in the pack, and which, to the first rate rider, mean a chance for victory.

Riding is much like driving a car in traffic. Oldsters who have developed a bump of caution slow down in the pinches. The better youngsters drive recklessly, but their coordination of eye and muscle, reactions at their best, carry them through safely. So it is with Keester, Westrope, and Gilbert, youngsters who now have far eclipsed Garner, the aging master of pace.

The figures speak for themselves:

Year	Mounts	First	Second	Third	Unplacd	Money Won
1915	775	151	118	90	416
1932	291	50	50	40	151	$ 67,382
1933	179	23	30	20	106	83,765
1934	226	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	194,123

In 1933, Garner had 179 mounts, about one-sixth of those he had enjoyed two decades before, and he won only 23 races. Last year, he had 226 mounts and 30 victories, and in both years had a riding percentage of .13.

Garner was the second highest jockey in point of money won in 1934, but that was only natural, for he was the first string rider of the Brookmeade stable, and as such drew the cream of Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's horses. The Brookmeade barn was the highest winning stable of the year, with such luminaries as Cavalcade, High Quest, Good Goods, Psychic Bid, Okapi, Special Agent, and others.

Despite Cavalcade's success as the three-year-old champion, many critics contend that only a Cavalcade would have done so well with the Garner of 1934 on his back. These contend that the British-bred colt should not have been nosed out by his stablemate, High Quest, in the Preakness, and should not have experienced so much contention in another event or two.

Followed In Brothers' Footsteps

Garner has been on the turf a long time, though by no means as long as the famous name he bears. He jumped into prominence when, as a younger brother of Guy and Willie, he led the list of jockies in 1915. That year this member of the riding Garners had a riding percentage of .19. He won the Grand Union Hotel stakes with Puss in Boots, the Latonia cup with Star Jasmine, and took the Travers when Trial by Jury was disqualified in favor of Lady Rotha.

That was 20 years ago, yet Garner continued to ride, often brilliantly.

In 1916, Mack won the Suburban with Friar Rock and the Camden with Water Witch.

He scored in three successive Latonia Championships with Rockminster, In Memoriam and Chilhowee, and captured the Latonia cup on two occasions. He won a Lawrence Realization with The Nut, a Dixie with the renowned mare, Chacolet, and an Empire City derby with the high class Questionnaire.

Oddly enough, Garner never won a Dwyer, a Futurity, Hopeful, Jockey Club Gold cup, or a Preakness. And until 1934, he had never prevailed in a Kentucky derby. He might have won the derby and Dwyer with the splendid Blue Larkspur had it not been for that animal's dislike of mud.

Uncle Mack Should Be Fine Trainer

Garner perhaps will leave no permanent record of greatness, though during his long career he rode two standouts, Blue Larkspur and Cavalcade, but the American turf always will remember him as one of its foremost gentlemen. Probably that is one reason Uncle Mack lasted so long.

Remarkable riding years left Garner no conceit. The high salaries, the sudden riches, did not go to his head, nor lead him to brawling.

As a rider Garner always was fair and seldom tried to take advantage of the other fellow. Thus, he was in a minimum of accidents, fines and disqualifications. His courage, and he had plenty of it, remained with him long after it had left most of his contemporaries.

Garner is the sort racegoers hope will go into training. If he does, he will be as much a credit to that profession as George Odom, Joe Notter, Clyde Van Dusen, and other jockies who have supplemented riding years with successful careers in the more advanced work.

WOMEN WRESTLERS BOOKED FOR STADIUM SHOW

MISS MORTENSEN SIGNED TO MEET ALABAMA CHAMP

Plummer And LaRue To Tangle In Main Event Of Weekly Show

The appearance here a week and a half ago of Miss Clara Mortensen, woman wrestler, was quite successful, so Promoter Charlie Bruscato has booked two fair matmen as a feature of the weekly wrestling show at Roosevelt stadium next Wednesday night. Miss Mortensen will return as an opponent of Miss Estelle Dickinson, Alabama's woman champion and leading contender for Miss Mortensen's lightweight title.

The two girls will wrestle a one-fall match, with a 45-minute time limit. In Miss Mortensen's previous appearance at the stadium, she threw Johnny Lamar, Dallas lightweight, in 10 minutes.

Besides the added attraction, the usual main event and semi-final will be included on the card, Promoter Bruscato said. The main event will be a battle between two rough performers, Johnny Plummer, the husky Iowan, and Frenchie LaRue, the Arkansas meanie, who outroughed Nick Elitch last week. Participants in the semi-final exhibition have not been signed but Bruscato said he was angling for two good showmen to complete the big card.

In her previous exhibition, Miss Mortensen gave a clever exhibition of scientific wrestling. She demonstrated several holds and even roughed up her male opponent a bit. Lamar didn't "pull" his punches against Miss Mortensen and it was quite a match.

The bout between the two women will be the first ever staged here and it should prove interesting. Miss Dickinson is said to be equally as clever as the California girl. According to press reports, she is plenty rough and knows lots about the game. Her recent victory over Betty Brown in Houston is said to have been a thriller. She has been wrestling four years.

The Plummer-LaRue match is certain to be a rough affair. Johnny is among the best of the meanies to perform here in the past year but he'll need plenty to beat LaRue. The Frenchman didn't show any scientific wrestling last week but used numerous fouls to beat Elitch. At the start of the match he pulled a razor blade from his trunks and then ended the match when he jerked a small grass rope from hiding and wrapped it around Nick's neck to win the third and deciding fall. The fans rushed to the ringside and protested to Referee Kibbens but by that time, LaRue had hopped through the ropes and rushed to his dressing room, where he disposed of his "weapon."

Both the main event and the semi-final will be best two out of three falls, with a two-hour time limit on the main event and the first match limited to one hour. Officials for the card have not been selected, Bruscato said, but a capable referee will be brought in to handle the Plummer-LaRue struggle.

A former Neville high school athlete, Julius Haddad, who is now home on leave from the U. S. navy, will referee the match between Miss Mortensen and Miss Dickinson. Haddad is a member of the navy boxing squad and has fought a few bouts at Hampton Roads, Va.

Other officials will be selected Monday.

Outstanding High School Athlete To Be Selected

The outstanding high school athlete of Monroe will be selected by popular ballot and will be awarded a suit of clothes by Fink the Tailor, Herbert Fink announced yesterday.

The ballot, which appears below, must be deposited in a sealed box at the store of Fink the Tailor before Friday night, it was announced.

In the past, Mr. Fink has given a suit of clothes to Neville high school's outstanding athlete but this year the three high schools of the city will be eligible to enter as many boys as they wish. Only the ballot which appears below may be used, Mr. Fink said.

A committee composed of Dr. Joe Brown, Dr. W. L. Bendel and George Lofton, sports editor of The World, has been appointed by Mr. Fink to count the ballots and announce the winner.

Rab Rodgers To Receive Ole Miss Athletic Medal

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Rab Rodgers, of Tupelo, Miss., was named today as the winner of the Norris trophy for 1935, an honor bestowed annually on the most outstanding athlete at the University of Mississippi. Rodgers has starred for two years on the gridiron as a regular half-back, and during the past season was prominently mentioned for all-conference honors.

In basketball he has alternated between forward and guard, and is one of the best floor men for Ole Miss. During the spring his time is devoted to baseball where he has held down both the third base and catching posts on the varsity squad.

Rodgers succeeds Chester Curtis as the Norris trophy winner. Rodgers has another year of intercollegiate competition in all three sports.

EDDIE REED IS LOYOLA COACH

Former Tulane Captain Selected To Succeed 'Doc' Erskine

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 16.—(AP)—James Edward "Eddie" Reed, 33-year-old attorney who quit coaching seven years ago to take up the practice of law, will return to his first love.

Announcement of Reed's selection as head football coach at Loyola university (New Orleans) to succeed Ernest "Doc" Erskine, and his acceptance, was made by the Loyola athletic council today.

Reed, who captained Tulane's football team in 1921, later serving as freshman and assistant coach at Loyola, has been signed to a one-year contract.

The new head football mentor said this afternoon Loyola authorities had given him free rein in the selection of his assistants, but that he had not decided what, if any, changes would be made. At present Ham Weddle and Al Fitz Williams are the assistant coaches.

Facing a rather difficult schedule for 1935, Reed today wasted no time in making plans for next fall's eleven, issuing a call for the opening of spring training Monday, Feb. 25. The spring training grind will last for "six or eight weeks."

Reed brings a new style of football to the present crop of grid candidates, though his coaching methods are not new to Loyola. He employs the single wingback system, while his predecessor tutored the double wingback formations after the school of Pop Warner.

Graduating from Tulane in 1922 after having captained the Green Wave the previous year, Reed had his first coaching assignment at his alma mater, coaching the freshman team in 1923-24. In 1925 he went to Loyola as freshman coach and produced an undefeated, unscored on team.

He was elevated to head varsity coach the following year, and his team won the ten games of a hard schedule, scoring 365 points to 20 for the opposition.

When Clark Shaughnessy was brought to Loyola the following year from Tulane, Reed remained as his assistant. He voluntarily retired from football in 1928 to practice law, and has been located in New Orleans since that time. He is a native of the Crescent City.

Mississippi College Five Defeats Millsaps, 30-23

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Mississippi college defeated its grudge rival, Millsaps here tonight 30 to 23, giving the teams an even break in the four-game series.

Reversing trends of previous tilts, the winners were ahead all the way, and held the Purple cagers scoreless for the first eight minutes of the game.

Louisiana State Eleven To Use Shift Next Fall

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—The shift, a phase of football which has not been used at L. S. U. since 1927, will be employed next fall by Bernie Moore, new Tiger football mentor. Virtually all of the first week of spring practice, now in progress, was taken up with the new shift, which is Moore's own creation, although it resembles the old Minnesota shift.

Moore's Bengals will open their 1935 schedule with the powerful Rice Owls and then take on the strong University of Texas eleven before journeying to New York City to meet Manhattan. Rice defeated Purdue last season, while Texas bested Notre Dame. Neither loses much in the way of graduation.

Mike Donohue, who made his "line-divide" play famous in the south, was the last L. S. U. coach to employ the shift.

RECORD TRIAL OF BLUEBIRD MAY BE DELAYED 10 DAYS

Beach Conditions Are Worse Since Campbell Began Efforts

By Edward J. Neil
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Gloom settled heavily on the shiny sands of Daytona Beach today, for conditions never appeared worse for Sir Malcolm Campbell's speed ventures, and the possibility loomed that ten days may pass before Bluebird can charge down on her own record of 272.108 miles an hour.

The beach was rougher than at any time since the impatient, restless Englishman came here two weeks ago with his entirely re-built blue streak, hoping this time to lift automobile speed to the breathless point of 300 miles an hour, five miles a minute.

Rain drummed down on the beach most of last night, the wind was from the west and south, and there were gullies and trenches all down the length of the implacable 11 1-2 mile racing stretch. The 50-year-old Briton, a nervous bundle naturally straining at the leash most of the time, was completely sunk.

"I've never seen it quite so bad," he said desparingly. "The beach is miserable, simply miserable. At this rate there's no telling when we can try for the record. I'm disconsolate."

He looked it. Several of the hours he spent with his mechanics in the garage, trying to find something to do for Bluebird, the handsome, seven-ton monster that needs only proper conditions to test the ultimate in speed design and construction. There was nothing to do. Bluebird glistened inside and out, her 2,500 horsepower plant roars hungrily for a beach to run on. The readjustments necessary after the initial test drive Thursday have all been made.

In the haze that hung over the beach today, Bill Cummings, 1934 Indianapolis speed race winner, attempted to break the Diesel motored record Dave Evans, another American racer, lifted to 125.065 yesterday. Campbell watched moodily, debating whether to test fate and make a last minute try for the second test he wants before trying for the record.

But Cummings had a bad time of it, and failed to complete his runs. On the south run his oil pressure failed, and coming back he bumped around a great deal and was forced to cut his motors as the car belched smoke and fire going into the measured mile. He failed to approach the record.

Veterans, watching his troubles, shook their heads. All are predicting that unless conditions improved tremendously, Campbell won't approach his old mark, despite the undoubted speed and power in old lady Bluebird. The beach so far just won't allow it, no matter how much courage the Englishman showed gambling with nature and death.

JACK APOLOGIZES FOR INABILITY TO BETTER OLD MARK

The 500-yard race for the classic Buermeyer trophy developed a startling finale when the winner, Timothy Ring of Holy Cross, was disqualified for an alleged foul against Milton Sandler of the German American A. C. of New York during an early battle for the pole position.

The verdict thus went to J. R. Hofstetter of Dartmouth, who came up fast in the stretch to take second place, four yards behind Ring. Harry Hoffman of the New York curb exchange A. A. passed the fading Ivan Fuqua of Indiana in a short tussle for third place. Sandler wound up a poor last.

Ring's time was 59.2 seconds.

John W. (Bill) Follows, the young Washington (D. C.) newspaper man who wears the New York A. C. colors in competition, staged a come back to beat his club mate, Joe McCluskey, in the two-mile run while the favorite, Ray Sears of Butler, ran a poor third.

Follows broke the tape ten yards in front of McCluskey in the slow time of 9:18.6.

Cornelius Johnson, the lanky negro from Los Angeles, won the high jump by clearing 6 feet, 7 inches.

The veteran Hal Osborn of Philadelphia, Olympic champion eleven years ago and former record holder, gave a great come back performance in tying for second place with Al Threadgill, Temple university negro, at 6 feet 5 3-4 inches.

The chief surprise of the 60-yard dash was the elimination of Earl Widmyer, stocky University of Maryland star and conqueror a week ago of Ralph Metcalfe, the national champion, in the annual West Virginia meet. Widmyer was shut out when he ran third in the semi-finals to Ben Johnson, Columbia negro, and Ed Siegel of New York.

The final of the sprint feature developed another duel between a pair of dusky rivals with Eulace Peacock, Temple university's versatile athlete, outstepping Johnson to win by a half yard in 6.3 seconds. Ed Siegel, while running even with Johnson at Peacock's heels, pulled a muscle in his right leg and dropped out at the 50-yard mark.

Yale's great pole vaulter, Keith Brown, had his specialty all to himself but had to be satisfied with 13 feet 9 inches.

Percy Beard of the New York A. C., the favorite, captured the 60-yard high hurdles final by a yard from Charles Pessoni of Manhattan in spite of a bad start. He was clocked in 7.6 seconds.

Nov. 16—State Teachers, Hattiesburg.
Nov. 23—Sewanee, here.
Nov. 30—Ole Miss, place to be determined.

L. S. U. TEAMS TO BATTLE GREENIES

Cagers And Boxers Of Old Rivals To Tangle During The Week

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 16—(Special)—Down in this section of the woods when a Tiger sees Green he sees red. And quite a few Tigers, L. S. U. Tigers, will see plenty of Green, Tulane Green next week-end.

The L. S. U. basketball team, which is making a determined bid for Southeastern conference honors, will meet the Tulane Greenies here Friday and Saturday. On Wednesday night, the Tiger boxers will journey to New Orleans to swap rights and lefts with the Wave punchers.

An atmosphere somewhat similar to that which hovers over Bengalville on the eve of the Tulane-Tiger football game is present here as the athletes rest over the week-end.

The Tiger cagers, a senior team, will be seeking its 10th and 11th consecutive victories over the Greenie cagers. The two quintets have met twice this year, with the L. S. U. boys winning by comfortable margins.

Led by "Sparky" Wade and "Buddy" Blair, a pair of eagle-eyed sharpshooters, the Tigers rule heavy favorites to annex both games in their own lair, especially since their return to form against Mississippi State last week.

Interest in the boxing match between the old rivals is running high, and many fans from Baton Rouge are expected to go to New Orleans to see the bouts.

The fight that promises to be the feature will bring together Capt. William Robinson of L. S. U. and "Bucky" Bryan of Tulane in the junior middleweight class. Both fighters keep their left foot moving forward and sport kayo punches in either hand.

Another bout that should thrill the fans will come in the featherweight class when Earl Turner of L. S. U. clashes with Al Justrabo, 1933 Southeastern conference champion. The Tiger is a clever boxer and can hit with both mitts. In his only fight this year, Turner stopped the veteran Bob McMullen of Florida in the second round.

A full program of eight bouts, from bantam to heavyweight, is schedule.

BAER CELEBRATES 26TH ANNIVERSARY

Champion Flays Neusel In Birthday Statement From His Home

SAN LEANDRO, Calif., Feb. 16.—(AP)—With a huff and a puff that made the window panes rattle, Max Baer blew out 26 candles today on the birthday cake his mother baked for him. Then he ate half the cake.

The heavyweight boxing champion followed up his gastronomic feat by verbally taking Walter Neusel, the German fighter, to pieces.

"That German Neusel gets my goat," said Max as he joined in birthday festivities at his parents' home. "We make him an offer to fight four rounds in Chicago. He can make himself a nice piece of change for it. Do you know what he asks for? He wants a guarantee of $50,000. I am surprised he didn't ask for the privilege of moving into the mint with a scoopshovel.

"Neusel just 'demanded' himself out of some real money. In the meantime he will go along making a couple of thousand dollars at a crack. The trouble with these contenders, if any, is they talk a great fight.

"We can't be putting on title fights every week. The fans would get pretty well fed up on such a boxing diet. While we're building up a real championship fight I'd like to keep active. Four to ten round bouts every little while is my idea of keeping fit. Call them 'exhibitions' if you want to but any time the boys want to play rough, I'll be willing to join in the game."

Baer left for Sacramento, to spend several days on the ranch of his manager, Ancil Hoffman. He will leave February 22 for Chicago.

LIONS WIN FROM CLARKS, 52 TO 28

Ouachita High Five Has Little Trouble Taking 11th Straight

Ouachita parish high school's Lions won their eleventh straight basketball victory last night when they trounced the Clarks high school quintet, 58 to 26, at Northeast Center of L. S. U. gym.

The Clarks team put up a good scrap but was no match for the Ouachita squad. Coach Leo Hartman used his first string only a part of the first quarter and the third quarter. The second team performed for the Lions the rest of the game.

Truman Staples, regular guard, led the scoring for the Lions with seven goals and two free throws for 16 points. Sellana, Clarks forward, was best for the visitors with 10 points.

The Lions close out their regular schedule next week with games with Delhi and Bastrop on Monday and Tuesday nights. Both games will be played here. Ouachita will enter the Ruston rally Friday.

MAROONS SHADE TULANE QUINTET

Mississippi State Five Wins Basketball Thriller, 41 to 40

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The eagle eye of "Slim" Cassibry gave Mississippi State's Maroons a sensational 41 to 40 victory over the Tulane Greenies Saturday night in the Wave gymnasium, settling in the final 30 seconds of play a ding-dong battle that kept a small crowd of 400 hysterical for an hour and 15 minutes. The victory gave the visitors a clean sweep of the week-end basketball series, as Mississippi State won the opener Friday night, 53 to 31.

Baseball Trophy Won At Rally Found Here

Some high school baseball player has lost a trophy he won at the Ruston rally last year, but if he will call T. O. Dent, at the Missouri Pacific, and identify it, he can get it back. Mr. Dent reported yesterday that he had found a miniature baseball with an inscription that it was won at the north Louisiana rally at Louisiana Tech in 1934.

Mr. Dent said yesterday that he would turn it over to the owner if said owner would call him at phone 2400, station 20.

CUP HOPES REST ON FRENCH YOUTH

Francois Destremeau Is Said To Be Most Promising Player

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—France's future in the International Davis cup tennis competition is riding on the broad shoulders of a tall blond 17-year-old player, Francois Destremeau.

That's the opinion expressed today by Mme. Sylvania Henrotin, France's second ranking woman star. She is here to challenge for the women's national indoor championship which opens Monday in the Park Avenue Seventh regiment drill shed.

"Destremeau is our most promising young player," said Mme. Henrotin. "His physical build is well-suited for tennis; he is tall, fairly slender and has broad shoulders. He has fine style but so far has not acquired a great deal of speed, although that should take care of itself as he grows older and stronger."

France's immediate chances of recapturing the International trophy are not bright, Mme. Henrotin admitted without hesitation. There's a possibility that the tri color's team may comprise only two players—Andre Merlin and left-handed Christian Boussus.

Merlin is considered France's outstanding singles player with Boussus only a step behind. Last fall Merlin was injured while riding a motorcycle and was on the shelf until a few weeks ago when he made an unsuccessful return to the courts in the French indoor championship. He was eliminated in the second round by an outsider.

"But don't take Merlin's defeat too seriously," said Mme. Henrotin. "After all he was several months in recovering from the accident and then he hadn't played much before the tournament. He's an excellent player—our best, I would say—and it shouldn't take long for him to regain his form."

ZIMMERMAN LEADS IN PHOENIX OPEN GOLF

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore., professional, continued his consistent play in the second round of the Phoenix $2,500 open today, scoring 71 and taking the lead with a total of 141, one under par for the 36 holes.

Mortie Dutra, Chandler, Ariz., and Ky Laffoon, Chicago, who topped the opening day's play with 69 each, fell back into a tie for second place at 142.

Craig Wood, Deal, N. J., added a 72 to his first day's total of 71 to gain third place with 143. Three ended in a dead-lock for fourth position with 144. They were Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee; Byron Nelson, Texarkana, Texas, and Harry Cooper, Chicago.

Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., and Walter Hagen, Detroit, found themselves back in the midst of a big group clustered around the 146 score. Hagen matched his 73 of yesterday and Smith took a 74.

TECHMEN SCORE SECOND VICTORY OVER UNION FIVE

Bulldogs Take Early Lead And Trim Tennesseeans, 36 to 27

RUSTON, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Louisiana Tech's basketball team made a clean sweep of their two-game series with Union university of Jackson, Tenn., by defeating the visitors, 36 to 27, here tonight. It was the final home game of the season for the Bulldog cagers.

Both teams were slow in warming up at the start of the game but Tech's sharpshooters soon found the range and the local quintet got off to an early lead. The first half was close, however, with Union threatening through the entire 20-minute period.

Union led only once, and that was after 10 minutes of going in the first half when the visitors enjoyed a brief 7-6 advantage. Tech forged ahead immediately, only to be tied at 12-12 with three minutes remaining before the rest period. The Bulldogs were equal to the occasion, however, and as the gun ended the first half, Tech was leading, 17 to 14.

The Bulldogs continued to pull away during the second half and with the entire team functioning smoothly, Tech wound up its home stand with another impressive conference victory.

Homer Coody, the sophomore forward, was outstanding for the Bulldogs. Coody piled up six field goals and three free throws to take individual scoring honors with 15 points. The soph star shot baskets from every angle. He also played an excellent floor game. Waters and Barham played well defensively and Mitchell and Brooks turned in a good floor game.

Vandiver was the star of the Union quintet, making 12 points and playing well on the floor. Graham's defensive work was best for the visitors.

In a preliminary game, the Tech freshmen shaded the Louisiana Normal Imps 47 to 41, with Smith outstanding for the Bullpups. The frosh star made 25 points. Miller also played well for the locals. Williams and Loftin, of Normal, were runners-up for scoring honors with 11 points each.

Tech takes the road Monday for three games. The Bulldogs meet Southwestern of Louisiana at Lafayette Monday night and then move on to New Orleans for a two-game series with the Loyola Wolves on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Those two games wind up the Bulldogs' cage activities for the year unless they get an invitation to compete in the annual S. I. A. A. tournament at Jackson.

WOMEN WRESTLERS BOOKED FOR STADIUM SHOW

Plummer And LaRue To Tangle In Main Event Of Weekly Show

The appearance here a week and a half ago of Miss Clara Mortensen, woman wrestler, was quite successful, so Promoter Charlie Bruscato has booked two fair matmen as a feature of the weekly wrestling show at Roosevelt stadium next Wednesday night. Miss Mortensen will return as an opponent of Miss Estelle Dickinson, Alabama's woman champion and leading contender for Miss Mortensen's lightweight title.

The two girls will wrestle a one-fall match, with a 45-minute time limit. In Miss Mortensen's previous appearance at the stadium, she threw Johnny Lamar, Dallas lightweight, in 10 minutes.

Besides the added attraction, the usual main event and semi-final will be included on the card, Promoter Bruscato said. The main event will be a battle between two rough performers, Johnny Plummer, the husky Iowan, and Frenchie LaRue, the Arkansas meanie, who outroughed Nick Elitch last week. Participants in the semi-final exhibition have not been signed but Bruscato said he was angling for two good showmen to complete the big card.

In her previous exhibition, Miss Mortensen gave a clever exhibition of scientific wrestling. She demonstrated several holds and even roughed up her male opponent a bit. Lamar didn't "pull" his punches against Miss Mortensen and it was quite a match.

The bout between the two women will be the first ever staged here and it should prove interesting. Miss Dickinson is said to be equally as clever as the California girl. According to press reports, she is plenty rough and knows lots about the game. Her recent victory over Betty Brown in Houston is said to have been a thriller. She has been wrestling four years.

The Plummer-LaRue match is certain to be a rough affair. Johnny is among the best of the meanies to perform here in the past year but he'll need plenty to beat LaRue. The Frenchman didn't show any scientific wrestling last week but used numerous fouls to beat Elitch. At the start of the match he pulled a razor blade from his trunks and then ended the match when he jerked a small grass rope from hiding and wrapped it around Nick's neck to win the third and deciding fall. The fans rushed to the ringside and protested to Referee Kibbens but by that time, LaRue had hopped through the ropes and rushed to his dressing room, where he disposed of his "weapon."

Both the main event and the semi-final will be best two out of three falls, with a two-hour time limit on the main event and the first match limited to one hour. Officials for the card have not been selected, Bruscato said, but a capable referee will be brought in to handle the Plummer-LaRue struggle.

A former Neville high school athlete, Julius Haddad, who is now home on leave from the U. S. navy, will referee the match between Miss Mortensen and Miss Dickinson. Haddad is a member of the navy boxing squad and has fought a few bouts at Hampton Roads, Va.

Other officials will be selected Monday.

Outstanding High School Athlete To Be Selected

The outstanding high school athlete of Monroe will be selected by popular ballot and will be awarded a suit of clothes by Fink the Tailor, Herbert Fink announced yesterday.

The ballot, which appears below, must be deposited in a sealed box at the store of Fink the Tailor before Friday night, it was announced.

In the past, Mr. Fink has given a suit of clothes to Neville high school's outstanding athlete but this year the three high schools of the city will be eligible to enter as many boys as they wish. Only the ballot which appears below may be used, Mr. Fink said.

A committee composed of Dr. Joe Brown, Dr. W. L. Bendel and George Lofton, sports editor of The World, has been appointed by Mr. Fink to count the ballots and announce the winner.

Rab Rodgers To Receive Ole Miss Athletic Medal

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Fab. 16.—(AP)—Rab Rodgers, of Tupelo, Miss., was named today as the winner of the Norris trophy for 1935, an honor bestowed annually on the most outstanding athlete at the University of Mississippi. Rodgers has starred for two years on the gridiron as a regular half-back, and during the past season was prominently mentioned for all-conference honors.

In basketball he has alternated between forward and guard, and is one of the best floor men for Ole Miss. During the spring his time is devoted to baseball where he has held down both the third base and catching posts on the varsity squad.

Rodgers succeeds Chester Curtis as the Norris trophy winner. Rodgers has another year of intercollegiate competition in all three sports.

EDDIE REED IS LOYOLA COACH

Former Tulane Captain Selected To Succeed 'Doc' Erskine

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 16.—(AP)—James Edward "Eddie" Reed, 33-year-old attorney who quit coaching seven years ago to take up the practice of law, will return to his first love.

Announcement of Reed's selection as head football coach at Loyola university (New Orleans) to succeed Ernest "Doc" Erskine, and his acceptance, was made by the Loyola athletic council today.

Reed, who captained Tulane's football team in 1921, later serving as freshman and assistant coach at Loyola, has been signed to a one-year contract.

The new head football mentor said this afternoon Loyola authorities had given him free rein in the selection of his assistants, but that he had not decided what, if any, changes would be made. At present Ham Weddle and Al Fitz Williams are the assistant coaches.

Facing a rather difficult schedule for 1935, Reed today wasted no time in making plans for next fall's eleven, issuing a call for the opening of spring training Monday, Feb. 25. The spring training grind will last for "six or eight weeks."

Reed brings a new style of football to the present crop of grid candidates, though his coaching methods are not new to Loyola. He employs the single wingback system, while his predecessor tutored the double wingback formations after the school of Pop Warner.

Graduating from Tulane in 1922 after having captained the Green Wave the previous year, Reed had his first coaching assignment at his alma mater, coaching the freshman team in 1923-24. In 1925 he went to Loyola as freshman coach and produced an undefeated, unscored on team.

He was elevated to head varsity coach the following year, and his team won the ten games of a hard schedule, scoring 365 points to 20 for the opposition.

When Clark Shaughnessy was brought to Loyola the following year from Tulane, Reed remained as his assistant. He voluntarily retired from football in 1928 to practice law, and has been located in New Orleans since that time. He is a native of the Crescent City.

Mississippi College Five Defeats Millsaps, 30-23

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Mississippi college defeated its grudge rival, Millsaps here tonight 30 to 23, giving the teams an even break in the four-game series.

Reversing trends of previous tilts, the winners were ahead all the way, and held the Purple cagers scoreless for the first eight minutes of the game.

Louisiana State Eleven To Use Shift Next Fall

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—The shift, a phase of football which has not been used at L. S. U. since 1927, will be employed next fall by Bernie Moore, new Tiger football mentor. Virtually all of the first week of spring practice, now in progress, was taken up with the new shift, which is Moore's own creation, although it resembles the old Minnesota shift.

Moore's Bengals will open their 1935 schedule with the powerful Rice Owls and then take on the strong University of Texas eleven before journeying to New York City to meet Manhattan. Rice defeated Purdue last season, while Texas bested Notre Dame. Neither loses much in the way of graduation.

Mike Donohue, who made his "line-divide" play famous in the south, was the last L. S. U. coach to employ the shift.

RECORD TRIAL OF BLUEBIRD MAY BE DELAYED 10 DAYS

Beach Conditions Are Worse Since Campbell Began Efforts

By Edward J. Neil
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Gloom settled heavily on the shiny sands of Daytona Beach today, for conditions never appeared worse for Sir Malcolm Campbell's speed ventures, and the possibility loomed that ten days may pass before Bluebird can charge down on her own record of 272.108 miles an hour.

The beach was rougher than at any time since the impatient, restless Englishman came here two weeks ago with his entirely re-built blue streak, hoping this time to lift automobile speed to the breathless point of 300 miles an hour, five miles a minute.

Rain drummed down on the beach most of last night, the wind was from the west and south, and there were gullies and trenches all down the length of the implacable 11 1-2 mile racing stretch. The 50-year-old Briton, a nervous bundle naturally straining at the leash most of the time, was completely sunk.

"I've never seen it quite so bad," he said desparingly. "The beach is miserable, simply miserable. At this rate there's no telling when we can try for the record. I'm disconsolate."

He looked it. Several of the hours he spent with his mechanics in the garage, trying to find something to do for Bluebird, the handsome, seven-ton monster that needs only proper conditions to test the ultimate in speed design and construction. There was nothing to do. Bluebird glistened inside and out, her 2,500 horsepower plant roars hungrily for a beach to run on. The readjustments necessary after the initial test drive Thursday have all been made.

In the haze that hung over the beach today, Bill Cummings, 1934 Indianapolis speed race winner, attempted to break the Diesel motored record Dave Evans, another American racer, lifted to 125.065 yesterday. Campbell watched moodily, debating whether to test fate and make a last minute try for the second test he wants before trying for the record.

But Cummings had a bad time of it, and failed to complete his runs. On the south run his oil pressure failed, and coming back he bumped around a great deal and was forced to cut his motors as the car belched smoke and fire going into the measured mile. He failed to approach the record.

Veterans, watching his troubles shook their heads. All are predicting that unless conditions improved tremendously, Campbell won't approach his old mark, despite the undoubted speed and power in old lady Bluebird. The beach so far just won't allow it, no matter how much courage the Englishman showed gambling with nature and death.

JACK APOLOGIZES FOR INABILITY TO BETTER OLD MARK

The 500-yard race for the classic Buermeyer trophy developed a startling finale when the winner, Timothy Ring of Holy Cross, was disqualified for an alleged foul against Milton Sandler of the German American A. C. of New York during an early battle for the pole position.

The verdict thus went to J. R. Hofstetter of Dartmouth, who came up fast in the stretch to take second place, four yards behind Ring. Harry Hoffman of the New York curb exchange A. A. passed the fading Ivan Fuqua of Indiana in a short tussle for third place. Sandler wound up a poor last.

Ring's time was 59.2 seconds.

John W. (Bill) Follows, the young Washington (D. C.) newspaper man who wears the New York A. C. colors in competition, staged a come back to beat his club mate, Joe McCluskey, in the two-mile run while the favorite, Ray Sears of Butler, ran a poor third.

Follows broke the tape ten yards in front of McCluskey in the slow time of 9:18.6.

Cornelius Johnson, the lanky negro from Los Angeles, won the high jump by clearing 6 feet, 7 inches.

The veteran Hal Osborn of Philadelphia, Olympic champion eleven years ago and former record holder, gave a great come back performance in tying for second place with Al Threadgill, Temple university negro, at 6 feet 5 3-4 inches.

The chief surprise of the 60-yard dash was the elimination of Earl Widmyer, stocky University of Maryland star and conqueror a week ago of Ralph Metcalfe, the national champion, in the annual West Virginia meet. Widmyer was shut out when he ran third in the semi-finals to Ben Johnson, Columbia negro, and Ed Siegel of New York.

The final of the sprint feature developed another duel between a pair of dusky rivals with Eulace Peacock, Temple university's versatile athlete, outstepping Johnson to win by a half yard in 6.3 seconds. Ed Siegel, while running even with Johnson at Peacock's heels, pulled a muscle in his right leg and dropped out at the 50-yard mark.

Yale's great pole vaulter, Keith Brown, had his specialty all to himself but had to be satisfied with 13 feet 9 inches.

Percy Beard of the New York A. C., the favorite, captured the 60-yard high hurdles final by a yard from Charles Pessoni of Manhattan in spite of a bad start. He was clocked in 7.6 seconds.

Nov. 30—Ole Miss, place to be determined.

L. S. U. TEAMS TO BATTLE GREENIES

Cagers And Boxers Of Old Rivals To Tangle During The Week

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb.16—(Special)—Down in this section of the woods when a Tiger sees Green he sees red, And quite a few Tigers, L. S. U. Tigers, will see plenty of Green, Tulane Green next week-end.

The L. S. U. basketball team, which is making a determined bid for Southeastern conference honors will meet the Tulane Greenies here Friday and Saturday. On Wednesday night, the Tiger boxers will journey to New Orleans to swap rights and lefts with the Wave punchers.

An atmosphere somewhat similar to that which hovers over Bengalville on the eve of the Tulane-Tiger football game is present here as the athletes rest over the week-end.

The Tiger cagers, a senior team, will be seeking its 10th and 11th consecutive victories over the Greenie cagers. The two quintets have met twice this year, with the L. S. U. boys winning by comfortable margins.

Led by "Sparky" Wade and "Buddy" Blair, a pair of eagle-eyed sharpshooters, the Tigers rule heavy favorites to annex both games in their own lair, especially since their return to form against Mississippi State last week.

Interest in the boxing match between the old rivals is running high, and many fans from Baton Rouge are expected to go to New Orleans to see the bouts.

The fight that promises to be the feature will bring together Capt. William Robinson of L. S. U. and "Bucky" Bryan of Tulane in the junior middleweight class. Both fighters keep their left foot moving forward and sport kayo punches in either hand.

Another bout that should thrill the fans will come in the featherweight class when Earl Turner of L. S. U. clashes with Al Justrabo, 1933 Southeastern conference champion. The Tiger is a clever boxer and can hit with both mitts. In his only fight this year, Turner stopped the veteran Bob McMullen of Florida in the second round.

A full program of eight bouts, from bantam to heavyweight, is schedule.

Champion Flays Neusel In Birthday Statement From His Home

SAN LEANDRO, Calif., Feb. 16.—(AP)—With a huff and a puff that made the window panes rattle, Max Baer blew out 26 candles today on the birthday cake his mother baked for him. Then he ate half the cake.

The heavyweight boxing champion followed up his gastronomic feat by verbally taking Walter Neusel, the German fighter, to pieces.

"That German Neusel gets my goat," said Max as he joined in birthday festivities at his parents' home. "We make him an offer to fight four rounds in Chicago. He can make himself a nice piece of change for it. Do you know what he asks for? He wants a guarantee of $50,000. I am surprised he didn't ask for the privilege of moving into the mint with a scoopshovel.

"Neusel just 'demanded' himself out of some real money. In the meantime he will go along making a couple of thousand dollars at a crack. The trouble with these contenders, if any, is they talk a great fight.

"We can't be putting on title fights every week. The fans would get pretty well fed up on such a boxing diet. While we're building up a real championship fight I'd like to keep active. Four to ten round bouts every little while is my idea of keeping fit. Call them 'exhibitions' if you want to but any time the boys want to play rough, I'll be willing to join in the game."

Baer left for Sacramento, to spend several days on the ranch of his manager, Ancil Hoffman. He will leave February 22 for Chicago.

LIONS WIN FROM CLARKS, 52 TO 28

Ouachita High Five Has Little Trouble Taking 11th Straight

Ouachita parish high school's Lions won their eleventh straight basketball victory last night when they trounced the Clarks high school quintet, 58 to 26, at Northeast Center of L. S. U. gym.

The Clarks team put up a good scrap but was no match for the Ouachita squad. Coach Leo Hartman used his first string only a part of the first quarter and the third quarter. The second team performed for the Lions the rest of the game.

Truman Staples, regular guard, led the scoring for the Lions with seven goals and two free throws for 16 points. Sellana, Clarks forward, was best for the visitors with 10 points.

The Lions close out their regular schedule next week with games with Delhi and Bastrop on Monday and Tuesday nights. Both games will be played here. Ouachita will enter the Ruston rally Friday.

MAROONS SHADE TULANE QUINTET

Mississippi State Five Wins Basketball Thriller, 41 to 40

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The eagle eye of "Slim" Cassibry gave Mississippi State's Maroons a sensational 41 to 40 victory over the Tulane Greenies Saturday night in the Wave gymnasium, settling in the final 30 seconds of play a ding-dong battle that kept a small crowd of 400 hysterical for an hour and 15 minutes. The victory gave the visitors a clean sweep of the week-end basketball series, as Mississippi State won the opener Friday night, 53 to 31.

Baseball Trophy Won At Rally Found Here

Some high school baseball player has lost a trophy he won at the Ruston rally last year, but if he will call T. O. Dent, at the Missouri Pacific, and identify it, he can get it back. Mr. Dent reported yesterday that he had found a miniature baseball with an inscription that it was won at the north Louisiana rally at Louisiana Tech in 1934.

Mr. Dent said yesterday that he would turn it over to the owner if said owner would call him at phone 2400, station 20.

CUP HOPES REST ON FRENCH YOUTH

Francois Destremeau Is Said To Be Most Promising Player

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—France's future in the International Davis cup tennis competition is riding on the broad shoulders of a tall blond 17-year-old player, Francois Destremeau.

That's the opinion expressed today by Mme. Sylvania Henrotin, France's second ranking woman star. She is here to challenge for the women's national indoor championship which opens Monday in the Park Avenue Seventh regiment drill shed.

"Destremeau is our most promising young player," said Mme. Herotin. "His physical build is well-suited for tennis; he is tall, fairly slender and has broad shoulders. He has fine style but so far has not acquired a great deal of speed, although that should take care of itself as he grows older and stronger."

France's immediate chances of recapturing the International trophy are not bright, Mme. Henrotin admitted without hesitation. There's a possibility that the tri color's team may comprise only two players—Andre Merlin and left-handed Christian Boussus.

Merlin is considered France's outstanding singles player with Boussus only a step behind. Last fall Merlin was injured while riding a motorcycle and was on the shelf until a few weeks ago when he made an unsuccessful return to the courts in the French indoor championship. He was eliminated in the second round by an outsider.

"But don't take Merlin's defeat too seriously," said Mme. Henrotin. "After all he was several months in recovering from the accident and then he hadn't played much before the tournament. He's an excellent player—our best, I would say—and it shouldn't take long for him to regain his form."

ZIMMERMAN LEADS IN PHOENIX OPEN GOLF

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore., professional, continued his consistent play in the second round of the Phoenix $2,500 open today, scoring 71 and taking the lead with a total of 141, one under par for the 36 holes.

Mortie Dutra, Chandler, Ariz., and Ky Laffoon, Chicago, who topped the opening day's play with 69 each, fell back into a tie for second place at 142.

Craig Wood, Deal, N. J., added a 72 to his first day's total of 71 to gain third place with 143. Three ended in a dead-lock for fourth position with 144. They were Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee; Byron Nelson, Texarkana, Texas, and Harry Cooper, Chicago.

Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., and Walter Hagen, Detroit, found themselves back in the midst of a big group clustered around the 146 score. Hagen matched his 73 of yesterday and Smith took a 74.

TECHMEN SCORE SECOND VICTORY OVER UNION FIVE

Bulldogs Take Early Lead And Trim Tennesseeans, 36 to 27

RUSTON, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Louisiana Tech's basketball team made a clean sweep of their two-game series with Union university of Jackson, Tenn., by defeating the visitors, 36 to 27, here tonight. It was the final home game of the season for the Bulldog cagers.

Both teams were slow in warming up at the start of the game but Tech's sharpshooters soon found the range and the local quintet got off to an early lead. The first half was close, however, with Union threatening through the entire 20-minute period.

Union led only once, and that was after 10 minutes of going in the first half when the visitors enjoyed a brief 7-6 advantage. Tech forged ahead immediately, only to be tied at 12-12 with three minutes remaining before the rest period. The Bulldogs were equal to the occasion, however, and as the gun ended the first half, Tech was leading, 17 to 14.

The Bulldogs continued to pull away during the second half and with the entire team functioning smoothly, Tech wound up its home stand with another impressive conference victory.

Homer Coody, the sophomore forward, was outstanding for the Bulldogs. Coody piled up six field goals and three free throws to take individual scoring honors with 15 points. The soph star shot baskets from every angle. He also played an excellent floor game. Waters and Barham played well defensively and Mitchell and Brooks turned in a good floor game.

Vandiver was the star of the Union quintet, making 12 points and playing well on the floor. Graham's defensive work was best for the visitors.

In a preliminary game, the Tech freshmen shaded the Louisiana Normal Imps, 47 to 41, with Smith outstanding for the Bullpups. The frosh star made 25 points. Miller also played well for the locals. Williams and Loftin, of Normal, were runners-up for scoring honors with 11 points each.

Tech takes the road Monday for three games. The Bulldogs meet Southwestern of Louisiana at Lafayette Monday night and then move on to New Orleans for a two-game series with the Loyola Wolves on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Those two games wind up the Bulldogs' cage activities for the year unless they get an invitation to compete in the annual S. I. A. A. tournament at Jackson.

METHODIST YOUNG PEOPLE TO MEET

Christian Culture Institute Will Be Held This Week-End

Young people of Methodist churches of the Monroe district will attend a Christian culture institute at the Monroe First Methodist church next Friday, Saturday and Sunday. About 100 representatives from churches outside of Monroe are expected to attend the institute, which will be the first of its type ever held here, it was reported.

Young people between the ages of 15 and 24 will be eligible to attend the institute.

Registration will begin Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. A "George Washington banquet" will be given in the church annex at 6 p. m.

Four classes will be conducted by the institute. The subjects to be taught and the instructors will be: "Worship," Rev. H. L. Johns, presiding elder; "Missions and World Friendship," Rev. D. B. Boddie, of Lake Providence; "Recreation and Personal Development," Rev. V. G. Morris, of Columbia; "Departmental Leadership," Rev. Jack Midyett, of Pioneer.

Miss Mildred Dennis, district director, will serve as dean of the institute, Jack Rodgers, of Shreveport, will be in charge of recreation. The conference president, Lydel Sims, will conduct the devotional periods.

A fellowship lunch will be served in the annex Saturday at noon, and at 5:30 p. m. a weiner roast sponsored by young people of the Gordon Avenue Methodist church will be held at Bernstein park.

Sunday morning, a communion service will be held at the First Methodist church, at 9:20 o'clock. A special church school program will be presented at 9:45 a. m., and at 11 a. m. Rev. W. C. Scott, pastor of the church, will deliver a special sermon and certificates of credit will be awarded those who attended the institute.

The visiting young people will be guests in homes of the city while attending the institute.

Medic Says Urge To Better Human Race Here To Stay

Twenty-seven states have laws dealing with human sterilization, and legislatures in other states are considering the subject. A law providing for the sterilization of the mentally deficient, the habitual criminal and the incurables now is pending before the Alabama state legislature, with endorsement of Dr. J. N. Baker, state health officer. Dr. Baker, who has made an extensive study of the subject and is regarded as an authority, has written his views for the Associated Press in the following article.

By J. N. Baker, M. D.
(State Health Officer of Alabama)
(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 16.—All legislation seeking to deal with eugenics and sterilization should rest upon a scientific bedrock of biology and medicine.

The basic thought embodied in all eugenic principles is not new; it is that the breed of man, like the breed of animals or of plants, may be improved by conscious selective processes.

Early Chinese literature carries this thought, and the preachments of the Greek philosopher, Plato, on this topic are well known. The mass of experimental work done in the realm of pure biology by such lucid thinkers as Darwin, Mendel and others, coupled with the marked strides made by modern scientific medicine, afford surer ground upon which legislators may build.

Beyond all doubt, the urge to consciously and deliberately improve the human stock, at least through a negative approach by elimination of the heritable unfit is here to stay and constitutes one of the major sociologic and economic problems of this and future generations.

Already some twenty-seven states of the union have some sort of laws dealing with human sterilization, and the probabilities are that this number will be pronouncedly increased during the present year because almost all state legislatures will hold sessions at some time during 1935.

In sterilization activities and interests, California tops the list with 8,504 operations performed to January, 1933. The entire civilized world is watching the bold experiment in mass sterilization recently launched by Germany. It is estimated that some 400,000 of the population will come within the scope of this law, the larger portion of whom fall into that group classed as inborn feeble-mindedness.

It should ever be borne in mind that none of the procedures advocated or employed to render human beings unfruitful or sterile, interfere in the least with the normal sex life of the individual. The estimated cost to the German government per operation for the male is twenty marks ($7.60) and for the female fifty marks ($19.00); the cost of sterilization of 400,000 human beings, therefore is estimated at some 14,000,000 marks ($5,320,000), as contrasted with the present stupendous annual cost of the hereditary sick of three hundred and fifty million marks ($133,000,000).

It is estimated that, after several decades, hundreds of millions of marks will be saved each year as a result of the diminution of expenditures for patients with hereditary diseases.

The enormity of this problem for each and every state in the union is attested by the steady and disquieting increases in all types of mental disease. Experts in this field conservatively compute that some four per cent of our entire population will, at some period in their lives, require institutional care for some form of mental disease.

In the practical application of any legislation evolved, if it is to incorporate sound biologic and medical principles and to prove ultimately successful, free use must be made of the storehouse of information and of the trained personnel of the medical profession to which must be delegated the final word both in execution and decision of each and every case.

MINDEN GIRL IS CONTEST WINNER

Myrtle Braswell Picked By Shirley Temple As Tech's Prettiest

RUSTON, La., Feb. 15.—(Special)—Myrtle Braswell of Minden, a senior at Louisiana Tech, has been accorded first place in the annual Tech beauty contest.

Shirley Temple, juvenile Fox film star of Hollywood, Calif., was the final judge in the contest, making a selection of the six prettiest of 18 pictures of Tech girls sent to her. The college students elected the 18 candidates.

In addition to Miss Braswell, the other five winners were ranked by the child actress as follows:

Lillian Wise, El Dorado, Ark.; Hortense Callahan, Ruston; Sadie Hower, Winnsboro; Irene Goyne, Ruston, and Mary Lou Porter, Gilbert.

Three of the girls chosen by Miss Temple are second-time winners of Tech beauty contests. In 1933, Miss Braswell was one of the beauty contest winners elected by vote of the students. Last year, Miss Wise and Miss Callahan were among the six most beautiful Tech girls selected from photographs by Mae West, film star.

The six winners of the 1935 contest, as well as the other 12 candidates, will be shown on the screen at a local theater on February 28 and March 1. The short film also will be offered to any other theater that wishes to show the pictures.

Plans are being made for the nine-week summer session at Louisiana Tech, which will begin on June 3 and end on August 3. Department heads are preparing material announcing courses for publication in the summer school bulletin.

In the nine-week term, students may enroll for a maximum of nine semester hours, equivalent of half a semester's credit.

INDUSTRIAL--REVIEW OF THE TWIN CITIES

TEST OF BRAKES INSURES SAFETY

Boyce - Kendall Garage Has Equipment To Do Job Right

Considering the hazards one faces while driving a car with faulty brakes, it does seem strange that traffic officers of the city are obliged from time to time to ask motorists to have their brakes tested and conditioned. Car owners are reminded that especially in this season of the year they should have their brakes tested and adjusted.

The Boyce-Kendall garage, conveniently located on North Third street between DeSiard and Illinois Central railroad wishes to remind the motoring public of Monroe that their plant is ideally equipped for this service which is a specialty.

"Ever since we have been in business the Boyce-Kendall garage has made a specialty of servicing brakes of all kinds," it was stated. "We have mechanics who are recognized throughout the city for their ability as brake specialists and they have at hand every kind of equipment and facility with which to work. We use the very best brake lining obtainable when relining brakes is necessary.

The Boyce-Kendall garage would also remind motorists of this section that there is at the garage the very latest and most complete wheel aligning axle and frame-straightening system which is used to make a check of steering conditions, the alignment of an axle and frame. If this check reveals that there is any fault in the steering, axle or frame, the trouble might be corrected at a nominal cost and in minimum time without the use of heat or removing any parts from the car.

Every kind of service required on your car is done in a most efficient manner at this progressive plant. Motorists are invited to drive into the Boyce-Kendall garage for any kind of service or repairs. For wrecker or road service, or for further information, telephone the Boyce-Kendall garage, phone number 247.

U. S. TIRE FIRM HAS BIG HOLDINGS

Control Of Raw Materials Enables Company To Build Fine Tire

Complete control of raw materials and of their processing through to the finished product is necessary to perfection in tire building, according to Benoit-Nash Motor company, Inc., local U. S. tire dealer.

"The U. S. Rubber company is advantageously situated in respect to control of materials and manufacturing processes, Mr Harvey Benoit said. For example, the company owns the world's largest rubber plantations. It was the first company to develop its own plantations, and last year it produced more than three times as much rubber as all other American rubber companies combined.

"In three towns in the cotton section of this country—Hogansville, Georgia, Winnsboro, South Carolina, and Shelbyville, Tennessee,—the company operates its own cotton mills for the fabrication of its own high standard tire cord and material.

"At Naugatuck, Connecticut, the company owns and operates expansive chemical laboratories, where rubber chemicals are produced to its own exacting specifications in large quantities for its own use. At Passaic, N. J., the company maintains one of the world's greatest rubber research laboratories. It was here that tempered rubber was evolved.

"In Detroit, Indianapolis, Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and Los Angeles the company owns and operates the most modern manufacturing plants in which every process to the finished product is made in accordance with standards of the greatest efficiency.

"Because the company has complete control of its product from the rawest to finished form, it can build a tire that closely approaches perfection. Beyond all question, the 1935 U. S. Royal built of triple tempered rubber is the company's supreme accomplishment in tire construction."

DODGE REPORTS SALES INCREAS[E]

New Line Proves Immensely Popular, January Sales Reveal

The latest of the weekly sales statements, regularly issued by the office of A. vanDerZee, general sales manager of Dodge Brothers corporation, continues to show the company's selling forces well in the forefront of the accelerated buying movement that is animating the public, especially since the introduction of the 1935 models, according to the Monroe Automobile Supply company, local Dodge dealer.

Retail sales by Dodge dealers during the week ending February 2, were 4,473 Dodge and Plymouth passenger cars and 883 Dodge commercial cars and trucks—or a total of 5,356 passenger cars and trucks, as against 4,389 vehicles delivered during the corresponding period of 1934—the increase being 22 per cent.

Deliveries made by Dodge dealers in the first five report weeks of the new year, that is from January 1 to February 2, totaled 22,120 passenger cars and trucks as against 10,390 deliveries made in the like period of 1934—an increase of 112.9 per cent.

Retail deliveries so far reported by Dodge dealers for the 31 days of January reached the highest January mark in the 21-year history of the company, namely 16,350 passenger cars and 3,404 commercial cars and trucks—or a total of 19,754 vehicles.

"With dealer deliveries increasing and shipments being speeded up, our backlog of orders—which we recently reported as amounting to approximately 25 million dollars—is but little reduced, the reduction being due to shipment increases rather than to lessened demand on the part of the dealers," explains vanDerZee. "While the gains in our dealers' business are partly due to the attractions of the new models and partly to other causes, such as the need for the replacement of worn-out personal transportation, we also observe a significant change in the buying customs of the public which is abandoning views that formerly deterred many motorists from purchasing new cars during the winter months."

IMPROVEMENT REPORTED

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Not only were more people at work at better pay during the first 11 months of 1934 than the previous year, but, despite the rise in prices, their purchasing power was 7 per cent higher, the national industrial conference board reports.

Research conducted at two large American colleges tends to prove that turtles and frogs are deaf to human speech.

BETTER SERVICE AT PILCHER SHOP

Expert Barber Work Gives You That Well-Groomed Appearance

A well-groomed appearance is an asset valued highly by most successful men. And being well groomed doesn't necessarily mean being dressed in the height of fashion.

Expert barber work goes a long way in assuring correct personal appearance. And there's no place in Monroe where more satisfactory work is turned out than at Pilcher's Barber shop, located on DeSiard street, just across the street from the Paramount theater.

A fresh shave and a haircut work wonders in a man's appearance and the barbers at Pilcher's shop are craftsmen who are thoroughly experienced. Pilcher's, of course, offers complete barber work, including expert manicuring.

The latest products, including well known shampoos, hair tonics and facial preparations, are available at the Pilcher Barber shop at reasonable prices.

You'll find that there's no long wait when you go to Pilcher's for your barber work. There are plenty of barbers to serve you and if it is necessary to wait a few moments for service, you will find plenty of comfortable chairs for your convenience.

Pilcher's Barber shop has many satisfied customers. If you haven't already formed the habit of patronizing this modern shop, drop in this week and enjoy the satisfaction of receiving expert attention.

Nash And LaFayette Ship Many New Cars In January

KENOSHA, Wis., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Factory shipments of Nash and LaFayette cars during January were the largest of any January since 1929. C. H. Bliss, vice president and director of sales of the Nash Motors Co., points to a large bank of unfilled orders on hand at the Racine and Kenosha factories as of February 1, as an indication of the retail activities on the Nash and LaFayette lines.

Production schedules for both the Racine and Kenosha plants, Mr. Bliss announces, will be considerably higher than they were during February 1934.

METHODIST YOUNG PEOPLE TO MEET

Christian Culture Institute Will Be Held This Week-End

Young people of Methodist churches of the Monroe district will attend a Christian culture institute at the Monroe First Methodist church next Friday, Saturday and Sunday. About 100 representatives from churches outside of Monroe are expected to attend the institute, which will be the first of its type ever held here, it was reported.

Young people between the ages of 15 and 24 will be eligible to attend the institute.

Registration will begin Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. A "George Washington banquet" will be given in the church annex at 6 p. m.

Four classes will be conducted by the institute. The subjects to be taught and the instructors will be: "Worship," Rev. H. L. Johns, presiding elder; "Missions and World Friendship," Rev. D. B. Boddie, of Lake Providence; "Recreation and Personal Development," Rev. V. G. Morris, of Columbia; "Departmental Leadership," Rev. Jack Midyett, of Pioneer.

Miss Mildred Dennis, district director, will serve as dean of the institute, Jack Rodgers, of Shreveport, will be in charge of recreation. The conference president, Lydel Sims, will conduct the devotional periods.

A fellowship lunch will be served in the annex Saturday at noon, and at 5:30 p. m. a weiner roast sponsored by young people of the Gordon Avenue Methodist church will be held at Bernstein park.

Sunday morning, a communion service will be held at the First Methodist church, at 9:20 o'clock. A special church school program will be presented at 9:45 a. m., and at 11 a. m. Rev. W. C. Scott, pastor of the church, will deliver a special sermon and certificates of credit will be awarded those who attended the institute.

The visiting young people will be guests in homes of the city while attending the institute.

Ruffed grouse, all but extinct in the North Carolina, mountains a few years ago, have become plentiful there as a consequence of that state's rigid laws for their protection.

Medic Says Urge To Better Human Race Here To Stay

Twenty-seven states have laws dealing with human sterilization, and legislatures in other states are considering the subject. A law providing for the sterilization of the mentally deficient, the habitual criminal and the incurables now is pending before the Alabama state legislature, with endorsement of Dr. J. N. Baker, state health officer. Dr. Baker, who has made an extensive study of the subject and is regarded as an authority, has written his views for the Associated Press in the following article.

By J. N. Baker, M. D.
(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 16.—All legislation seeking to deal with eugenics and sterilization should rest upon a scientific bedrock of biology and medicine.

The basic thought embodied in all eugenic principles is not new; it is that the breed of man, like the breed of animals or of plants, may be improved by conscious selective processes.

Early Chinese literature carries this thought, and the preachments of the Greek philosopher, Plato, on this topic are well known. The mass of experimental work done in the realm of pure biology by such lucid thinkers as Darwin, Mendel and others, coupled with the marked strides made by modern scientific medicine, afford surer ground upon which legislators may build.

Beyond all doubt, the urge to consciously and deliberately improve the human stock, at least through a negative approach by elimination of the heritable unfit is here to stay and constitutes one of the major sociologic and economic problems of this and future generations.

Already some twenty-seven states of the union have some sort of laws dealing with human sterilization, and the probabilities are that this number will be pronouncedly increased during the present year because almost all state legislatures will hold sessions at some time during 1935.

In sterilization activities and interests, California tops the list with 8,504 operations performed to January, 1933. The entire civilized world is watching the bold experiment in mass sterilization recently launched by Germany. It is estimated that some 400,000 of the population will come within the scope of this law, the larger portion of whom fall into that group classed as inborn feeble-mindedness.

It should ever be borne in mind that none of the procedures advocated or employed to render human beings unfruitful or sterile, interfere in the least with the normal sex life of the individual. The estimated cost to the German government per operation for the male is twenty marks ($7.60) and for the female fifty marks ($19.00); the cost of sterilization of 400,000 human beings, therefore is estimated at some 14,000,000 marks ($5,320,000), as contrasted with the present stupendous annual cost of the hereditary sick of three hundred and fifty million marks ($133,000,000).

It is estimated that, after several decades, hundreds of millions of marks will be saved each year as a result of the diminution of expenditures for patients with hereditary diseases.

The enormity of this problem for each and every state in the union is attested by the steady and disquieting increases in all types of mental disease. Experts in this field conservatively compute that some four per cent of our entire population will, at some period in their lives, require institutional care for some form of mental disease.

In the practical application of any legislation evolved, if it is to incorporate sound biologic and medical principles and to prove ultimately successful, free use must be made of the storehouse of information and of the trained personnel of the medical profession to which must be delegated the final word both in execution and decision of each and every case.

MINDEN GIRL IS CONTEST WINNER

Myrtle Braswell Picked By Shirley Temple As Tech's Prettiest

RUSTON, La., Feb. 15.—(Special)—Myrtle Braswell of Minden, a senior at Louisiana Tech, has been accorded first place in the annual Tech beauty contest.

Shirley Temple, juvenile Fox film star of Hollywood, Calif., was the final judge in the contest, making a selection of the six prettiest of 18 pictures of Tech girls sent to her. The college students elected the 18 candidates.

In addition to Miss Braswell, the other five winners were ranked by the child actress as follows:

Lillian Wise, El Dorado, Ark.; Hortense Callahan, Ruston; Sadie Hower, Winnsboro; Irene Goyne, Ruston, and Mary Lou Porter, Gilbert.

Three of the girls chosen by Miss Temple are second-time winners of Tech beauty contests. In 1933, Miss Braswell was one of the beauty contest winners elected by vote of the students. Last year, Miss Wise and Miss Callahan were among the six most beautiful Tech girls selected from photographs by Mae West, film star.

The six winners of the 1935 contest, as well as the other 12 candidates, will be shown on the screen at a local theater on February 28 and March 1. The short film also will be offered to any other theater that wishes to show the pictures.

Plans are being made for the nine-week summer session at Louisiana Tech, which will begin on June 3 and end on August 3. Department heads are preparing material announcing courses for publication in the summer school bulletin.

In the nine-week term, students may enroll for a maximum of nine semester hours, equivalent of half a semester's credit.

New Line Proves Immensely Popular, January Sales Reveal

The latest of the weekly sales statements, regularly issued by the office of A. vanDerZee, general sales manager of Dodge Brothers corporation, continues to show the company's selling forces well in the forefront of the accelerated buying movement that is animating the public, especially since the introduction of the 1935 models, according to the Monroe Automobile Supply company, local Dodge dealer.

Retail sales by Dodge dealers during the week ending February 2, were 4,473 Dodge and Plymouth passenger cars and 883 Dodge commercial cars and trucks—or a total of 5,356 passenger cars and trucks, as against 4,389 vehicles delivered during the corresponding period of 1934—the increase being 22 per cent.

Deliveries made by Dodge dealers in the first five report weeks of the new year, that is from January 1 to February 2, totaled 22,120 passenger cars and trucks as against 10,390 deliveries made in the like period of 1934—an increase of 112.9 per cent.

Retail deliveries so far reported by Dodge dealers for the 31 days of January reached the highest January mark in the 21-year history of the company, namely 16,350 passenger cars and 3,404 commercial cars and trucks—or a total of 19,754 vehicles.

"With dealer deliveries increasing and shipments being speeded up, our backlog of orders—which we recently reported as amounting to approximately 25 million dollars—is but little reduced, the reduction being due to shipment increases rather than to lessened demand on the part of the dealers," explains vanDerZee. Nash And LaFayette Ship Many New Cars In January

KENOSHA, Wis., Feb. 16.—(Special)—Factory shipments of Nash and LaFayette cars during January were the largest of any January since 1929. C. H. Bliss, vice president and director of sales of the Nash Motors Co., points to a large bank of unfilled orders on hand at the Racine and Kenosha factories as of February 1, as an indication of the retail activities on the Nash and LaFayette lines.

Production schedules for both the Racine and Kenosha plants, Mr. Bliss announces, will be considerably higher than they were during February 1934.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The cotton market was very quiet in today's short week-end session. Fluctuations in prices were confined to 2 to 3 points. Traders were still hesitant waiting on developments from Washington, particularly the decision in the gold case.

The market opened steady and unchanged to 1 point up and continued to fluctuate within 1 to 2 points during most of the session, becoming a little more active at the end and gaining slightly with March at 12.43, May at 12.51 and July at 12.55, or 2 to 3 points above the early lows.

The close was steady at the top with prices showing net unchanged to 1 point up for the day.

Exports for the day were 14,929.

Cotton futures closed steady net unchanged to 1 point up.

New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Trading in cotton was dull today with most of the business limited to evening up of traders' books. Prices held within a range of 2 or 3 points.

The narrowness of fluctuations was typified by the May contracts which opened and closed at 12.48 and varied no more than a point during the session. The market closed steady net unchanged to 2 points lower.

Cotton futures closed steady, unchanged to 2 lower.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The stock market resumed its waiting attitude today, most traders apparently having concluded that the mild upturn of the previous session was a little premature. A few scattered specialties advanced, but others were equally soft. The leaders were narrow. The close was irregular. Transfers approximated 350,000 shares.

News of importance to the markets, generally, was scarce. Business and industrial developments were without any especial significance. The gold clause controversy continued as a restrictive speculative factor. Few cared to rush into the market arena pending the supreme court's pronouncement.

Commodities were moderately mixed. Grains showed a disposition to edge forward, but cotton was unable to get anywhere in particular. Rubber futures sagged while sugar and hide contracts were inclined to firmness. No pronounced trend was exhibited by bonds. Foreign exchanges moved cautiously.

Sugar shares reflected advancing prices in the staple. South Porto Rico, American Sugar Refining and Cuban-American Sugar preferred were up 1 to around 2 points. Crosley Radio pushed up about a point in relatively active dealings. On the other hand National Department Stores preferred dropped some 5 points following yesterday's announcemnet that reorganization plans had been presented to the federal court in New Jersey for approval.

Homestake Mining lost 8 points and others, down fractionally to around a point, included U. S. Smelting, Cerro De Pasco, American Smelting, National Department Stores common, White Motor, American Water Works, United Corp. preferred, American Telephone, U. S. Steel, Continental Can and Liggett & Myers "B." Such issues as Du Pont, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, National Distillers, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Western Union, Consolidated Gas, Chrysler, General Motors, American Can, General Electric, Case, Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck were unchanged to a shade higher or lower.

Those who interpreted the action of the mining stocks in the previous session as indicating that inflation is still a live subject with the administration, were a little disappointed that the metal group failed to follow through in today's proceedings.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The cotton market was very quiet in today's short week-end session. Fluctuations in prices were confined to 2 to 3 points. Traders were still hesitant waiting on developments from Washington, particularly the decision in the gold case.

The market opened steady and unchanged to 1 point up and continued to fluctuate within 1 to 2 points during most of the session, becoming a little more active at the end and gaining slightly with March at 12.43, May at 12.51 and July at 12.55, or 2 to 3 points above the early lows.

The close was steady at the top with prices showing net unchanged to 1 point up for the day.

Exports for the day were 14,929.

Cotton futures closed steady net unchanged to 1 point up.

New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Trading in cotton was dull today with most of the business limited to evening up of traders' books. Prices held within a range of 2 or 3 points.

The narrowness of fluctuations was typified by the May contracts which opened and closed at 12.48 and varied no more than a point during the session. The market closed steady net unchanged to 2 points lower.

Cotton futures closed steady, unchanged to 2 lower.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The stock market resumed its waiting attitude today, most traders apparently having concluded that the mild upturn of the previous session was a little premature. A few scattered specialties advanced, but others were equally soft. The leaders were narrow. The close was irregular. Transfers approximated 350,000 shares.

News of importance to the markets, generally, was scarce. Business and industrial developments were without any especial significance. The gold clause controversy continued as a restrictive speculative factor. Few cared to rush into the market arena pending the supreme court's pronouncement.

Commodities were moderately mixed. Grains showed a disposition to edge forward, but cotton was unable to get anywhere in particular. Rubber futures sagged while sugar and hide contracts were inclined to firmness. No pronounced trend was exhibited by bonds. Foreign exchanges moved cautiously.

Sugar shares reflected advancing prices in the staple. South Porto Rico, American Sugar Refining and Cuban-American Sugar preferred were up 1 to around 2 points. Crosley Radio pushed up about a point in relatively active dealings. On the other hand National Department Stores preferred dropped some 5 points following yesterday's announcemnet that reorganization plans had been presented to the federal court in New Jersey for approval.

Homestake Mining lost 8 points and others, down fractionally to around a point, included U. S. Smelting, Cerro De Pasco, American Smelting, National Department Stores common, White Motor, American Water Works, United Corp. preferred, American Telephone, U. S. Steel, Continental Can and Liggett & Myers "B." Such issues as Du Pont, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, National Distillers, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Western Union, Consolidated Gas, Chrysler, General Motors, American Can, General Electric, Case, Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck were unchanged to a shade higher or lower.

Those who interpreted the action of the mining stocks in the previous session as indicating that inflation is still a live subject with the administration, were a little disappointed that the metal group failed to follow through in today's proceedings.

COPS HAD TO BE CLEAN

NORFOLK, Va.—(AP)—Strict regulations that required Norfolk policemen of a past generation to bathe regularly and refrain from carrying umbrellas are recalled by a departmental handbook issued in 1889 and unearthed recently.

Water will dissolve more substances than any other liquid.

ISSUE PUBLISHED OF 'PINE CONES'

High Standard Of Excellence Carried Out In Tech Publication

RUSTON, La., Feb. 16.—(Special)—"Pines Cones," the student magazine of Louisiana Tech, has just published its winter number. The literary content of the production compares favorably with the standards of excellence which have become a characteristic of "Pine Cones." An attractive cover design and the black and white illustrations which enhance its pages are the work of Tech's art department.

"Pine Cones," is sponsored by the English department, but students from any other department of Tech may submit manuscripts In the current issue is a poem by little Beth Talbot, a pupil in the second grade of the model school, and bears a quality that is quite as good as many of the efforts of the college students.

Outstanding among the poems are "Old Eben's Godly-Fashioned Daughter," by Ellis Palmer, the editor of "Tech Talk," and "Jade Song," by Wallace Kendall.

Two Monroe students are contributors. James Hollingsworth, freshman, wrote "An Old House of the South,,' a description of an old plantation home in a setting of elms and a green velvet lawn. "Bruce" Williamson, a senior, makes four contributions of meritorious quality. One is "Johnny to Georgie," written as a sophisticated modern Keats might write to his brother. "The Green Alligator" tells the defeat of a theory when confronted with a practical problem in child phychology. "The Doll" is a story of a Christmas tragedy and "Moon Rose" is a bit of romantic verse.

The work of 28 students is represented in the number, which in typography and arrangement is exceedingly well done, except that several unfortunate typographical errors mar what is otherwise an excellent piece of work. "Pine Cones" provides a medium of expression for all students interested in any form of writing, and serves as an illuminating index to the mind and thought of the student body.

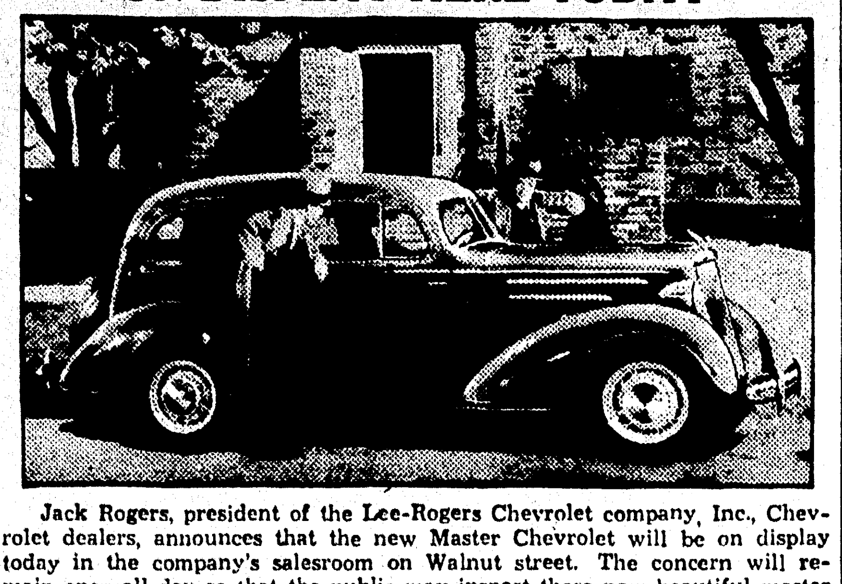
UNDERGOES OPERATION

Alice Marie Buckalew, nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Buckalew, underwent an operation for tonsilitis yesterday at the Vaughan-Wright-Bendel clinic.

ON DISPLAY HERE TODAY



Jack Rogers, president of the Lee-Rogers Chevrolet company, Inc., Chevrolet dealers, announces that the new Master Chevrolet will be on display today in the company's salesroom on Walnut street. The concern will remain open all day so that the public may inspect these new beautiful master deluxe models. Comprising two new lines, and covering the entire low-priced field, the new Chevrolets represent even greater values than last year's sensationally successful models, Mr. Rogers said. The Master series, with graceful new body lines, improved performance, and knee-action riding ease, is said to set beauty standards heretofore unapproached except by much costlier cars, while the Special series, combining performance and economy with extremely low price, is expected to extend Chevrolet's conquest of the moderate-salaried market still further, furnishing big car quality at a minimum investment. The public is invited to visit the salesroom and inspect the new models today.

SOCIAL COUNCIL LUNCHEON HELD

Program Given Under Direction Of Local Chamber Of Commerce

A program under the direction of the Chamber of Commerce of Monroe and West Monroe was presented at the luncheon meeting Saturday of the Council of Social Agencies at the Presbyterian church.

After being introduced by S. H. McClary, secretary of the chamber of commerce, A. V. Miller, immediate past president of the organization, gave a talk in which he stressed the value of training in social service and spoke of the important part the Council of Social Agencies has played in this service.

Mr. Miller also paid tribute to the work of the chamber of commerce, stating its members were men of high standing and that they represented a substantial proportion of industry in the community.

Another social agency commended by Mr. Miller was the FERA, which he said was well organized and rendering a service the value of which could not be estimated.

The Council of Social Agencies acts as a sort of clearing house for all social organizations of the Twin Cities and Ouachita parish and about 25 of these organizations are represented in its membership. They are thus able to coordinate their work by the fact that they are acquainted with the work the other organizations are doing.

Decision was made at the meeting Saturday to change the regular meeting date from the third Saturday in each month to the third Friday.

Dr. Freden Addresses Monroe Underwriters

Dr. Gustav Freden of Ruston was the guest speaker of the Monroe Life Underwriters' association at its first regular meeting of the year Friday night, in the banquet room at Hotel Monroe. Louis Hullum, president, presided.

Speaking on the subject of "Mental Hygiene," Dr. Freden stressed the importance of psychology in the field of endeavor followed by members of the organization.

A steak dinner was enjoyed by members and guests immediately prior to Dr. Freden's talk. Following the talk, reports were given by the secretary and committee assignments were made. The date for the next regular meeting was fixed for March 1.

State Bar Association To Meet At Alexandria

The annual meeting of the Louisiana State Bar association will be held at Alexandria on April 26 and 27, according to announcement received here Saturday from W. W. Young, secretary.

Announcement was also made that Scott M. Loftin, president of the American Bar association, has accepted the invitation of the Louisiana bar to address the convention at Alexandria. Mr. Loftin will speak on April 27.

Committees are being appointed to take charge of the convention and an attractive program is being prepared.

Noted Violinist Will Appear At Church In West Monroe Tonight

Lui Ring, noted violinist, artist, tenor, writer and scientific investigator, who accompanied the late President Wilson on his league of nations tour, will appear at the First Methodist church of West Monroe tonight at 7:30 o'clock in an evening of music and readings.

Mr. Ring, who for twelve years was with the Red Path Chautauqua, will use in his violin selections a world famous instrument, the "Alard." The "Alard" belongs to the Webb collection of London and is classed among the twelve finest violins in the world.

An interesting feature of the program will be a demonstration of "spirit writing" and "spirit materialization" as practiced by spiritualistic seances. Mr. Ring collaborated with the late Harry Houdini in exposing many of these "psychic" frauds and the demonstration tonight will be in the form of an intensely interesting expose. There will be no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

Mr. Ring appeared in short programs at several of Monroe and West Monroe's schools during the past week and next week is scheduled to appear at several other schools throughout north Louisiana.

During the height of his career Mr. Ring was with Billy Sunday two seasons and connected with the late Williams Jennings Bryan for three years.

Negro Man Beats Woman And Is Stabbed By Girl

Breaking into the residence of Lula Morehead, negro woman, Saturday morning before 7 o'clock, Willie Johnson, negro, beat the woman and was himself stabbed in the back with an ice pick wielded by her daughter, police reports revealed. Officer L. G. Parker, who arrested the negro, reported Johnson resisted arrest.

The negro was booked with the charges of breaking and entering and drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Gabe Johnson and Murphy Taylor, negroes, were arrested by Officers Parker and D. J. Bedsole and were being held for federal authorities. Johnson was held for possession of a half-gallon of untaxed liquor and Taylor was held for investigation.

Dr. J. Q. Graves Attends Chicago Medical Meeting

Dr. J. Q. Graves, Monroe physician, is in Chicago where he is attending a meeting of the house of delegates of the American Medical association.

The house of delegates was called in special session Friday to discuss pending legislation by congress concerning the national program of the medical association. The meeting was continued yesterday.

Dr. Graves went to the meeting as a delegate from the state medical society.

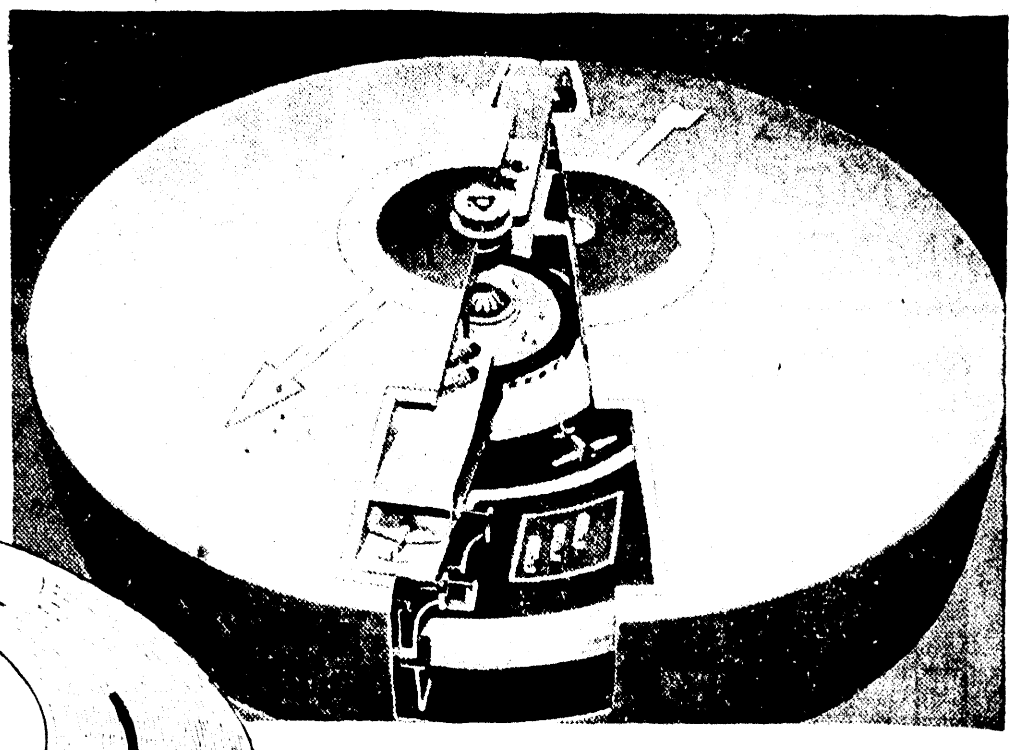
A Spiral Airport to Solve the City's Biggest Airplane Problem

Dr. William Whitney Christmas, Famous Scientist and Airplane Designer, Pictured With a Scaled Model of His New Underground Airport, Which, It Is Claimed, May Revolutionize Air Transportation.



Closeup of the Scaled Model of Dr. Christmas' New Underground Terminal, Showing Inclined Landing Field and Ramps Leading to the Lower Levels. Scientists Claim It Would Be Impregnable in Time of War.

Just Think of Landing Fields High Above the Tallest Skyscrapers and Hangars Down Deep in the Earth!

A GIGANTIC, cork-screw like ramp, running into the skies higher than the tallest buildings, and into the ground deeper than the deepest cellars, where underground terminals, machine shops and offices will be built, may be the next "great step forward" in air transportation!

Fantastic though it may seem, this ultra-modern airport has been conceived by scientific engineers and many insist it is a practical method of bringing air traffic right into the heart of great metropolitan centers, instead of to the distant outskirts, as is the case today.

The plan is much more than a dream; in fact, it is said by some authorities that an underground airport of a newly designed type may be a reality before 1940! The outstanding advantage, of course, is that it will take up no more than a square block, on the surface, so that there will be space for it in any city.

Dr. William Whitney Christmas, famous scientist and airplane designer, has worked out detailed plans for the simpler underground port, while Harvey Wiley Corbett and Francis Keally, noted New York architects, have set them down and Henry Comstock, a New Jersey artist, already has built a scaled model. Dr. Christmas is seen with this model in the photograph at the top of this page.

"This highly organized and comprehensive unit of mail and passenger service," Dr. Christmas said, "will be the inevitable result of the present trend in all parts of the world toward larger and therefore safer air Leviathans which will set new standards of speed and convenience.

"The underground airport, as recommended by Congressman McSwain, of Georgia, chairman of the House Committee of Military Affairs, will fulfill the hopes of federal and military authorities for a nation of impregnable air bases which, in time of war, will serve not only as vital and inviolable centers for the transportation of passengers, munitions and mail, but as strategic points from which to launch a defense."

The surfaces of these great airports will be bowed, to facilitate the take-off of departing planes and to slow up the incoming ones, Dr. Christmas explained. Hidden ramps, flush with the surface, will provide a means of admitting the arriving planes, with their passengers and mail, to the levels below.

Here the passengers will continue to their various destinations by rail or motor, while the mails, contained in metal tubes, will be shot by compressed air through underground tubes to the nearest central post office.

In time of peace, this system of handling mails and passengers would overcome practically all of the present delays and inconveniences of our present arrangements for air travel.

In time of war, and it is almost universally accepted that future wars will be fought in the air, the underground airport will afford the utmost security for our forces, and provide for the swift reception and dispatch of personnel and equipment. Munitions and medical supplies might even be conveyed through the pneumatic mail tubes.

These facts, of course, apply strictly to the newest design by Dr. Christmas who, incidentally, is recognized as the originator of most of the basic features of modern airplane construction. The spiral airport, while it might excel in peace times, would make an excellent target for the enemy in time of war.

Dr. Christmas has no connection with the plans for the spiral landing and take-off plan, but it was believed that his underground plans were used in working out the scheme.

The material difference in the underground structure is that Dr. Christmas' plan calls for the shops and terminals to be close to the earth level, while the spiral ramps will bore deeply into the earth, not alone to give a substantial base for the gigantic "cork-screw," but likewise to give ample room for expansion, without interference from piles and other under-surface structures of large buildings.

It has been suggested that Dr. Christmas' plans might as easily be applied at the greater depth, with the auto roadways, mail tubes and subway lines running out in the same manner. If this were done, the method of landing and taking-off would be the only difference in the two schemes.

The top of the spiral will extend out well over the size of a city block, but where it enters the ground it will be sloped down to keep within those confines. The incoming planes will land on this smooth surface, high in the air, and then taxi until the landing speed is materially cut down. Probably braking devices also will be installed.

When the plane is well under control, the pilot will taxi down the circular ramp to the terminal below ground. Planes leaving the unique airport will taxi up from the buried terminals and without any appreciable running take-off from the top, be catapulted into space, much as fighting planes are dispatched from battleships today.

As everyone knows, the aviation industry has been making rapid strides. Engineers and pilots are constantly devising new power to give higher speed, and records are falling almost every week. Other men in the industry are working on plans for airships which will carry as many as 600 passengers, and still others are working out traffic routes, and conveniences for the handling of passengers and freight.

The spiral ramp idea is not entirely new, inasmuch as it was announced in Paris not long ago that a towering hotel and hospital was being built there, with provisions for launching air battle forces from the heights if and when war clouds again settled over Europe.

In America, too, the idea has been worked out for upper-air garages for automobiles, and for several years ramps have been used in the modern city garages for moving cars to and from the upper floors.

Neither Dr. Christmas nor any of his associates has made any announcement concerning actual construction of his underground airport, but it has been indicated that it will begin in the not distant future.

Plans for the spiral airport have been carefully guarded, and to date, so far as known, no actual models have been constructed. However, from details which leaked out, a staff artist was able to draw the design which appears on this page.

"A gigantic, cork-screw like ramp, running into the skies higher than the tallest buildings, and into the ground deeper than the deepest cellars . . . may be the next 'great step forward' in air transportation."

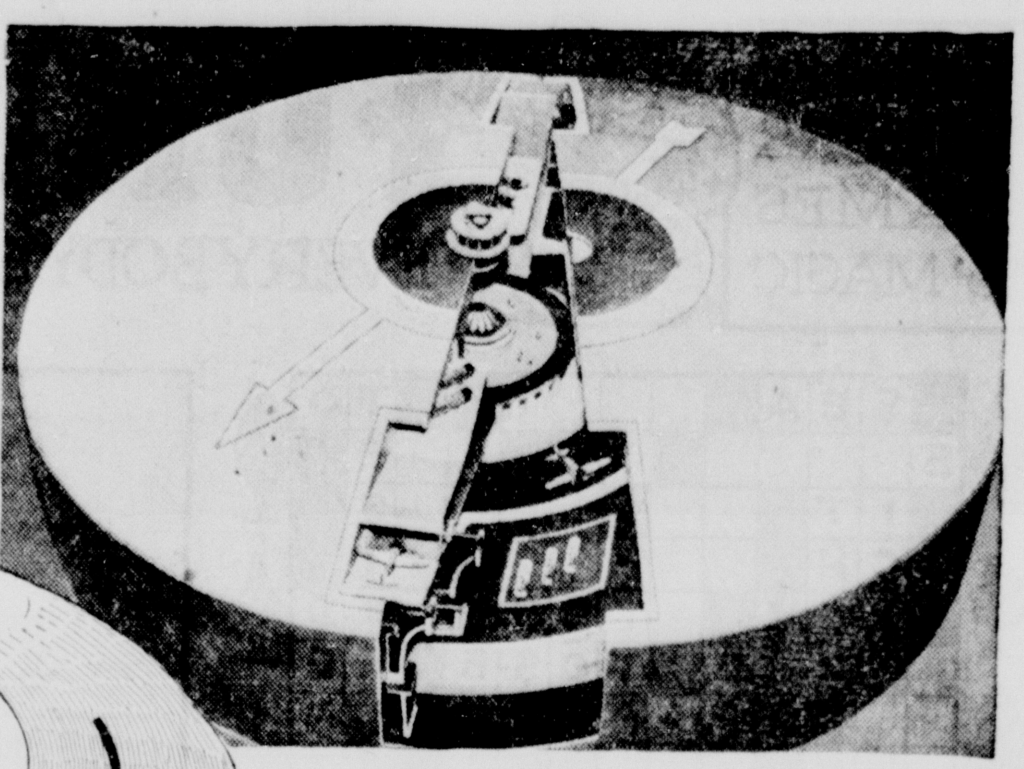
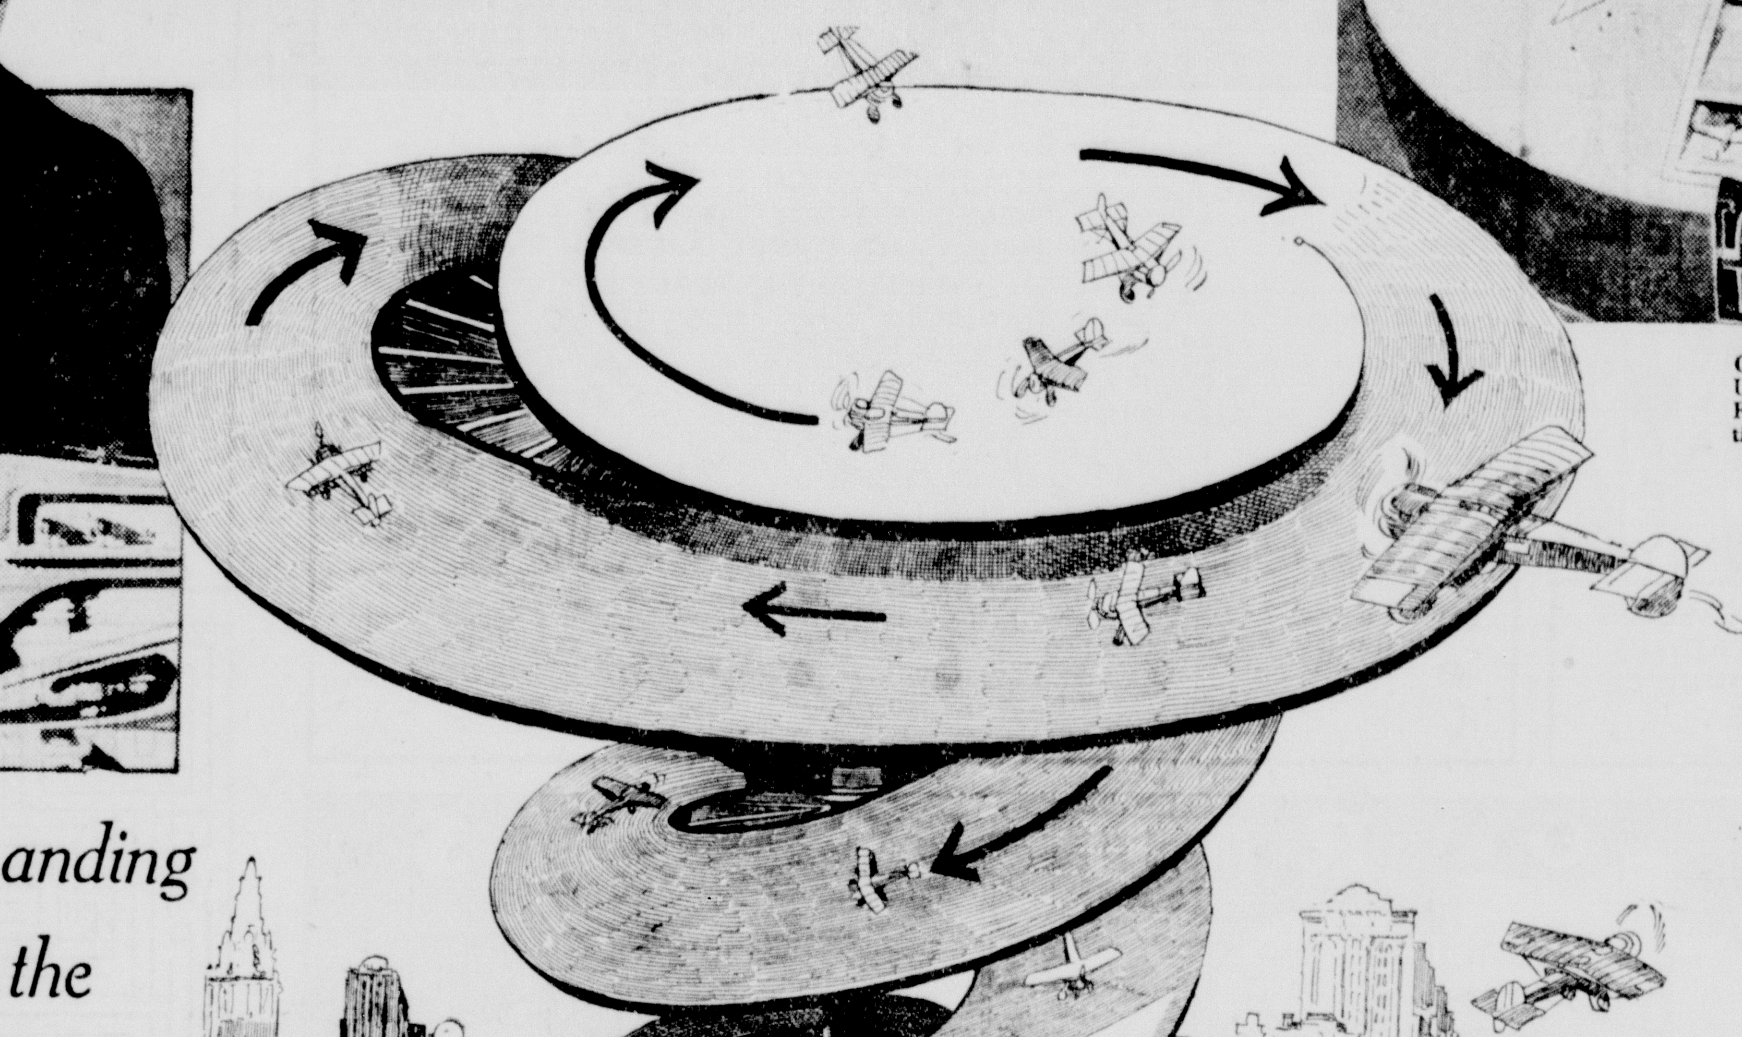
A Spiral Airport to Solve the City's Biggest Airplane Problem

Dr. William Whitney Christmas, Famous Scientist and Airplane Designer, Pictured With a Scaled Model of His New Underground Airport, Which, It Is Claimed, May Revolutionize Air Transportation.



Closeup of the Scaled Model of Dr. Christmas' New Underground Terminal, Showing Inclined Landing Field and Ramps Leading to the Lower Levels. Scientists Claim It Would Be Impregnable in Time of War.



Just Think of Landing Fields High Above the Tallest Skyscrapers and Hangars Down Deep in the Earth!

A GIGANTIC, cork-screw like ramp, running into the skies higher than the tallest buildings, and into the ground deeper than the deepest cellars, where underground terminals, machine shops and offices will be built, may be the next "great step forward" in air transportation!

Fantastic though it may seem, this ultra-modern airport has been conceived by scientific engineers and many insist it is a practical method of bringing air traffic right into the heart of great metropolitan centers, instead of to the distant outskirts, as is the case today.

The plan is much more than a dream; in fact, it is said by some authorities that an underground airport of a newly designed type may be a reality before 1940! The outstanding advantage, of course, is that it will take up no more than a square block, on the surface, so that there will be space for it in any city.

Dr. William Whitney Christmas, famous scientist and airplane designer, has worked out detailed plans for the simpler underground port, while Harvey Wiley Corbett and Francis Keally, noted New York architects, have set them down and Henry Comstock, a New Jersey artist, already has built a scaled model. Dr. Christmas is seen with this model in the photograph at the top of this page.

"This highly organized and comprehensive unit of mail and passenger service," Dr. Christmas said, "will be the inevitable result of the present trend in all parts of the world toward larger and therefore safer air Leviathans which will set new standards of speed and convenience.

"The underground airport, as recommended by Congressman McSwain, of Georgia, chairman of the House Committee of Military Affairs, will fulfill the hopes of federal and military authorities for a nation of impregnable air bases which, in time of war, will serve not only as vital and inviolable centers for the transportation of passengers, munitions and mail, but as strategic points from which to launch a defense."

The surfaces of these great airports will be bowed, to facilitate the take-off of departing planes and to slow up the incoming ones, Dr. Christmas explained. Hidden ramps, flush with the surface, will provide a means of admitting the arriving planes, with their passengers and mail, to the levels below.

Here the passengers will continue to their various destinations by rail or motor, while the mails, contained in metal tubes, will be shot by compressed air through underground tubes to the nearest central post office.

In time of peace, this system of handling mails and passengers would overcome practically all of the present delays and inconveniences of our present arrangements for air travel.

In time of war, and it is almost universally accepted that future wars will be fought in the air, the underground airport will afford the utmost security for our forces, and provide for the swift reception and dispatch of personnel and equipment. Munitions and medical supplies might even be conveyed through the pneumatic mail tubes.

These facts, of course, apply strictly to the newest design by Dr. Christmas who, incidentally, is recognized as the originator of most of the basic features of modern airplane construction. The spiral airport, while it might excel in peace times, would make an excellent target for the enemy in time of war.

Dr. Christmas has no connection with the plans for the spiral landing and take-off plan, but it was believed that his underground plans were used in working out the scheme.

The material difference in the underground structure is that Dr. Christmas' plan calls for the shops and terminals to be close to the earth level, while the spiral ramps will bore deeply into the earth, not alone to give a substantial base for the gigantic "cork-screw," but likewise to give ample room for expansion, without interference from piles and other under-surface structures of large buildings.

It has been suggested that Dr. Christmas' plans might as easily be applied at the greater depth, with the auto roadways, mail tubes and subway lines running out in the same manner. If this were done, the method of landing and taking-off would be the only difference in the two schemes.

The top of the spiral will extend out well over the size of a city block, but where it enters the ground it will be sloped down to keep within those confines. The incoming planes will land on this smooth surface, high in the air, and then taxi until the landing speed is materially cut down. Probably braking devices also will be installed.

When the plane is well under control, the pilot will taxi down the circular ramp to the terminal below ground. Planes leaving the unique airport will taxi up from the buried terminals and without any appreciable running take-off from the top, be catapulted into space, much as fighting planes are dispatched from battleships today.

As everyone knows, the aviation industry has been making rapid strides. Engineers and pilots are constantly devising new power to give higher speed, and records are falling almost every week. DICK TRACY
CHESTER GOULD
BUT I TELL YOU IT'S SO! THE DETECTIVE HAS MOVED THE KID AND HIS MOTHER TO A NEW HIDEAWAY - THE CLYDEMON HOTEL.
WHISPER
HOW DO YOU KNOW THAT?
BORIS' SISTER IN DISGUISE
STILL POSING SUCCESSFULLY AS BORIS ARSON'S LAWYER, ZORA ARSON-THE CRIMINAL'S SISTER, PAYS ANOTHER VISIT TO HER BROTHER AT POLICE HEADQUARTERS. . .
YOU SEE AS THEY WERE TAKING ME TO THE SHOW-UP ROOM YESTERDAY I PASSED THAT KID, JUNIOR TRACY AND THE CHIEF IN THE HALL! I OVERHEARD THE KID TELL THE CHIEF THAT TRACY WAS MOVING THEM TO THE CLYDEMON.
GET IT.
AT THIS VERY INSTANT THREE PEOPLE ARE ENTERING THE "CLYDEMON" HOTEL. .
HOTEL
WELL, HERE ARE YOUR ROOMS -YOU CAN REMOVE YOUR DISGUISES NOW.
THANK GOODNESS FOR THAT! NOW TO GET OUT OF THIS DAME'S OUTFIT- AND TAKE "OSCAR" OUT OF HIS GRIP.
I'M SURE YOU TWO WILL BE SAFE HERE, MARY, UNTIL I CAN RUN DOWN THIS MURDERER WHO'S TRYING TO TAKE YOUR LIFE. REMEMBER, NEITHER OF YOU LEAVE THESE ROOMS- ANYTHING YOU WANT WILL BE SENT YOU-AND I SHALL CALL YOU OVER THE TELEPHONE EVERY TWO HOURS.
AS TRACY LEAVES THE HOTEL- ANOTHER FIGURE ENTERS. . . . . UNNOTICED BY THE DETECTIVE.
HOTEL CLYDE
SINGLE ROOM WITH A SHOWER, PLEASE. HM-M. . YOU HAVE QUITE A LIST OF NEW GUESTS TODAY.
YES- BUSINESS IS ALWAYS GOOD WITH US, SIR. SERVICE IS OUR MOTTO.
ZORA ARSON
FIVE MINUTES LATER IN HER ROOM. . . .
HA! THE REGISTER SHOWED A "MARY JONES AND DAUGHTER". THAT MUST BE THEM-ROOM 617- THE NAME IS A PHONEY, AND THEY WERE PROBABLY IN DISGUISE ANYWAY. WELL, I'LL WAIT AWHILE.
TWO HOURS LATER-MIDNIGHT!
617
-AND THEN. . . .
TAKE THAT, YOU KILLER! MOTHER, LOOK OUT!
HELLO- THE CLYDEMON? -ROOM 617, PLEASE.
I'LL RIDE HOME WITH YOU- JUST AS SOON AS I CALL JUNIOR AND HIS MOTHER, CHIEF. I TOLD 'EM I'D CHECK UP EVERY TWO HOURS TO SEE THAT THEY WERE OKAY.
